"I believe Realty and Mines is one of the best real estate and mining speculations in Canada, and if the shares were removed from listing I am satisfied that we call sell treasury shares at a price that will net the treasury sufficient capital to take care of its purchase obligations and also furnish the money required for development.

"This is of utmost importance in the interest of all shareholders. I believe all the capital required can be raised in the United States and I now have a tentative selling contract with a New York sales organization that I am confident can sell treasury shares if they are removed from trading."

Copper Reported

It is reported that at lower levels Barry-Hollinger ore contains larger quantities of copper and that this will necessitate the installation of a concentrator to handle the ore successfully. Possibly, this is one explanation for the break that occurred in the stock in recent days.

(Unofficial Opinions on the Markets

MONTREAL, Aug. 2.—Month end money requirements in New York resulted in a tightening of the rate for call funds, money advancing to 8 per cent. Due to the fact that this was, more or less, expected, prices did not suffer any severe recessions, although the majority of stocks in New York eased off.

On the local board prices were also easier, with the "paper" stocks showing the greatest losses. Dryden, which is listed on the Curb market, sold down as low as 29, as against an opening figure of 37½. The stock, however rallied to 34¼. Abitibi, Port Alfred, Wayagamack, Price Bros. and Canada Power were other issues to decline.

With reference to the exceptional weakness in Dryden, the "Street" has it that a number of brokers have sent out letters to their clients that are carrying Dryden informing them that it is very difficult to raise money on the stock, the banks refusing tto take it as collateral. This naturally must have brought in considerable urgent selling in a market thtat was bare of buyers—the result being a very severe decline.

Advices from New York have it that Abitibi Power and Paper issues were under pressure, due largely to selling from Montreal. Rapid expansion over the last year or so in the paper industry is known to have affected earnings of paper companies adversely. Abitibi Power and Paper Company has suffered with the others and there seems to be no relief in sight at present. These conditions have caused rumors of passing of the common dividend of $4 annually on Abitibi common, but no official comment is obtainable. The last regular quarterly dividend was declared June 14th. There has been no recent curtailment in operations of Abitibi.

Considerable interest was aroused by new lows in Abitibi Power stocks, particularly the preferred, which was only offered for subscription a few weeks ago. Up to a short time ago, Abitibi was most difficult to borrow in all Street and short sellers were penalized by being run in from time to time, which resulted in an advance to 85 for the common. As a result of this squeezing of the shorts, the technical position was weakened and there was no buying when offerings came in increasing volume.

However, it is felt by the majority in the "Street" that the decline has been more drastic than is warranted by present conditions and that the company's financial position will enable it to weather any storm much better than most of the other newsprint producers. The conservative policies of the management of both the Abitibi Power & Paper Company and the Spanish River Pulp & Paper Mills in the past will now stand the company in good stead.

The manner in which Hollinger has suffered in the present market decline can be seen from the following. At the highest price last year the value of the mine was set at some $110,000,000, and at the lowest at about $80,000,000. At current prices a valuation of around $50,000,000 is placed on the property. Present prices reign between $10.50 and $11.50 and are the lowest since 1922. In 1923, the low point for the year was $11.00 in 1924 it was $11.40, in 1925 it was $13.30 and in 1926 it was $17.15. In 1922 the stock sold at a low of $7.74 and in 1921 at $5.55.

Mine Trading Dull; Noranda Moves Higher

TORONTO, Aug. 2. — (Canadian Press).—With the exception of the more common issues, trading was weak and uninteresting at the forenoon session of the Standard Mining Exchange to-day. Noranda drew a certain amount of attention when it made a rather sensational gain of $1.15. It opened at $56.40, gradually climbd to a high of 59.00 then slumped to $56.40, but rallied again to 57.55, at which figure it closed. Amulet was seven points higher today at $40.10. Goodfish 4⅝ at 50¼. Howey Gold 1¾ at 100, Malartic five at $1.25, Sherritt Gordon three at 6.68, Teck Hughes, 12 at $0.42, and Sudbury Basin 45 at $8.35. Treadwell suffered the heaviest loss of $1.25. Hollinger was off 11 at $9.99, while Bidgood and Laval Quebec were each a point lower. Bidgood at 56 and Laval at 14. Big Missouri was up 5½ at 58⅝ in the Western issues, and Central Manitobe advanced two at 87

Featureless Session On Toronto Market

TORONTO, Aug. 2. — (Canadian Press).—The morning trading at the Toronto Stock Exchange today was dull and featureless. Prices remained mostly steady, with a few fractional changes registered. International Nickel failed to retain its prominence to-day, when with a very light turnover it lost one point to sell at 97. Bell Telephone, Brazillian Light and Power, and Loblaw were off one point each at 160,53¼ and 85 respectively. British American Oil advances ½, closing at 38½, while Hiram alkers, selling at 55½, was lower by ¾.

Operators For Advance Fail To Start Rally

NEW YORK, Aug. 2. — (Canadian Press.) — Reactionary price movements in to-day's stock market reflected the growing uneasiness over the credit situation. Operators for the advance endeavored to bring about a resumption of the advance by bidding up a selected list of oil, public utilities, food and merchandising shares, but they encountered heavy offerings on all the rallies. Trading showed a tendency to turn dull on the decline, indicating the absence of any extensive forced liquidation. Call money renewed at seven per cent. and appeared to be in plentiful supply at that figure. Fears of a large increase in brokers' loans after the close of the market, coupled with the New ork FFederal Reserve Bank's reference to the overloaded position in its monthly credit review, tended to dampen bullish enthusiasm. Special buying of oil shares was based on the publication of an unusually favorable earnings report by the Atlantic Refining Company, by the improved statistical position of the industry and recent gasoline price advances, the lates being put into effect by the Standard Oil Company of Kentucky. Atlantic refining soared more than six points to a new peak at 163, on talk of a four one stock split up, and Houston moved up three and a half points before selling pressure became effective against that group.

Wheat and Corn Gain; Commission Houses Buying

CHICAGO, August 2 (Canadian Press). — Sharp fresh upturns in the price of corn resulted early to-day from scantiness of offerings and from active demands. Commission houses were buyers of corn and there was much switching on the part of previous speculative sellers. Opening ¾ to 3 cents higher, the latter for the September delivery, corn afterward scored additional gains. Wheat and oats were also firmer, with wheat starting ⅛ to ¾ cent up and subsequently showing a further advance.

GOVERNOR ENDS PARK HOLIDAY

Viscount and Lady Willingdon Left Last Night For East.

WILL SAIL DOWN LAKES.

JASPER PARK, Alta., Aug. 2 (Special to The Examiner).—Putting behind them with regret nine days of pleasure at Jasper Park Lodge, Their Excellencies the Governor General and Lady Willingdon left here at ten o'clock last night for the East. They will spend Friday afternoon at Minaki, and will not make any other break in their journey until they reach Port Arthur, from where they will sail on the Hamonic on Saturday on their way to Sarnia, Ottawa, and Montreal.

On Tuesday, Lady Willingdon rode into the famed Tonquin Valley and set up a record for fast trail record. The party covered twenty-three miles in ten and one-half hours. With her rode Lord Hardinge, R. P. Knight, Superintendent of Jasper Park, and his two daughters, Miss Kathleen Burrows, daughter of the Lieutenant-Governor of Manitoba; James Thornton, son of Sir Henry Thornton; Capt. Frere and Sergeant Paton of the R.C.M.P.; Richard Langford, Supervising Warden of the Park, and Wardens Bryant and Davis.

The party went in motor cars from Jasper Lodge to the Portal Creek Bridge on the Edith Cavell Highway, where the horses were waiting. They rode via Portal Creek and Macaris Creek across the Macaris Divide and had luncheon at Warden Goodyear's cabin. Pushing on down Meadow Creek they rode to Geikie in the Miette Valley and down the old Canadian Northern grade three miles, where they were picked up by automobiles. In all 23 miles were covered on horseback. Lady Willingdon, who shows every time she comes to Jasper that she is an ardent horsewoman, was delighted both with the magnificent scenery and with the ride itself.

The Governor-General himself had a day's riding during the present stay, when he went up Signal Mountain with Her Excellency and a party, but he gave most of his time to golf. He and James Kimmer, the Jasper professional, in partnership, defeated Captain Mieville and Capt. Jarvis on several occasions. Lady Willingdon also played an exceptionally good game of golf. A very restful, comfortable and enjoyable holiday was the way Their Excellencies expressed their stay at Jasper in saying good-bye to John Gerian, manager of the lodge.

VISITORS WIN MIXED EVENT

Dr. Allen, of Warkworth, Skips Leading Rink at Local Greens.

F. WISE SECOND.

The mixed tournament held on the bowling green on Wednesday afternoon was a decided success with fourteen rinks entered. Two rinks from Warkwork were present and one from All Saints Bowling Club and the rest were from the Peterborough club. The weather was all that could be desired, the greens were in fine condition and some very close games were played, the last bowl often deciding the winner.

Dr. Allen's rink of Warkworth composed of Dr. Allen (skip), Mrs. Smale (vice), Mr. Anderson, (second) and Mrs. Mowat, lead, won the first prize with three wins and a plus of 23. The prizes were rain coats for the ladies and silver tree platters for the men. These were presented by J. Sedgwick, president of the club, who in a few well chosen remarks congratulated the Warkworth rink on its success. Dr. Allen replied on behalf of his rink expressing their pleasure in such an enjoyable afternoon's sport. The second prize was won by a local rink, composed of F. Wise skip, Mrs. H. Miller vice, J. Bacon second and Mrs. H. Staunton, lead) with three wins and a plus of 18 points.

The prizes consisted of silver serving trays for the ladies and sweater coats for the men, were presented by H. Martin, vice president of the club. Mr. Wise expressed thanks on behalf of his rink.

The following is the personnel of the rinks and their scorers:—

Wedding Bells

BROWN—STENTON

A very pretty wedding took place on Wednesday, August 1, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stenton, 68 Sophia street, when their second daughter, Ada Fern Etta, was united in matrimony to Gordon H. Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Brown of Peterborough.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of orchid georgette crepe with picture hat to match and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Eva Brown, sister of the groom, wore a frock of peach georgette crepe with hat to match and carried a bouquet of roses. The groom was assisted by Mr. Joseph Stenton, brother of the bride. Lohengrin's wedding march was played by Miss Marjorie DanFleet. The bride gave her bouquet to her grandmother who was present at the ceremony.

Many beautiful presents received by the young couple, testified to the high esteem in which they were held. On their return from a motor trip to western points, the young couple will reside in Peterborough.

WILTSHIRE—WYATT

A quiet wedding was solemnized at St. Mark's Church, Toronto, on July 30, by the Rev. Walter White, former Rector of St. Luke's Church, when Olive May Wyatt became the bride of William Wiltshire, both of Peterborough. On their return they will reside in the city.

OBITUARY

MARGARET CHEEL.

The death took place in Nicholls Hospital, on Wednesday, August 1, of Margaret Cheel, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Cheel, of 215 Murray Street, City. This morning, August 2, at 11 o'clock, the funeral took place from Comstock's funeral home to Little Lake Cemetery, Ensign Green of the Salvation Army conducting the services.

MRS. JOSHUA ALLEN

On Wednesday, August 1, there passed away in the City of Peterborough, Martha Jane Tighe, wife of Joshua Allen, who resides at Lot 12, Concession 6, Asphodel. The late Mrs. Allen was born in Dummer Township some sixty-eight years ago and her lifetime was one of great usefulness.

The funeral will take place on August 4, from Comstock's Funeral Home, at 2 p.m., the Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe of Murray Street Baptist Church, conducting the services. Interment will be in Little Lake Cemetery.

JESSE WHITNEY.

(Examiner Correspondence).

HAVELOCK, Aug. 2.—The funeral takes place this afternoon of Jesse Whitney, whose death occurred on Sunday evening. The service at the residence of his son, Leslie Whitney, George Street, will be in charge of Rev. W. R. Archer. Interment in the Maple Grove Cemetery.

The deceased, who was in his 66th year, was born near Brighton, but was well-known in this district, having lived at Oak Lake for ten years. From there he moved to Anstruther, where he resided eleven years, going from there to Schumacher. He was stricken with a stroke in September last while on a visit to Smith Falls, and has been in failing health since then.

Besides his widow, he leaves to mourn his loss five daughters: Mrs. W. Gourlay of Toronto, Mrs. H. Mackie and Mrs. W. Spooner of Schumacher, Mrs. A. Sweet of Timmins, and Mrs. W. Althouse of Smith Falls; four sons: Ray of Schumacher and Leslie, Arnold and Earl of Havelock; three brothers: Norris of Belmont, Henry of Lang and Willard of Tory Hill.

MRS. W. G. RUSSELL

MILLBROOK, Aug. 2 (Examiner Correspondence).—The death of Mrs. W. G. Russell, which occurred with startling suddenness on Sunday, July 29, removes one of the oldest and most highly-respected residents of this community.

Deceased, whose maiden name was Margaret Ann Dudley, was a daughter of the late John and Margaret Dudley, pioneer settlers of this section of the province, and was born in Cornwall, Glengarry County, eighty-seven years ago; her parents removing to Millbrook in her early girlhood, she spent practically her entire life here.

In 1861, Miss Dudley became the bride of William G. Russell, who predeceased her by twelve years. The home to which she went shortly after becoming a bride is now over one hundred years old, and is a finely-preserved and comfortable homestead. In this home she raised her family, showing always that spirit of warm-hearted hospitality which was a marked trait of her character, and spent a peaceable life as a good wife, a loving mother and sister, and won the respect and affection of a wide circle of friends, as her sterling worth and the many fine qualities of her disposition became generally known.

Mrs. Russell had been in her usual good health during Saturday, but passed peacefully away in sleep on Sunday night last, her death leaving Granville Russell Burton, of Louisville, Kentucky, the sole survivor of a large and interesting family of fourteen children, seven boys and seven girls, all of whom were married except two who passed away in early life.

The immediate surviving relatives, besides the brother already mentioned are three sons: Messrs. W. E. and Herbert Russel of Millbrook, and Dr. Alfred of Bailieboro; one daughter, Edith (Mrs. Charles Winslow), died in July, 1920; two sons, Freddie and Bertie, passed away in boyhood. There are six grandchildren.

The funeral, which was largely attended, took place on Tuesday, from her late residence, King street, the service being in charge of Rev. Canon Allen, assisted by Rev. P. C. Howard, and Rev. Joseph Wilks. The rector spoke from the words, "I dwell among mine own people," emphasizing Mrs. Russell's love for her home, and her home community; her delight in keeping her family about her, and her devotion to things spiritual, the daily study of God's Word being a feature that characterized her life.

The pall-bearers were all relatives and included: Messrs. William Kennedy of Allandale; George McLaughlin of Allandale; John McLaughlin of Cartwright; Grant Richardson of Peterborough; W. W. Kennedy and Austin Sutton of Millbrook, and Rev. Edgar Russell of South Monaghan. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, giving tangible expression to love and esteem on the part of relatives and friends. Interment was beside her husband in the family burial plot at Gardiner's cemetery.

Among those from outside points who attended the funeral were: Granville Russell Burton, of Louisville, Kentucky; Mr. and Mrs. Grant Richardson of Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. Sherder of Peterborough, and Mr. McLaughlin of Cobourg.

MAYOR REPAIRING ROOF OF BUILDING

Is Having New Shingles Put On Water Street Property.

Mayor Roland Denne is renovating his Water street building. New shingles, of the fire proof asbestos type, are being laid on the front of the building at the third story. A new roof is also being laid and Mr. Denne states he is intending to make a real job out of it.

The sidewalk in front is covered with shingles and mortar. The mortar he explained, was used in the old days to hold the shingles in place but these now are giving away to the more modern colorful shingle which is being used on his property.

WELLAND CANAL TAKES THREE MORE LIVES

COURTNEY PICKED UP IN MID-ATLANTIC

Steamship Locates Plane

British Flier Was Attempting Flight From Azores to Newfoundland.

PLANE HAD DRIFTED.

Believed at First That Ocean Had Claimed Another Victim.

NEW YORK, August 3 (Canadian Press). — Drifting helplessly in mid-ocean, their radio sputtering occasional messages to guide searching ships, Captain Frank T. Courtney and his three flying companions were located by the steamer Minnewaska yesterday in the flying boat in which they had attempted a flight from the Azores to Newfoundland.

A wireless message from the liner at 4 p.m. announced that another tragedy of the air and ocean had been averted. The sturdy plane had been located 605 miles north-west of Horta, where it took off, and about 766 miles south-east of Cape Race.

It was drifting 275 miles north-west of the point where the Italian flier De Pinedo was picked up last summer after a forced landing en route from Newfoundland to the Azores.

Plane Had Drifted.

When the flying boat, which had taken off from the Azores for Newfoundland late on Wednesday, was forced down, Courtney sent out a radio distress call giving his position at 42 north, 41 west. A dozen ocean liners turned from their courses to race to the rescue, but when the first of them arrived at the position given the Courtney plane could not be found.

Hours of silence from the distressed plane after its landing led to the general fear that the radio had gone out of commission after its one cry for help. But the steamer Achatina got in direct communication with the plane again just before noon, and was given the new position of 42.30 north, 39.40 west. This indicated that the plane had drifted steadily tol the north-west since its landing and was almost 100 miles from its first position.

The second message from Courtney dispelled fears aroused by failure of rescue steamers to find him at the landing position given and by silence of his radio and caused general confidence that the British flier would be able to direct the searching steamers to her rescue.

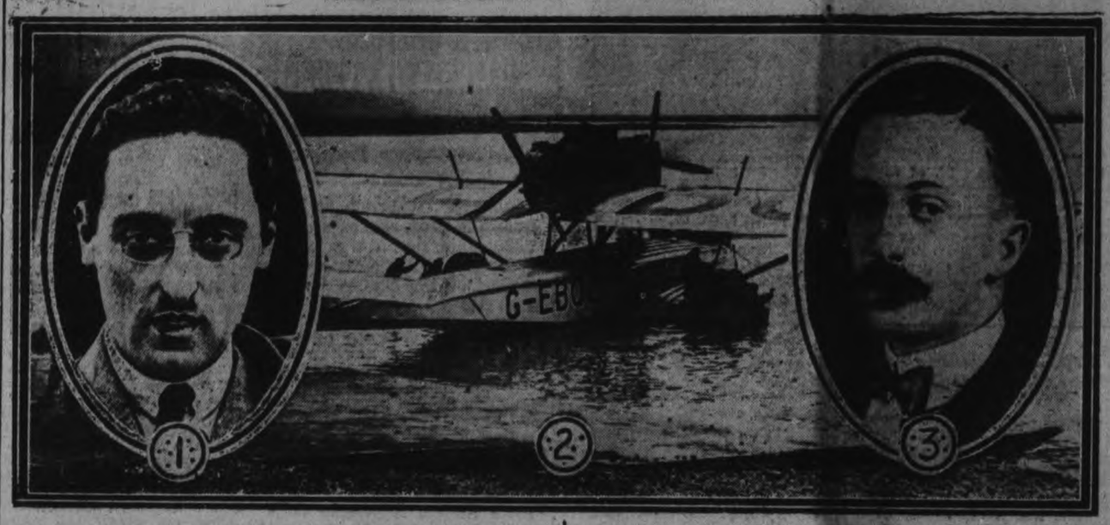
Plane Caught Fire.

LONDON, Aug. 3. — (Canadan Press.)—In a message to his wife here from the liner Minnewaska, Frank Courtney, British flyer, who was forced down yesterday in the Atlantic Ocean and rescued by a liner, stated his forced landing was caused by a fire in the seaplane. The plane was abandoned to the sea.

United States had a population of 75,000,000 before the foreign trade was equal to that of Canada to-day.

YOUTH DROWNED AT BURLEIGH

RESCUED BY CREW OF PASSING STEAMER.



The crew has been taken off "The Whale," the all-metal Dornier-Napier monoplane piloted by Capt. Frank T. Courtney, British aviator, which started a trans-Atlantic flight from London to New York, about a month ago, and has been delayed at the Azores. "The Whale" started onward from the Azores to Halifax and was forced down 720 miles north-west of the Azores. "The Whale" carried four passengers, including Elwood B. Hosmer, Montreal stock broker. No. 1 picture shows Courtney; No. 2, the plane; No. 3, Hosmer.

SLIPS OFF ROCK INTO DEEP WATER BELOW SECOND FALL

BODY RECOVERED.

Had Gone To Search For Parent Who Was in One of Cottages.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, Aug. 3. — Walter Stevenson, a sixteen year old Toronto boy, met death by drowning on Thursday at noon at Burleigh Falls, where he was an employee of the Park Hotel.

Young Stevenson and his mother, who is also engaged at the hotel, are spending the summer at the lakes, the boy being a clerk in the store connected with the hotel. At noon on Thursday he went to get his mother, who was in one of the cottages and below the second fall near the islet he slipped off a big rock into twenty feet of water and was drowned. Apparently he could not swim. He was missed instantly and an effort was made to rescue him, but without avail. Grappling irons were used and his body recovered in a few minutes and Dr. Fraser, of Lakefield, was sent for, but when he arrived life was extinct. The body is being shipped to Toronto for burial.

DISAPPOINTED IN LOVE, WOMAN BURNS HERSELF

NEW YORK, Aug. 1 (Canadian Press).—Apparently disappointed in love, Miss Louisa Amelia de Hostos, 38, who came to New York from Porto Rica to seek a career as an author, soaked her clothes with turpentine and set herself afire in her apartment here to-day. She died in hospital.

H.E.P.C. WANTS RATE INCREASED

Recommends Higher Service Charge For Three Wire Domestic Current.

66 CENTS SUGGESTED.

A recommendation has been made to the Peterborough Utilities Comisionfrom the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario that the service charge on all houses where three wires are required be increased from 33 cents to 66 cents gross per month. At present the same charge has been made for the two wire domestic rate as for the three wire rate, but the Ontario body feels that in the case of the three wires more electricity is being used, especially for heating purposes and hence there is greater use being made of the meter. The street wiring is also heavier, as more electricity has to be supplied where there are many homes using the three wire service. In this city about 800 homes will be affected if the local body puts into effect then ew charge.

No action so far has been taken by the Commiasion and from fairly reliable sources it might be expected that the local body will fight the raise. An analysis was recently made by the H.E.P.C. and this recommendation was in the report. A schedule of rates was also forwarded to to the commission but on a close check up by Manager R. Dobbin it was found to be the same as the rates now charged.

POLISH FLIERS OVER ATLANTIC

Two Airmen Hope To Make First Non-Stop Flight To New York.

STARTED FROM PARIS.

LE BOURGET, France, Aug. 3 (Canadian Press). — Two Polish knights of the air sped westward with dawn to-day hoping to make the first non-stop East to West flight to New York from France.

The fliers, Majors Louis Idzikowski and Kazimir Kabala, of the Polish Air Service, hopped off at 5.46 a.m. Paris time (11.46 p.m. Thursday eastern standard time) in their plane chistened Marshal Pilsudski in honor of the Polish dictator.

They should have passed over L'Orient, France, at 9 a.m., but nothing had been seen of them up to noon. Weather condition did not favor observation, however, as it was stormy and hazy, with rain making visibility poor.

The fliers took off aaginst the advice of the French Weather Service, but were confident in the word from ehe United States that they would run into good conditions on that side oi the Atlantic. They expected to and at New York on Saturday afternoon after a flight of from 3,800 to 4,000 miles, depending on the route followed. A strong north-easterly breeze wafted them on their course, which led south-west over the Azores. They carry no radio.

Sighted Off Coast

L'ORIENT, France, Aug. 3 (Canadian Press).—Headed through heavy clouds and mist, the Polish trans-Atlantic plane, Marshal Pilsudski, which took off from Le Bourget early this morning for New York, was believed well out to sea on her long flight today. Three hours and twenty-four minutes after the take-off the fliers were reported sighted by the French trawler Pinguoin, 60 miles off the French coast.

Workmen Die From Hurts

Two Men Hurt in Gate Crash and One Previously Injured Succumb.

SECOND ACCIDENT.

Man Nearly Killed To-day at Fatal Lock Six—Buried By Coal.

ST. CATHARINES, Aug. 3.—(Canadian Press).—The death toll in the Welland Canal disaster increased to ten to-day with the deaths of Alex Wilson of this city and Leo Dion, of Sherbrooke, Que. Wilson, who had a fine war record, serving in the submarine chaser H.M.S. Golden Strand, succumbed early to-day, but Dion lived until about noon, though his recovery had been known to be hopeless. All the remaining eleven men injured are expected to recover.

At the same time the list of individual fatalities mounted with the death of James Sawchuk, who was crushed at Port Weller, July 1 when the tractor he was driving overturned. He was born in Manitoba.

Wilson is said to have lost his chance of escape by taking time to warn his men of the danger and was caught in the avalanche of steel debris which accompanied the fall of the big leaf.

Messages of sympathy have been received from both Viscount Willingdon and Premier Mackenzie King.

Deputy Chief Engineer Sherwood of the Federal Department of Railways and Canals returned to Ottawa last night after investigating the cause of the accident.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Aug. 3 (Special to The Examiner).—Just twenty-seven hours after the falling of the north lock gate at Lock 6 on the Welland Ship Canal, Frank Secord, car knocker, had a narrow escape when he was buried beneath twenty tons of coal at the south end of the same lock.

The accident happened while the final cleaning up of debris was taking place at the scene of yesterday's accident, and at a time when a large crowd of passing tourists where viewing the operations. The injured man was pursuing his job as car knocker, whose duty is to keep the cars in working order. He was called when one of the coal cars refused to open at the bottom for dumping, and when he put on the first pressure it unloaded immediately, knocking him to the floor and burying him beneath a rain of coal.

He was picked up by a fellow workman, who rushed him to the First Aid station, from here he was taken to the Construction Hospital for treatment. Here it was found he had a dangerous cut over the right eye, and was badly shaken up and bruised. After a short rest he was taken to his home.

HAS PNEUMONIA.

LONDON, Aug. 3 (Canadian Press). —Sir Austen Chamberlain, who was announced on Wednesday to be confined to his home with a chill, is suffering from a mild attack of bronchopneumonia, it was stated to-day. He is progressing satisfactorily, his physicians say, and his condition gives no cause for anxiety.

EARLY HISTORY TOLD KIWANIANS

REV. P. COSTELLO SPEAKS.

It may have been a warm day— in fact so warm that the head table raised no objection whatever when many of the members took off their coats at the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis club, held in the Empress Hotel to-day, but when an address is so deeply interesting as was that delivered by the Rev. Father Paul Costello, to-day, the relative humidity becomes relatively unimportant. The romance of history is an absorbing study, when it is presented as the reverend gentleman presented the story of Fort Ste. Marie, and events leading up to its erection by the Jesuit Missionaries.

Introduced to the club by President Joe John, Father Costello, a member of the Peterborough Rotary Club, expressed his appreciation of the large attendance of Kiwanians at the St. Peter's Garden party a week or so ago and paid a compliment to the club on the splendid community work that it has been carrying on. Turning to his address proper, he proceeded to give a graphic account of the explorations Samuel De Champlain, the work of the Jesuit order which followed, and the building of Fort Ste. Marie—a safety measure taken by the missionaries against the invading Iroquois Indians.

The speaker traced Champlain's travels in New France when he came in 1603 and travelled as far as the Lachine rapids, encountering the Montagnais tribe of Indians. On his second visit n 1609 he took a different route and discovered the lake

Leads Police Merry Chase Over Fields Before Yielding

WOODSTOCK, Aug. 3.—Willie Watson, a Detroit sailor boy, gave the local and provincial police a merry chase yesterday afternoon before he threw up his hands and shouted "I give in" The "give in" was only uttered after a number of shots had been fired over Willie's head.

Young Watson landed in the city some time on Wednesday after having spent several days and nights along the highways. He was given accommodation at a South Side home, and when he left a big revolver and a number of shells were also missing. The police were notified and the chase was on for the sailor boy.

Out over the farm lands Willie traveled with several police hot on his trail. Finally he was located in a swamp some miles from the city. The chasing squad of officers felt they needed reinforcement and a hurry up call was sent to the Woodstock chief, who responded by sending out some of his night staff. The sailor boy was located, and after a close in, several shots were fired before the fugitive decided he had enough and came out holding up his hands and calling enough

The police say he carried the ugly gun when arrested. He was taken to the cells, and a charge of vagrancy entered against him.

YOUNG WORKER SUCCUMBS TO SEVERE WOUND

LOST MUCH BLOOD.

Taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, where amputation of his right leg was found necessary as a result of his having fallen under a coal car early Wednesday morning, David Carol Butcher, of 315 Burnham street, passed away late yesterday, despite the best efforts of medical men, including Dr. Hewett, who had given a quart of his own blood to the dying man.

Butcher, who was but twenty-four years of age, had lived here his entire life-time and was known to a wide circle of acquaintances as a young man of many fine qualities. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Butcher, mourn his loss together with two brothers, Armour of Buffalo, and Lyle of Napanee, and a sister, Mrs. Ernest Croft of Peterborough.

The funeral (private) will take place at 3 p.m. on August 4, from 315 Burnham street, to Little Lake Cemetery, the Rev. Mr. Bousfield of St. Luke's Church conducting the services.

IN POLICE COURT

A local man pleaded guilty to being intoxicated in a public place, and was fined $15.00, and $4.50 costs.

The boy who stole the car in Young's Point on Saturday night to go and see his girl at Crowe's Landing, pleaded guilty this morning, and was fined $50.00, and costs, amounting in all to $61.25. Alex. Elliott appeared for the accused.

KING IS BURNED.

King Boris Bulgaria

SOPHIA, Bulgaria, Aug. 3.—(Canadian Press).—King Boris was burned on the forehead and hands when personally fighting the flames in a series of forest fires which have been ravaging the Shamkorye district. His injuries are not regarded as serious.

NO DWELLINGS IN QUARANTINE

City Entirely Free From Contagious Diseases at Present.

TWO RECENTLY TAKEN DOWN

So far as contagious diseases are concerned the city of Peterborough now boasts a clean bill of health, according to Charles Stapleton, Sanitary Inspector of the city. Mr. Stapleton this morning explained that the single case of whooping cough and the case of diphtheria had been disposed of and at the present time there is not a placard to be found posted in any part of Peterborough.

ADVANCE PARTY PREPARES CAMP

Peterborough Machine Gunners Go Under Canvas To-night at Seven.

CAMP ROUTINE.

While the Peterborough Machine Gun Company does not go under canvas officially until to-night, camp activities started early this morning when an advance party set up tents and other paraphernalia in preparation for three days' training. The advance party included Major H. Dodds, Lieutenant J. R. Heron, C.-Q.-S. A. Nichols, Sergeant Cook McKay, Gunners Hope, Barry, Davidson, Blackwell, Ridyard, Taylor, and Cullen.

Details of the camp routine have been arranged by Major Dodds, and indications are that a beneficial training period will be enjoyed. Part 1 Orders posted to-day instruct the main body of the company to parade at the Armouries to-night at 7 o'clock to proceed to camp. The following officers are detailed for special duties as indicated: Captain J. A. Dewart, M.C., in charge of machine gun firing; Lieutenant James Turnbull, in charge of musketry; Lieutenant S. M. Ward, in charge of sports; Lieutenant J. R. Heron, in charge of signals and field phones; Lieutenant H. J. Devey, in charge of limber and pack drill.

Part 2 Orders to-day announce the taking on strength of J. McKay and his promotion to Sergeant Cook.

Standing Orders.

Every precaution is being taken to prevent accident and sickness during the camp, and standing orders include instructions with this in view. During range practice, no troops will be allowed past warning flags that define a positively safe zone. The water in the camp well has been tested and found pure, and no water from any other source may be used by men in camp. Special regulations for washing and for the disposal of rubbish have been made by the Medical Officer to prevent contamination of the water supply. Tent walls are to be rolled for ventilation every day, and blankets will be piled outside the tents daily.

While firing is in progress the officer in charge of the butt party will not allow anyone to expose himself. The concrete "dugouts" at the butts are perfectly safe retreats, and before the men leave shelter the officer in charge of the firing party will personally inspect the guns to see that the bolts are withdrawn, thus obviating the possibility of the guns being fired accidentally. Telephone communication between the butts and the firing point makes it possible to check with certainty when all men are safely under cover before a gun is fired.

Signalling System.

One of the first camp duties was the setting up of a signal system, in which several miles of insulated wire is used. There is a "central", with a five-way switchboard, connected with field telephones in the orderly room, O.C.'s tent, butts, every firing point each end of the road which cuts the rifle range, and an observing point. Eight field telephones are in use, and quick communication can be obtained with almost any part of the big range.

Another Meanest Thief Steals Childrens' Lunch

Another "meanest thief" has been revealed, but not found.

While two west-end families were having a picnic at Jackson Park yesterday afternoon someone stole their lunch, including a dozen and a half bananas, from the pavilion.

Whoever the thief was has the satisfaction of knowing that several children had to walk home hungry.

Burning Straw Stacks Give Rise To Rumors Of Large Barn Fire

A big blaze that attracted much attention around the city and far out in the country last night caused rumors to run wild that some barn or house in Otonabee had been burned. The Examiner was informed by Mrs. R. B. Jackson of Otonabee this morning that the cause of the blaze was the firing of two threshing stacks on their farm. Mr. Jackson believed it to be a good time to burn the stacks after the rain when there would be less danger of the fire spreading. The threshing machine had been moved twice and so there were the two stacks to burn. Mrs. Jackson said that it probably would look suspicious after the electrical storm with its vivid electric flashes but the storm was not of a severe nature, in their district.

The reflection and blaze was seen quite plainly from the Peterborough-Port Hope highway and as fire is very deceiving it appeared quite close, so plain were the flames and the reflection in the sky, while huge clouds of smoke could be seen rolling away from the fire.

From the distance the two separate flames could be seen which appeared as if a building was burning and the flames were coming out of the ends of the structure before the roof fell in. This was caused by the two separate stacks burning in the field. Residents in Otonabee believed their was a barn fire in the township as they also saw the reflection but on investigation this was found to be only a scare. The darkness of the night and the passing electrical storm all made the blaze a very spectacular one.

Discipline and Efficiency Combined In City Fire Department Says Chief

That Peterborough has one of the most efficient and well disciplined fire departments in the province and that he has no intention of "running the thing to the ground" in the matter of ceremony was the declaration of Fire Chief Gimblett this morning in commenting on a recent order posted in the London, Ontario, department by which all non-commissioned men must address the officers according to their rank, without fail, whether in the fire hall or on the streets.

"We have a cheerful and agreeable crew of men here who know how to do their work and who always look well on the job not only of fighting fires but of caring for our equipment; there is a reasonable amount of discipline and that is what we want to maintain," said the chief. He mentioned the fact that three fire chiefs, James, of Hamilton, Thompson of New Liskeard and McCaffery, of Sturgeon Falls, had visited the local department following the Fire Chief's convention in Kingston last week and all three had been impressed with the general appearance and efficiency of the local department.

CHEESEMAKERS HOLD MEETING AT MARMORA CHEESE FACTORY

MANY ATTEND.

District Has Made Good Record in Past Seasons—Visitors Give Addresses.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MARMORA, Aug. 3. — Marmora cheese factory, situated four miles north of that village, was honored on Wednesday in being chosen as the place of meeting for the monthly session of the Madoc District Cheesemakers' Association. The patrons of this factory have been extremely fortunate for the past eight seasons in having the services of John Finnegan, Sr., who achieved fame in 1923 through winning a gold medal at Glasgow Exhibition for his exhibit there. His appointment last December as secretary of the aforementioned association was therefore most popular, for thoroughness is testified to as a great characteristic of the man.

Out of twenty-seven factories in the area embraced by the association, twenty-four have affiliated, which bespeaks the value seen in such an organization. Members of the association are: Vernon Spencer, Queensboro; Zara Bristol, Madoc, R. R. 2; Frank Plue, Otter Creek; Pat Murphy, Stoco; James Sexsmith, Actinolite; Harold Broad, Madoc; Harold Henderson, Madoc; Wesley Johnston, Tweed, R. R. 1; John Murphy, Tweed; Gerald Casey, Marlbank; Ernest Brennan, Bogart; Leslie Wyatt, Madoc, R. R. 2; John Finnegan, Marmora, R. R. 2; John Finnegan, Jr., Deloro; Frank Nathan, Marmora; Bert Anderson, Eldorado; Alex. Johnson, Eldorado; Burnice Wannamaker, Madoc; John Brethour, Madoc, R. R. 1; Henry Lowery, Madoc; George Spencer, Madoc; Reginald Barton, Havelock, R. R. 4; Dorion Cassidy, Sulphide; Elton Weir, Boulter.

President Brennan not having arrived, Inspector W. H. Bailey, of Madoc, presided over a splendid attendance of makers and patrons. He expressed regret that C. C. Publow should have been prevented at the last moment from attending. He next stated that when organized some months ago wrong ideas had got afloat concerning the association. Some thought it would be a cheesemakers' union. Such, he explained, was not the case. At the conclusion of his helpful remarks to those present, the arrival of Mr. Brennan was announced, the latter conducting the remaining business.

The president at once created a favorable impression among his audience. In enthusiastic terms, he told of the growing interest in the monthly meetings and the need of such meetings to discuss questions affecting the industry.

Inspector C. F. Linn, called upon for a speech, expressed pleasure in meeting so many old friends, and congratulated Mr. Finnegan on the inside of his factory. He was glad to know that the cheesemakers had banded together to do greater things. In his own section he never saw makers working so hard as this year. All cheesemakers need the co-operation of the farmers, he declared. The farmers should have regard for surroundings. He also considered it a foolish thing to deliver whey in cans. Another point he left with those present was: "You cannot make a firm cheese with acid. A certain amount is necessary, but no more." He was anxious that Hastings County should be the banner county of Ontario this year. "There are four grades," he continued, "A, B, C and D. Remember the 'D' man does not get so much as the 'A' man." Concluding, he said: "Cool the milk as quick as you get it and keep it in a sanitary place."

Instructor Murray, of Campbellford, in a very able speech congratulated the district on still being 100 per cent. He told of conditions as existing in Northumberland, and in the course of his remarks dealt with grading and gas flavors in cheese.

The chairman having given an intermission for discussions and motions, brought first to the notice of the meeting a matter of more than usual interest. He mentioned that at the recent meeting of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association held in Belleville the executive sent a recommendation to the Dairy Commissioner at Ottawa, Dr. Ruddick, asking that commencing January 1, 1929, date of manufacture of cheese

BITE INTO SOAP MADE LIKE APPLE BETRAYS TWO GERMAN BURGLARS

BERLIN, Aug. 3.—An artfully disguised piece of soap proved the nemesis of two burglars who were sentenced to seven years in State Prison at Breslau today. The criminals entered the residence of a wealthy stockyards director several months ago and stole everything they could lay their hands on.

On a dresser the thieves found a tempting apple and decided to take a bite. What was apparently fruit, however, actually consisted of soap. From the marks left by the bites of the burglars the police managed to find both men within a brief period.

One of them proved to be the sweetheart of the hired girl employed in the house of the robbed family.

RAIN DELAYS FARM WORK

BAND CONCERT HELD.

STIRLING, Aug. 3 (Examiner Correspondence). — The continued showery weather is holding up the farm work. Some of the farmers have hay to cut and others have begun the grain harvest.

Rye, fall wheat, and barley being cut this week. The threshers are also getting ready for their work, the "hum" of the cylinder and the "toot" of the whistle is heard in some localities already.

Band Concert

The Stirling Citizens' Band, inaugurated their Sunday evening concerts at Memorial Park by playing there last Sunday evening to a large and appreciative audience, gathered from both town and country. With more favorable weather, these functions will no doubt become very popular.

The Ladies' Union of St. Paul's Church met on Tuesday and prepared ten quilts for their bale.

Institute Picnic

The ladies of the Women's Institute held their annual picnic on Wednesday afternoon at Oak Lake. Fifty persons gathered for the occasion in the vicinity of Mesdames McGee and Lagrow's cottages. A program of various sports had been arranged and was carried out with the following results:

Ladies' Running Race.—Mrs. Annie Bailey.

Race, Free for All.—Bernadette McGee.

Walking race—Mr. Thomas Montgomery.

Biscuit Eating Contest.—Mrs. A. Corrigal.

Necktie Race.—Mrs. Annie Bailey.

Little People's Race.—Billy McGee.

Stone Race.—James Lagrow.

A spelling match ended the program and some of the ladies being so proficient in spelling, a draw had to be called. Four of the spellers still ready so long as Mrs. Lagrow, who dictated the words was willing to continue. Tables were then prepared for supper and everyone present entered in this contest, and as there was no lack of supplies, everybody won a prize, and all were satisfied. After supper two beauty contests were held, and by the votes of those present, Mrs. B. Belshaw was declared to be the most beautiful lady present, and Mr. James Leonard of Warkworth the handsomest man. Several snap photos were taken. It was decided that a very happy event had occurred and all being well, the W.I. will meet

C.G.I.T. GIRLS RETURN HOME

Millbrook Group Spent Enjoyable Week at Chemong Park.

MILLBROOK NEWS.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, August 3.—Members of the Wide Awakes C.G.I.T. group, ten of whom, with their leader, spent last week enjoying a holiday outing at Chemong Park, returned home on Tuesday. Recreation during the week at the cottage included ball games, hikes, marshmallow and weiner roasts on the beach, bathing, etc. A devotional period, when Bible study was systematically taken up, occupied the first half hour after breakfast each morning, following the plan at the provincial C.G.I.T. camps.

The girls who were able to take in the outing were: Elsie Spence, Wilma Fallis, Dorothy McDowell, Marguerite Hawken, Margaret Russell, Jean Stinson, Margaret Fallis, Helen Mitchell, Marian O'Brian, Mary Burnham, and K. Donnelly, the latter spending the last two days with the group.

It is probable that this plan will be adopted another year, giving opportunity for all the members to enjoy a happy holiday together.

Personals.

Mr. Granville Burton, of Louisville, Kentucky, who was called here suddenly owing to the death of his only sister, Mrs. W. G. Russell, left for his home in the South on Thursday morning.

Mrs. I. E. Needham and Miss May Needham are visiting Mr. and Mrs. G. Ames, and other friends in Toronto this week.

Mrs. Oliphant, of Montreal, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. C. M. Westmacott, arriving on Wednesday.

Mr. L. C. Russell formerly of the Mirror-Reporter staff, has taken a position in the job printing department of the Port Hope Times.

Mrs. W. S. Given, of Toronto, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. John Allen this week, and called upon a number of old friends during her stay in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Armstrong, of Toronto, are guests of her mother, Mrs. S. Eakins, Senior.

Mr. and Mrs. Campbell, of Wingham, and Mr. and Mrs. W. Campbell, and two children, Audrey and Donald, of Aylmer, motored to town and visited Mr. and Mrs. M. McDowell last week, leaving for home on Tuesday.

Among visitors to "C.G.I.T. Cottage", Chemong Park, on Sunday were: Mr. and Mrs. F. McMahon, Misses Flossie and Annie McMahon, and Master Lloyd; Mr. and Mrs. P. Stinson, and sons, Jack and Teddy; Mr. and Mrs. Hilliard Lang, Miss Bertha and Master Donald; Mrs. Fred Lang; Mrs. B. McMahon; Miss Gertrude Spence; Mr. Peacock, of Halton; Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Fallis, their daughter, Miss Elinor, and three sons, Donald, Max, and Lorne; Mr. and Mrs. M. McDowell and family; Mrs. McDowell's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Campbell, of Wingham; and her brother, his wife and family, Mr. and Mrs. W. Campbell, Audrey and Donald, of Aylmer; Mr. and Mrs. William O'Brian; Marshal Fallis, and others.

Rev. Joseph Wilks, Mr. and Mrs. J. Albert Brown, were guests at the cottage on Saturday. Mrs. Brown is an honorary member of the Wide Awakes group, and both Rev. Mr. Wilks and Mr. Brown have given practical assistance with the group activities.

BLINDNESS CURED, LEARNS TO READ

Marcella Calkins, 20, of Chetek, is gradually becoming accustomed to Wis., now in a Milwaukee hospital, using her eyes, after having been blind since birth. A delicate operation a few weeks ago removed the film that had totally obstructed her vision, and she is now seeing for the first time. She has many difficulties to overcome now, as she must learn to read pritned type (she has been trained to read Braille) and must learn to use her eyes where she formerly used fingers to discern objects. Photo shows Marcella Calkins reading the "funnies" for the first time in her life, after her eyesight had been restored.

Princess Ileana Is Reported Engaged Authorities Say Rumors Are Premature

BERLIN, Aug 3.—Reports circulated in the United States that Princess Ileana of Rumania is about to become the fiance of Prince Heinrich of Schaumburg-Lippe are authoritatively described here as "premature." The nature of the denial, however, seems to indicate that it will not be surprising if the engagement takes place.

Since her visit to America in the Winter of 1926, Princess Ileana has been the subject of many romantic rumors. She was last year reported to have eloped with a young naval lieutenant, and before that she was said to be the destined bride of Crown Prince Humber of Italy.

Queen Mari, the mother of the 19-year-old princess, once announced that she would not object to her daughter marrying an American, whereupon several matrimonial proposals were received from youths in different parts of the United States.

Prince Heinrich of Schaumburg-Lippe is said to be wealthy, and is a descendent of an ancient house. He visited this country two years ago.

MESSAGE WASHED UP SIGNED BY HINCHLIFFE AND MACKAY

LONDON, Aug. 3.—(A.P.)— A bottle washed up on the shore near Flint, North Wales, yesterday, contained a note on which was written: 'Good-bye all."

Beneath the brief message were signed the names Elsie Mackay and Captain Hinchliffe, and beneath the names the words Down in fog and storm."

They were never seen alive again.

FIRE DAMAGES OMEMEE HOUSE

J. B. Hayes, of Omemee, Suffers Heavy Loss When Property Destroyed.

OIL STOVE EXPLODED.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

OMEMEE, Aug. 3.—As the result of an explosion from a coal oil stove about 6 o'clock last evening, fire completely destroyed the shed and summer kitchen, and inside of the residence to which it was joined, belonging to Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Hayes, of Omemee.

Mrs. Hayes had lighted the fire and had gone to her verandah. In about five minutes neighbors noticed the fire and drew her attention to it.

Much of the furniture out of the front part of the house was saved, though there was considerable loss from water.

Omemee firefighters and apparatus gave speedy and efficient assistance. It is understood that there was some insurance.

HEALTH OFFICER FAILED TO ATTEND

Harvey Council Receives Letter About Absence From Convention.

(Examiner Correspondence)

HALL'S BRIDGE, Aug. 3.—A communication was received from W. T. Bell in regard to the Medical Health Officer of the township not attending the convention of Medical Health Officers at a meeting of the Council of the township of Harvey held on Saturday, July 28, at Hall's Bridge. The Clerk was instructed to forward the communication to Dr. Boyd, of Bobcaygeon, and ask for an explanation. Thomas Gordon, of Deer Bay, was given permission to do two days' grading on his road division. The clerk was also instructed to write to Mr. Finlayson in regard to last year's colonization grant.

Bylaw No. 428, to purchase steel culverts, gravel and stone for the improvement of roads in the municipality, was read and is to be sent to the department for approval.

The following bills were ordered paid: Canada Ingot Iron Company, $36.43; Napear Bennet, $9; J. R. McIntosh, $7.50; Chas. Brummel, $300; H. A. Shearer, $177.40; H. A. Shearer, supplies for Mrs. Bishop, $7.20; Municipal World, $20; Sawyer-Massey Co., $7.17; J. A. Weir, $6.75; Arthur Bolton, $12; Thomas Gordon, $11; Harry McIlmoyle, $5.95; John Jones, $12; Gale Elliott, $1.10; G. A. Windover, $10; G. B. Nelson, $10.

The Council adjourned to meet again at Hall's Bridge on Saturday, August 25, 1928.

THE WEATHER

Meteorological Office, Toronto, Aug. 3.—Pressure continues high on the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts and relatively low from the Great Lakes to the Southwest States. The weather has been for the most part fair and rather cool in the east and warm from Ontario eastward, with thunderstorms in some sections of Ontario and Western Quebec.

Forecasts

Rain, and still more rain. Last night's rainfall was .26 of an inch, and the outlook is "still there's more to follow," as a well-known hymn says. The U. S. weatherman at Washington, in broadcasting his official probs. this morning for the different states, reiterated time and again, "Showers to-day; showers and cooler to-morrow." The lowest the temperature went last night was 67 degrees. It was thus one of the warmest nights this year. Highest point yesterday, 87 degrees. In looking over last year's weather record for August, I note that the night of the 29th we had rain to a depth of 2.32, and .26 during the day—a total of 2.58 for the twenty-four hours.—W.P.

C. P. R. PICNIC AT ORILLIA

Havelock District Employees and Families To Number of 2,000 Enjoy Outing.

PROGRAM OF SPORTS.

HAVELOCK, Aug. 3. — Ideal weather added to the attractive setting of the beautiful Couchiching Park at Orillia where the second annual picnic of the Havelock C. P. R. Recreation Club was held on Wednesday, August 1st when about two thousand persons from Havelock and district and intervening points journeyed by a special train of twenty three coaches which left here at seven thirty in the morning.

On arrival at Orillia the party were given a civic reception, addresses of welcome being made by the Mayor, Reeve, President of the Board of Trade and Secretary of the Board of Trade. Basket lunches were taken along and dinner and supper were enjoyed in true picnic style.

A splendid program of sports had been arranged by the committee and was carried out very successfully. Special attractions were: a soft ball game, Orillia vs. Havelock girls, the score being 9-7 in favor of the Orillia team; soft ball, married vs single men, resulted in an easy win for the former by a score of 6-3. Mr. Ross Jr., of Orillia also gave a demonstration with his new 35 mile per hour Sea Plea speed Boat, which included some fancy stunts on the surf board. Music for the day was supplied by the Marmora band.

At the conclusion of the events J. H. Moore, President of the Club presented the prizes to the following successful contestants:

Boys' 50 yards race, under 8 years —1 Charlie Curry, 2 Warne Ferguson, 3 Ted Baskin.

Girls' 25 yards race, under 8 years —1 Muriel Breckenridge, 2 Marie McQuigge, 3 Evelyn Drain.

Boys' 50 yards race, under 10 years —1 Bernard Bedford, 2 Edward Rutherford, 3 Arthur Pincombe.

Girls' 50 yards race, under 10 years —1 Grace McMullen, 2 Helen Morrow, 3 Muriel Breckenridge.

Boys' 75 yards race, under 12 years —1 Ross McMullen, 2 Bernard Bedford, 3 James Covert.

MILL TO CLOSE IN SEPTEMBER

Canadian Paper Board Company Delays Announced Cessation of Operations.

PULP MILL CLOSED.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 3.—There has apparently been some alteration in the plans of the officials of the Canadian Paper Board Company with regard to their Campbellford mill. A few weeks ago, local officials and men in the plant received notice that this mill would be closed after the month of July or early in August. At that time, all the employees were asked to make application for positions in either the mill at Frankford or the mill at Toronto. This request was generally complied with.

A visit to the mill yesterday revealed the fact that everything is still in full swing and the latest information is that the closing date has been postponed till the middle of September. Thus the mill, which is one of the oldest of the local industries, has been granted a new, though brief, lease on life. Some of the local officials express the opinion that it will be after the first of October before the new mill in Toronto will be in operation and the Campbellford plant closed. They claim no official source for their briefs other than a visit to the Toronto plant.

This afternoon several cars of coal for the "Fire Hole" were being unloaded which might be taken to indicate that the fires would not be let out for some time. It was also stated that several cars, twenty in fact, of clippings were on their way to the Campbellford mill. This supply is usually expected to last fifteen days. The fireman on the day shift this week does not expect that he will be leaving town since the cold weather of the winter months would do serious damage to the machines. The fire pump is also steam driven and if the boilers were not kept steamed up the fire protection would be greatly decreased. In the past, fire has on more than one occasion.

Hauptmann's Son Marries a Princess

BERLIN, Aug. 3.—The family of the German poet, Prince Gerhart Hauptmann, yesterday entered the ranks of the blooded aristocracy. Dr. Benvenuto Hauptmann, 28 years old, son of the world-famous dramatist and writer, was united in mariage by religious ceremony to Princess Elisa of Schaumburg-Lippe at Dwasieden Castle, the poet's country seat.

The civil marriage took place Tuesday afternoon at the city hall in Sasanitz. The bridegroom's father, who is the author of "Die Weber," "Florian Geyer" and a number of other extremely revolutionary dramas, and Provincial President Dr. Hausemann were official witnesses.

REVENUE MEN HAVE MAGAZINE

Revenue Review Is Issued In Both English and French.

NEWS INCLUDED.

The Revenue Review, a monthly magazine issued every month by the Department of National Revenue, with J. Sidney Roe as editor, was brought to the attention of The Examiner by William M. Lang, local collector of Customs, to-day.

This magazine, which is printed both in English and French, is a monthly review of Revenue work. This month's issue contains articles descriptive of the "Flowing tide of Tourists," which tells how the new regulations at the Customs stations at the borders are working out, an article on National Revenue Legislation with explanatory notes on the amendments, a description of the new express branch at Toronto, an article on Excise and Income Tax Revenue, a review of Customs, Excise and Income Tax Revenue as well as a Canadian Trade Journal for June.

In the news and comment section articles pertaining to the Customs and Income Tax divisions are dealt with. Suggestions are received in the Letter Bag and the Question Box deals with anything that may remain in doubt in the minds of those interested in revenue problems. The object of this section is to stimulate a study by the National Revenue officers of the various memoranda and regulations.

The section 'Just Among Ourselves' deals with a record of staff promotions, transfers, additions and deductions. While there are also tables dealing with comparative Customs and income tax revenues for the different months as well as a table on the Canadian foreign trade.

The magazine covers nearly every subject that is of interest in the revenue line.

GRAVE IS FOUND AFTER 10 YEARS

Young Toronto Aviator Had Been Buried Under Wrong Name.

COMMISSION AT WORK.

TORONTO Aug. 3.—In the rush of the Great War the Germans made a mistake which kept from parents in Toronto for ten years the location of the grave of a gallant son, who served with distinction with the Royal Air Force and lost his life in the great March offensive of 1918.

The gallant young officer, whose grave has just been discovered after ten long years through the splendid work of the Imperial War Graves Commission, was Lieutenant J. Russell Aikins of the Royal Air Force, and son of Mr. and Mrs. James Aikins of 3 Oaklands Avenue, Toronto.

A letter just received by the parents from the Imperial War Graves Commission says that the grave of Lieutenant Aikins has only now been discovered.

Tragedy of March, 1918.

The airplane piloted by Lieutenant Aikins was shot down on March 26, 1918, four miles south-west of Bapaume. The German report read: "On the 26th of March an English airplane was shot down near Butte de Warlencourt. The machine number 6533, W. G. Saidler, R.G.A. The other occupant must have fallen out of the machine somewhere else. There only the body of Lieutenant Saidler was found."

Lieutenant Saidler was buried by the Germans at Butte de Warlencourt but no record of the grave of Lieutenant Aikins could be discovered, either in the British or German records.

Grave Is Discovered.

The Imperial War Graves Commission, in the work of creating new burying places for soldiers and beautifying others, in removing bodies from Abancourt Communal Cemetery to Flesquieres Hill (British) Cemetery, discovered the grave of Lieutenant Russell Aikins.

Through a mistake on the part of the Germans, his Christian name, Russell, was taken to be a surname, and the body was registered under the name of Russell, instead of under Aikins.

In the rush of war the Imperial War Graves Commission feel that the Germans must not be held blameworthy.

Since his burial at Abancourt, which is six miles north of Cambrai, and some 30 miles away from Butte de Warlencourt, where his plane was shot down, and his death is recorded as on April 22, some three weeks later, it would seem that he was taken to the great German casualty clearing station at Abancourt and had died there.

The news, which has just reached Mr. and Mrs. Aikins, is further evidence of the thorough work of the Imperial War Graves Commission, and may be the forerunner of other just such remarkable discoveries among the records of the gallant dead.

WESTERN SHEEPMEN IN STRONG POSITION

Permanent Feeling of Confidence Everywhere in Evidence —Big B. C. Development.

"Never have I noticed such a permanent feeling of confidence as seems to exist among sheepmen all through the Western Provinces this year," states W. H. J. Tisdale of the Canadian Co-operative Wool Growers, who has just returned from his sixth annual Western tour, during which he motored all through the principal range areas of British Columbia and Southern Alberta, as well as visiting practically the whole of the sheep farming areas of all four provinces. "Not only are the sheepmen confident but I found the same feeling in respect to agriculture generally among the leading banking and railway officials of the towns and cities. Good crops and good prices have had a wonderful effect on Prairie and British Columbia conditions and live stock is coming back rapidly."

Mr. Tisdale reported a continual trend toward mixed farming. Sheep are now considered to work in well with grain farming, where the property has been fenced. From 100 to 150 ewes are being kept on many half sections where, owing to the abundance of waste feed, their feeding cost is very small. The sheep have been found very useful in keeping summer fallows clean and in helping to solve the weed problem.

"Undoubtedly the most spectacular sheep development has taken place in British Columbia. There, farmers have doubled their sheep population in the past four years, and the Grazing Commissioner, T. P. McKenzie, assured me that there was room for 2,000,000 sheep, or more than fifty per cent. of the present total for all Canada, in the interior of his province alone."

Unfortunately, according to this official of the Canadian Co-operative, the range lamb crop of the West this year, due to extreme weather conditions at breeding time last fall did not run over 55 per cent., but among the farm flocks of the West it was well up to average. The wool coming from this part of the country this year is as good as any Western clip he has ever seen, being clean and bright. Of the total Western clip the Co-operative expects to handle about 300,000 pounds from British Columbia, 750,000 pounds from the flocks of Saskatchewan and Manitoba and 1,250,000 pounds from Alberta this season.

Steel plates are suggested for street paving in large cities. The initial cost, it is believed, would be more than offset by the saving in repairs. Water pipes, telephone wires, etc., could be laid beneath removable plates, thus saving the cost of digging up the streets.

BRITISH MINERS CAN'T BE PLACED

Canadian Officials Say They Would Have To Go On Farms.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 3 (Special to The Examiner)—If British miners are sent out to Canada in accordance with the scheme suggested in the British House of Commons, it will be to go on farms, in the opinion of the immigration authorities here. Canada has enough of her own miners out of work.

The fight in the British House over emigration and the statements made therein are considered as possibly forecasting some of the proposals to be made by Lord Lovat, chairman of the British Empire Settlement Board, when he comes to Ottawa in August. The Hon. Robert Forke, Minister of Immigration and Colonization, is at present in Western Canada. He will meet Lord Lovat in Ottawa on the latter's arrival, however, and a number of conferences will take place with railway and immigration officials.

No suggestions have been received in Canada from Great Britain as to any new emigration plans. There are no restrictions against British immigration save the usual safeguards of good health and character. The best summing up of the situation is said to have been that made by Sir Robert Horn when he returned to England after a visit to Canada.

Sir Robert pointed out that the £15,000,000 in the British Treasury for emigration purposes could not be expended unless somebody else (the dominion concerned) put up pound for pound, so that to expend the money it was necessary to get £15,000,000 from elsewhere. He advocated the raising of this restriction, and that the Empire Settlement Board be enabled to expend the money with the conditions imposed by the Treasury. In the present assisted passage schemes the Dominion contributes to every passage. Right Hon. L. C. S. Amery, on his visit to Canada last winter, suggested a plan to give everybody assisted passages, Great Britain and the Dominion putting up the money for passages, save $10.00 to be paid by the emigrant. Canada refused to agree to this, as it would bring in a flood of people who never intended to stay, but could get a cheap trip for ten dollars. There is some question in Ottawa as to whether Canada will accede to the possible British suggestion of shipping thousands of miners and their families to the Dominion, the Parliamentary Committee last session having disapproved to some extent of family settlement and being disinclined to have Canada continue even the three thousand family scheme which will shortly expire.

OILING THE ROADS.

The dust nuisance on some of the principal roads radiating from Peterborough has been bad enough during the past few weeks to justify a demand that at least those roads that are most heavily travelled upon should be given an oil treatment.

Along the Lakefield and Chemong roads where traffic in mid-summer is, of course, at its peak, the conditions as a result of the clouds of dust are disagreeable in the extreme, not only to motorists, but also to the farmers whose houses are close to the road.

The dust-whitened grass, trees and shrubs along these roads offer a sorry contrast to the appearance of the countryside bordering permanent or oiled roads.

The Examiner understands that the Ontario Government will pay half the cost of oiling roads.

With that assistance municipalities should not find the cost of this most necessary and desirable work excessive, and there will be many people who will hope that this matter will receive some attention.

SPYING OUT THE LAND.

The tour of the Western Provinces that is to be made by a delegation of Kansas farmers this month is not bad business for this country—in fact, is likely to be of much greater value than the visit of the same number of ordinary holiday-making tourists.

They will travel by a special train through most of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, watching the harvest operations, investigating agricultural conditions, and securing from other Americans now residing in Canada some valuable information as to chances for success here.

It is not difficult to foresee that out of such a visit Canada will gain some new citizens of most valuable type, experienced farmers who know what is needed for success, and who will help to increase the yield in Canada's grain Provinces.

The Kansas delegation will soon find themselves among friends, for they are sure of a hearty welcome everywhere they go in the Western Provinces, whether among the grain-growing farmers or the people of the cities which they will visit during their inspection tour.

BANISHING THE KNICKERS.

Many folks cherish various ambitions, and in this connection we must confess that we entertain a hope that some day we may be able to grasp the honest hand of the chief of police of Norwich, Conn.

The head of the Norwich police department has decreed that only males may wear knickers on the streets of that city, holding that such garb for women is "vulgar."

Personal liberty is a valuable commodity, and perhaps women have a perfect right to wear knickers if they want to, but in the name of all that is artistic, why do most of them want to?

If there is any spectacle less picturesque than a certain type of women in "plus fours" it is that broad-beamed female of uncertain age, but obviously unable to enter the welterweight class, garbed in knickers.

A glance in the mirror should tell them that Nature never intended them for such an outfit, and the chief of police who ordered all such attire off the street is entitled to a vote of thanks.

TOO MANY PROTESTS.

To many Canadians the only fly in the ointment in regard to the Dominion's participation in the Olympic Games is that there seems no little danger of Canadians gaining an unenviable reputation as "sqwakers," a reputation that will do much to discount the wonderful showing that is being made by the Maple Leaf team.

Mistakes may have been made by the men in charge of the games, but sportsmen should recognize the honesty and integrity of officials by accepting their awards without question, regarding the mistakes as part of the game.

The United States representatives, too, may have been guilty of arrogance in their attitude toward the competitions, but that attitude, while perhaps galling to other teams, is not sufficient justification for the stream of protests coming from the Canadian camp.

The people of this country are proud of what their representatives have accomplished at Amsterdam, but along with that pride there is an uneasy feeling that there is too ready a tendency on the part of Canadian leaders to complain about results and decisions, and regret that some of those in charge of the Maple Leaf athletes should be so eager to talk.

In a series of competitions where some 47 nations are represented it is useless to look for perfect handling of all the events, and it is to be hoped that the events will be finished without the already formidable list of Canadian protests being augmented.

MIGRATION OF PICTURES.

Mr. P. W. Milson, a British journalist who has lived in the United States and corresponded for London papers, is inclined to make light of the complaint that art treasures and curiosities are leaving England and coming to this continent. He says that the United States is to-day treating Great Britain as Great Britain formerly treated the rest of the world. "Nowhere on this planet is there a museum less British than the British Museum." He regards as a hopeful sign the hunger of the United States for the highest beauty:

"It is only after you have traveled thousands of miles in this country (the United States), often by automobile, that you can realize the desdening monotony of a present divorced from the past. To restore a vivid contact with the life of the race in earlier eras is to-day a supreme ambition of the American mind. And it is an ambition the realization of which has scarcely begun.

"In eight hours a non-stop train will carry Irishmen, now populating Edinburgh, to London, where they can study, not Rembrandt alone, but all the treasures of Trafalgar Square, Burlington House, and the Wallace Collection. But in order to see the Peacock Room of Whistler, now at Washington, a resident in San Francisco has to travel four days. I do not know how many days of travel would have to be endured before a Texan could catch his first glimpse of a Memline. The United States is discovering that man can not live by bread alone."

As to the loss supposed to be suffered by Great Britain he says that a subscription of half a crown a year per head would have bought all the pictures for museums and art galleries in England. "As a nation let us be candid with ourselves. How many of us have been in the habit of gazing at Corregios and Corots? How many of us have had the chance of gazing at them? It is only when these pictures go elsewhere that our pride is wounded." In this there is probably a good deal of truth. A masterpiece owned by a private individual and not publicly exhibited has practically no value as a means of education in art. The visitors to art galleries are few in number compared with those who see the moving pictures. Copies of famous pictures are usually not difficult to obtain, and these have a considerable educational value. The importance of the location and possession of the original is exaggerated.

There are other ways of cultivating the sense of beauty—by preserving natural scenery and erecting buildings which please the eye. The glories of sunrise and sunset are to be seen every day. Clouds will repay observation, and the starry canpoy is worth looking at even when no comet is visible.

There is still less matter for grief in the transfer of such things as the manuscript of "Alice in Wonderland." The delightful fancy of that quaint production may be enjoyed by anybody for the price of a lunch, and the printed page tells the story just as well as the manuscript. If a rich man chooses to pay £14,500 for the original nobody need grudge him such enjoyment as he may derive from that possession.—London Advertiser.

A KISSLESS CAMPAIGN FOR HOOVER.

(New York Evening World).

Hoover has sprung the first sensation of the campaign. Herbert refuses to kiss any babies, even if it costs him a couple of dozen doubtful States. Osculation is not an issue with the G. O. P. candidate.

The Democrats have been quick to seize this opportunity that Hoover has given them. They not only look with favor on fondling kiddies, but Al Smith will gladly kiss them. The Democrats are now waiting for Herlin to spring the germ theory of kiddie kissing.

Kissing babies became a major campaign tactic when Bryan first ran in 1896. The Republican opposition then scoffed at the practice on the grounds that babies do not have a vote. But Bryan was building for the future. He figured when those babies were twenty-one, he would still be running for President. And he was. All those kiddies were of voting age before he stopped running, but they either forgot to register or voted the straight Republican ticket.

* * * *

Baby kissing is only a modern manifestation of the yen to be associated with the great. Up to 1870, more than 6,000 colored mammies died who claimed to be George Washington's only nurse. And even nowadays not a year passes but what death claims annually 1,500 persons who were present when Abraham Lincoln was shot. This has been going on for forty years now, and statisticians figure Ford's Theatre had ten times the capacity of Roxy's playhouse.

There are also men alive to-day—and famous—because they snapped the butts of President Grant's cigars.

* * * *

But since the custom of kissing babies came in there has never been a presidential candidate who was not very kind to the babies of registered voters. It is true that when Charles E. Hughes was running for President in 1916 he did not kiss any babies. But that was because the babies refused to be kissed and not that Mr. Hughes was unwilling.

In fact, that was one of the big problems of the 1926 campaign. Mr. Hughes would set aside thirty minutes daily, except Sunday, for kiddie kissing. But the infants would only yell and kick their feet in remonstrance. At one time the campaign committee considered the advisability of dying Mr. Hughes' whiskers white and pretending he was Santa Claus. But the idea was vetoed, and this, as much as any other factor, was attributed to Mr. Hughes' close defeat.

* * * *

Also in 1908 and 1912, William Howard Taft was willing to kiss babies and did so in large quantities. But there was an inflexible rule that no baby should sit on Mr. Taft's lap. This was because Mr. Taft had no lap, however. He got by with this explanation the first time in 1908, but it will be recalled that in 1912 he only carried Utah and Vermont.

One can imagine the sensation Mr. Hoover has created therefore by his bombshell decision. People expected when Herbert announced a campaign from the front porch that naturally there would be kissing. But "Kiss Me Again" is positively out as the Hoover campaign song.

* * * *

It gives the Smith headquarters renewed confidence in their candidate. For with Hoover saving up his smacks, Al will meet the situation with puckered lips. For it is known in osculatory circles that Al will kiss anything from the Blarney Stone to a set of quadruplets.

This, combined with the fine way Al's brown derby shows up in rotogravure sections, makes the campaign look like a Democratic pushover at this writing.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

It is a safe bet that Percy Williams' sensational victories have set "I-Knew-Him-When" Club going strong in Vancouver.

Apparently it takes Joe Wright, Jr., to beat the Dutch.

Perhaps the hardest job the man who aspires to fill Gene Tunney's shoes will have to do is to persuade some promoter to put up a worth-while purse.

The United States team is said to have eat itself out of the Olympic track events. It looks as if the chefs must be given credit for an assist.

Dancing marathons are a form of amusement that Ontario can very well do without.

The Question Box

E.M. Q.—Kindly give details of the man who went across Niagara Falls on a rope.

A.—Blondin, the man who crossed Niagara Falls on a tight-rope, was born at St. Omer, France, on February 28, 1824. His real name was Jean Francois Gravelet. When five years old he was sent to the Ecole de Gymnase at Lyons and, after six months' training as an acrobat made his first public appearance as "The Little Wonder." He became a popular favorite, especially owing his celebrity and fortune to his idea of crossing Niagara Falls on a tight-rope 1,100 feet long, and 160 feet above the water. This he accomplished first in 1859, a number of times, always with different theatric variations. Blindfold, in a sack, trundling a wheelbarrow, on stilts, carrying a man on his back, sitting down midway while he made and ate an omelette. In 1861 Blondin appeared in London, performing sensational turns at the Crystal Palace. Thereafter he gave exhibitions elsewhere in Great Britain and in Continental Europe. He retired for some years, then made a great farewell tour his final performance being given in Belfast in 1896. He died at Ealing, London, on February 19, 1897.

A.—Most of the bats of Canada and the United States eat insects, but there are a few fruit-eating bats in the extreme south of the United States, and many in Mexico and Central America. Some foreign bats do much damage to crops in South America, Japan, Australia, the Pacific Islands, India, Ceylon and Madagascar. In this part of the world, stories of bats which suck the blood of animals, and even of human beings have long been current, but authenticated instances seem to be few and far between. Real blood-sucking bats, however, exist in Central and South America, and in Brazil. They get blood from horses and cattle, and do a great deal of harm to poultry.

GOD'S MINUTE.

Pray to thy Father, which seeth in secret.—Matt. 6:6.

Our Heavenly Father, we bow ourselves before Thee and humbly pray that Thou wilt help us to remember all this day our dependence upon Thee. Give unto us a vision of the upward pathway. Make us conscious of Thy holy presence.

Guard us from all enticements to do wrong. Enliven our consciences with Christian truth, that we be not deceived by error. Fill us with love, and give unto us a disposition like that of our Master. Help us in all our toil to serve Thee.

Bear Thou our burdens with us. By Thy grace teach us to seek first Thy Kingdom and righteousness. Work Thou in us the courage of faith, and the peace of trust. Through Thy Holy Spirit pervade our home with gracious kindness.

Abundantly bless our friends, our minister, and our Church. And "Wheth er we eat or drink, or whatsoever we do, may we do it all to the glory of Thy Holy Name."

This we ask with the forgiveness of our sins, of which we repent, through our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. Amen.

A Thought

"STONE-THROWING"

We have all seen boys, and, yes, grown-ups who should have put away childish things, throw stones at birds who are unable to fly.

Perhaps it was the little bird's first peep at the great big world below its home. Yet, there are people in this world who will rob God of His beautiful birds and destroy that which was given to us for a joy. What a rude welcome for our beloved songsters on their first introduction to the world from students of moral philosophy!

We so often harm people's characters by telling untruths. Most of it is done through jealousy and for the love of hurting people. So many are ruined in the social world by people throwing stones in front of their paths. How cruel and unjust is that habit which grows on a person so quickly.

We so often find fault with other people's actions and so often forget our own faults. Is it fair to our own character? Is it doing justice to the people whom you talk about?

We let those fault-finding words fly from our mouths in the same manner as a stone flys from a sling. Out they go and pierce the heart of one who might be more innocent than we are. Stop and think before you let those stones fly. See if the road is clear first.

There is a time and place, therefore, to throw stones. About two hundred years ago the throwing of a stone killed an Austrian who demanded the people's money. In a few hours Genoa had gained its freedom and the people still held their possessions.

And you all remember how David, who must have practiced the art, slew Goliath, and so delivered Israel, and became its king.

In both cases, however, was a case of necessity in saving lives. They were not cases of evil destruction.

Our tongues were made to send forth words of wisdom, love and helpfulness not words that cut and sting like a stone. Our hands were made to do deeds of kindness and to help your fallen neighbor; not to hold the sling that holds the stone of misery.

We cannot be happy ourselves if we keep on hurting the other fellow. Time will tell, for like Goliath, no matter how strong you become at the game the stone is bound to sting you on the rebound it makes.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND RODUCE.

MONTREAL Que., August 3 (Canadian Press). — The feature of the export trade in grain here yesterday was the demand from continental buyers for Manitoba wheat, and sales of No. 1, 2 and 3 Northern were made for nearby and deferred shipment. In addition to this a number of loads of oats were sold.

In the domestic market prices for American No. 2 yellow corn were advanced two cents per bushel and sales were made at $1.12 per bushel, ex-store. The demand for Canadian Western oats was fair and values ruled steady.

A moderate amount of business was done in spring and winter wheat grades of flour and prices were firmly maintained.

The trade in all lines of milifeed showed a decided improvement and the undertone to the market was steady at the late declines noted. The market for standard grades of rolled oats was quiet and firm.

An easier feeling prevailed in the butter market and prices were reduced a fraction. The trade was quiet. The receipts were 1,282 packages.

The cheese market was without any new feature to note, the demand being inactive and prices were unchanged. The receipts were 4,623 boxes.

The undertone to the egg situation was firm under a good demand from all sources. The receipts were 689 cases.

The demand for beans was fairly active and prices were unchanged. New crop were quoted at $2.40 to $2.50 per barrel for car lots to arrive, ex-track, while the immediate stocks of choice white hand-picked sold at $4.10 per bushel, ex-store, and car lots at $3.90 per bushel.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, August 3 (Canadian Press). — In the face of considerable selling to realize profits, the corn market moved sharply upward much of the time yesterday. Spot cash demand for corn to be shipped out of here was in evidence, and fresh receipts of corn in Chicago yesterday totalled only 131 cars.

Closing quotations on corn were firm, ¾c to 2⅞c net higher, with wheat ¼c to ⅝c up, oats unchanged to ⅛c advance, and provisions unchanged to 25c dozen.

Scantiness of offerings except at material advances in price formed the rule in the corn market, and with traders nervous it frequently happened that simultaneous transactions in various sections of the pit were a widely different figure, sometimes 1⅛c apart. Previous speculative sellers were especially active in changes at the buying side of the market, owing to dwindling of receipts here and to reports that the new corn crop was curling from heat at some points in Nebraska and South Dakota.

September delivery of corn gave particular indications of strain toward higher price levels and at yesterday's top was 3c to 3⅜c above Wednesday's finish. Meanwhile, vessel-room was chartered here for 210,000 bushels of corn to go to Georgian Bay, Ont., and there were European requests for offers of corn for trans-Atlantic export, ten days' shipment. On the other hand, a leading authority estimated the new domestic corn crop at 3,082,000,000 bushels, making the average of unofficial forecasts now 3,019,000,000 bushels, or 29,000,000 bushels more than a month ago and comparing with revised harvest returns of 2,774,000,000 bushels last year.

Wheat sympathized with the corn strength, and reflected the influence of export business in Canadian wheat yesterday estimated at 2,000,000 bushels. Hedging pressure, however, appeared on the upturns in price. Talk was current that with Chicago wheat values about 19c a bushel lower than a year ago bearish conditions had already been allowed for. Oats held inside narrow limits, and trading lacked volume.

Provisions were easier, owing a great deal to a smaller decrease in lard stocks during July than was expected.

STERLING EXCHANGE

MONTREAL Que., August 3 (Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as:

Demand—$4.85 9-16 to 11-16.
Cables—$4.86 1-16 to 3-16.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, Aug. 3.—Montreal and Toronto storage stock figures just issued show a shortage of nearly 4,000,000 pounds, as compared with one year ago.

Trading was quiet on the local wholesale market yesterday. While some sales were made at 38¾ cents a pound for No. 1 butter the market was ¼ cent below that figure.

Cream during the last two weeks has been of much better quality than just previous to that period. As a result there was a great deal of No. 2 butter made that would not otherwise have been put on the market.

Egg markets have not shown a great deal of change during the past week, although if anything there is more strength to the situation generally than there was a week ago. This is especially apparent on the higher grades and there is a possibility that values for fresh extras will continue to work higher. There is a very good demand for this grade in Montreal, although that centre is buying slowly from outside points. It would appear that supplies in Montreal are almost sufficient to take care of present requirements and dealers there are not anxious to take on supplies from the West.

...long years ago, when bustles were all the ...ogue, and men boasted of their "coach ...and four" the inns of little old New York ...were famous for their comfort and good ...cheer. The Victoria, today, is proud to ...follow that same tradition of true hospitality.

It's a smart hotel, of course—you're proud to say, "I stopped at the Victoria!" It's convenient, certainly—you're in the very heart of the theatrical and business and shopping districts! But above everything else, you'll remember your stay at the Victoria for its old-fashioned courtesy, its warm hospitality!

42 Permits Issued In July

Buildings Authorized During Month Will Cost About $38,000.

SIX NEW HOUSES.

More Permits Taken Out Than in July, 1927, But For Smaller Account.

During the month of July, forty-two building permits were issued by City Engineer Parsons valued at $37,885.00. The grand total for the first seven months of the year now amounts to $209,532. The forty-two permits issued were divided into four classes, twelve for garages at an estimated cost of $3,675; six for dwellings estimated to cost $20,100; two for service stations, which will cost $7,700, and twenty-two miscellaneous, which included the building of small additions, shingling of buildings and the making of repairs which will cost $6,410.

Although the number of permits issued showed a marked increase there was a decided decrease in the estimated cost over July in 1927, when twenty-five permits were issued at an estimated cost of $307,557, and the total for the year then was $541,885. This large figure for July last year was due principally to the fact that a permit had been granted to the Board of Education to build the addition to the Collegiate Institute.

Add building story to come

July Contracts More Normal.

After three particularly heavy months, the more ordinary consruction total for July, although large, seems rather small. Actually, it is down 20 p.c. from the same month last year but well ahead of similar months in previous years. The Dominion total for the first seven months is now 21.6 p.c. greater than the identical period of 1927.

A distribution of the July contracts awarded total, by classification, shows that 35.4 p.c. was described as business buildings. The total being $13,583,700. $13,035,200 appears as residential or 34 p.c. Public works and utilities shows $6,765,600 or 17.6 p.c. and industrial $4,975,100 or 13 p.c. The work was let in the following divisions:

Ontario $13,761,900 or 35.9 p.c.; Quebec $13,172,800 or 34.3 p.c.; Prairie Provinces $8,543,500 or 22.3 p.c.; British Columbia $2,097,400 or 5.5 p.c. and Maritime $784,000 or 2 p.c.

The cumulative total of contracts actually let for the first seven months, now 21.6 p.c. ahead of the same period of 1927, shows that 35.7 p.c. of all work is in the business building classification, totalling $105,297,00.0 Residential accounts for $85,566,200 or 29.1 p.c., Public Works and Utilities $60,488,100 or 20.5 p.c. and Industrial $43,265,600 or 14.7 p.c. By divisions, Ontario now stands at $112,416,800 or 38.1 p.c.; Quebec $93,828,700 or 31.5 p.c.; Prairie Provinces $41,763,400 or 14.2 p.c.; Maritimes $25,794,800 or 8.8 p.c. and British Columbia $21,813,200 or 7.4 p.c.

MEMORIAL GATE WILL BE BUILT

COMMITTEE MEETS.

The Parks committee of the City Council at its meeting last night decided to erect a memorial gate at the Monaghan road entrance to Jackson Park. Last year the committee erected a gate in honor of Mrs. Nicholls at the Oval and the erection of the gate this year is part of its policy to erect one each year until there is a suitable gate at each entrance to the parks donated to the city by the late Mrs. Nicholls.

A communication was received from the Lawn Bowling Club with reference to the building of greens at James Stevenson Park. The matter was left to the chairman and a committee from the bowling club.

ARRANGEMENTS NOT COMPLETED

Some Hitch in Plans To Bring Out 10,000 Miners as Harvest Workers.

LONDON, Aug. 3 (Canadian Press Cable).—Proposed arrangements to send 10,000 British miners to assist in the Canadian harvest fields have not yet been approved but are still under discussion. The announcement made August 1 by the Canadian Press that the Rt. Hon. L. C. M. S. Amery, Secretary of State for the Dominions, had stated in the House of Commons that the arrangement had been completed, was erroneous, and the result of misinterpretation of the cable.

Considerable disappointment at the failure to arrive at an agreement is being felt in Great Britain. Where the hitch occurs is not exactly clear, but it seems to lie between the Canadian Immigration Department and the Canadian railways, the latter declining to guarantee a year's certain employment for all men taken out or else to return them to Britain.

Living Statues In Store Window

Will there be living statues at the Peterborough Exhibition? If so, they are rehearsing in a local store window. Passing along the street this morning The Examiner noticed two window decorators who were posing quite gracefully (?) for each other's benefit in the show windows, quite unconscious that the many spectators outside were amused by the striking posures these would-be models struck.

KING HAS FAITH IN NEW PACT

Expects Kellogg Scheme To Be Important Guarantee of Peace.

PROROGUES PARLIAMENT.

LONDON, Aug. 3. — (Canadian Press).—Confidence that the Kellogg pact to outlaw war will be an important guarantee of peace was expressed by the King in proroguing Parliament to-day.

The speech from the throne said, "It is my confident expectation that when completed it will constitute a new and important guarantee of the world's peace."

The speech mentioned the appointment of a High Commissioner to Ottawa and the recent merger of Empire cable interests.

which bears his name, the Iroquois Indians, and a great land of lakes, rivers and forests. On his third, and by far the most important of his explorations, he went up the Ottawa, the French river, through Lake Nipissing, down to Lake Huron and thence across Lake Simcoe following through to Sturgeon lake and "down the Otonabee river 'eventually reaching the Bay of Quinte. This reference to the Otonabee suggests that Champlain passed through Peterborough in that period during the seventeenth century.

During these explorations, Champlain encountered other tribes of Indians, notably the Hurons and on his return to France, he urged the French government to send out missionaries The Order of Recollects, who came out were later succeeded by the members of the Jesuit order, many of whom were of noble birth, who gave up lives of security to face untold hardship among the savage races.

Gallant workers

They followed the routes formerly taken by Champlain and were doing a wonderful work until the wars began when the Iroquois began their invasion of the Huron country. Thus Fort Ste. Marie was built as a safety measure, and as a headquarters for the field missionaries. The first farm was cleared nearby and a cemetery established where now stands the Shrine to which a great pilgrimage will take place from this district in the near future. Eventually, the Jesuits were formed to leave the spot, and after living on Chritsian Island for nearly a year ,they made their way back to Loretto, Quebec. Such martyrs to Christianity as Jean de Brebeauf suffered death at this time and discouraging, indeed, was the task of bringing the Word of One God to the Indians.

The Rev. Father Costello's address, historical in its nature, rather than religious, was greatly appreciated, and this appreciation was expressed to him by Kiwanian Isaac McNabb.

Many Announcements

Harry Huffman reminded the members of the inter-club picnic at Cobourg on August 15, and also of the district convention in Kingston, September 24 to 25th. Joe Wearing submitted a generous offer from the Border Transit Company, which proferred two busses as a means of giving children of the Y.W.C.A., St. Vincent's Orphanage, the Salvation Army, and the Children's Shelter, an outing. The company would also provide ice cream and novelties for the children; the only thing that the Kiwanis Club would be asked to do being the serving of lunch. The suggestion was referred to the executive for consideration.

Jack Comstock told of the coming convention of the Ontario Funeral Service Association in the city next week and asked for volunteers to drive their cars to South Beach next Thursday, thereby transporting the visitors, so that a trip around the lakes starting at South Beach might be possible. Dr. Ray Scott issued an invitation to Kiwanians to visit the Jackson Park camp. Among the guests present at to-day's luncheon were: the Rev. Father Paul Costello, J. E. Burnham of St. Petersburgh, Fla.; A. C. Darling of Peterborough; John R. Brown, of Toronto, Ont.; Joe Sills, of St. Paul; J. H. Percy of Hamilton; W. F. Moore, of Toronto.

TWO MEN ESCAPE FROM HULL JAIL

Prisoners Overpower Turnkeys When They Open Cell This Morning.

HULL, Que., Aug. 3 (Canadian Press).—Ferrier Gratton, of St. Pierre de Wakefield, and Leo Courville of Perkins Mills, prisoners in Hull Jail awaiting trial for major offences, made a spectacular escape to-day and this afternoon were still at large, although every available law officer was scouring the district for them.

The two men attacked two turnkeys when they opened their cell this morning, overpowered them and thrust them into the cells and locked the doors. The guards suffered no injuries.

LOCAL LADIES FINISH SECOND

THREE RINKS PLAY.

Thirteen ladies from the Peterborough Bowling Club motored to Cobourg early yesterday morning to attend the bowling tournament there, but probably owing to the unlucky thirteen, found the bowling greens there when they arrived more like a swimming pool than a bowling green. There had been a heavy shower there at 8.30 a.m., but by constant tweeping and dipping water from the ditches and with the assistance of Old Sol and the strong breeze, at 1.30 the caretakers got the green in shape so the tournament could be proceeded with. Twenty-two rinks of lady bowlers were entered from Belleville, Deseronto, Stirling, Tweed, Campbellford, Peterborough, and Cobourg.

Mrs. Donald MacDonald, of Cobourg, a member of the Town Council there, gave a splendid address of welcome, demonstrating the fact that women can certainly take their place on the public platform.

The cup and the first prizes of silver cake baskets were carried off by Miss Hurley's rink of Belleville, composed of Miss Hurley (skip), Mrs. Bumstead (vice), Mrs. Duff and Mrs. Davis, with three wins and a plus of twenty-four.

Mrs. G. Coleman's rink of Peterborough, composed of Mrs. Coleman (skip), Mrs. Hutchinson (vice), Mrs. Wright and Mrs. Yeotes, were close runners-up, winning the second prizes of silver bread trays, with three wins and a plus of twenty.

Mrs. Dolan's Belleville rink, composed of Mrs. Dolan (skip), Mrs. Lotteser, Mrs. Deroche and Mrs. Ackerman, won the third prizes, linen table cloths.

The prize for two wins with the highest plus, a pair of embroidered towels, went to Mrs. Reeves' rink of Tweed, composed of Mrs. Reeves (skip), Mrs. Houston (vice), Mrs. Wagar and Mrs. Hindle.

The prizes for one win, with the highest plus, silk hose, went to Mrs. Jennings' rink of Cobourg, composed of Mrs. Jennings (skip), Mrs. Mitchell (vice), Mrs. Melville, Mrs. H. Skitch.

The prizes were presented by Mrs. MacDonald and the executive of the Cobourg Club.

BOYLE STORES ARE EXPANDING

Chain of Groceries Will Be Started Through Eastern Ontario.

COMPANY FORMED.

On June 30th, 1920, at 168 Charlotte Street, Peterborough, H. J. Boyle opened the first unit of his present chain of quality grocery stores. His business continued to increase and Mr. Boyle was quick to grasp the fact that the Chain Grocer was in a better position to successfully merchandise his goods than the individual store. He therefore, with this end in view, opened additional stores from time to time, until at the present time there are six of them scattered throughout the city of Peterborough and one in Lindsay.

The fact that last year in the United States, three chain systems did about one billion dollars in business with net earnings of approximately thirty-five million dollars, testifies to the soundness of chain store operation. Since the opening of the first Boyle store in Peterborough, nearly $740,000.00 in groceries has been sold, and of this amount, over $200,000.00 was sold by five stores during 1927.

Two additional stores have been opened since the first of the year and a program of expansion has been instituted to place additional stores in most of the important centres of Central and Eastern Ontario, including suoh places as Oshawa, Belleville, Port Hope, Cobourg, Trenton, Kingston, Brockville, Gananoque, Hastings, Tweed, Campbellford, etc. The Provincial Government has granted a charter under the name of H. J. Boyle Co., Ltd., and Mr. Boyle will become president and general manager, with H. J. McCannan, real estate broker; I. P. McNabb, district manager of the Dominion Life; Harry Huffman, contractor and member of the City Council; J. Dewart, grain broker, and B. Pringle as directors.

Mr. Boyle was born in Almonte, Ontario, and received his early business training there. Prior to 1915 he was employed by the Almonte Gazette. In 1915 he enlisted with the 73rd Royal Highlanders of Montreal, and served overseas until March, 1917. Since his commencement of business in Peterborough he has won the admiration and respect of all with whom he came in contact. He has been particularly active in the Kiwanis Club, and has acted as treasurer of that body for the past year.

His keen business judgment and dogged determination have been the biggest factors of his success and with continued earnest effort the plans which have been formulated will develop a very large and profitable business.

The policy of the Boyle Stores has always been to create confidence with their customers. "A Little More for a Little Less," and the finest quality always. Customers are constantly reminded that their wants and wishes are the "laws" by which each store is governed. Suggestions from patrons have always been invited, and the result is a progressive growing business. Housewives know that at Boyle's they will get value for their money and complete satisfaction with every purchase.

MRS. FIELDING LAID TO REST

Former Finance Minister Unable to Attend His Wife's Funeral.

PREMIER PRESENT.

OTTAWA, Aug. 3.—(Special). — The government of Canada and His Majesty himself were represented at the funeral this afternoon of Mrs. W. S. Fielding, wife of the Rt. Hon. W. S. Fielding. Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King represented the government and Colonel Willis O'Connor, A.D.C., the Governor General.

The funeral took place from the family residence where service was held at 3:30. Rev. Dr. Woodside of Chalmers United Church Church officiated assisted by Rev. C. Hepburn of All Saints'. Interment took place in the family grave at the Beechwood cemetery.

Mr. Laurier's finance minister did not see his beloved wife laid to her rest, for he has been seriously ill for some time and was unable to leave his bed even for the funeral. The principal figure at the obsequies however, was the man whom he and Sir Wilfrid brought into political prominence and whom is now prime minister of Canada Then within a stones throw of Mrs. Fielding's grave was the last resting place of Sir Wilfrid. Beechwood Cemetery is adjacent to that of otre Dame where Sir Wilfrid is buried.

With Sir Wilfrid Laurier s buried Lady Laurier, who was a close friend of the late Mrs. Fielding. As their husbands climbed step by step in the affairs or the Dominion, Lady Laurier and Mrs. Fielding were their close companions and inspired them to greater things.

The Treasurer Already Receiving Subscriptions

Response to the Opportunity to Contribute to Citizens' War Memorial is Good.

The opportunity given to the citizens to contribute to Peterborough's War Memorial which will be completed in from four to six weeks time is already being taken advantage of by some of our people. It will take another week before all the material is through the Post Office. Subscriptions of $1.00, $2.00, $5.00 and $25.00 and up have already been received and it was felt that every home in the city would make an effort to contribute an amount equal to their means for this now worthy object. To-day, just make up your mind to fill in the card and mail your amount to the secretary in the envelope for that purpose you have received.

HEAR RUSSIA WILL SIGN PEACE TREATY

Berlin Official Circles Are Told of Change of Attitude On Part of Soviet.

BERLIN, Aug. 3—Efforts by an official of the German Foreign Office to sound out the possibility of Russia becoming one of the signatories of the Kellogg treaty seem to have borne fruit, according to information received in German political circles.

M. Litvinoff, who spent a few hours in Berlin en route to Moscow, is bearing to his chief definite proposals for the Soviets, which, if accepted, will be submitted to Secretary Kellogg for further discussion with England and France.

It is intimated that this same official of the German Foreign Office, who asserts that he is carrying on negotiations of his own accord and not for the Government, has submitted his aspirations to the American Embassy here as a further step toward paying the way.

The Soviets are understood to be willing not to regard their entrance into the anti-war compact as recognition de facto of their Government by the United States. Moscow also agrees that this action would not be looked upon as a wedge to force England to change her attitude. However, Moscow assumes that adhesion to the treaty would be a long step toward obtaining recognition by Washington and renewed diplomatic relations with England.

So far there has been no direct contact between Washington and Moscow officials, but it is intimated that the time for this contact should soon be ripe.

The Russians at first spurned the idea of being taken into the Kellogg treaty as a supplementary signatory. The fact that they had not been invited at the same time as England, France and other nations was considered a slight on their importance among the nations. However, within the last few days Moscow has changed its attitude, it is learned from an American who has just returned from the Soviet capital.

The Soviets now say that their entering after the others means that they bear no responsibility for framing the instrument or for subsequent changes which they may not fully subscribe to. Moscow feels that the original draft was better than the present compromise and for that reason Russia's admission at a later date would relieve her of the obligation to fight for the Kellogg treaty.

Moscow feels that Russia's role in this multilateral compact against war should be similar to her position in the Disarmament Conference of last year at Geneva. This would give her a chance to offer constructive criticism and openly declare to the world her attitude on armaments, which has undergone a change since the Geneva Conference when the Soviet delegates embarrassed other nations by saying the way to disarm was to disarm completely.

Russia would now endorse a scheme of gradual partial disarmament. Her membership in the Kellogg compact would give her opportunity to put those ideas into practice, she feels.

There is every likelihood that Dr. Stresemann and M. Tchitcherin will discuss the question further when the former returns to Berlin from Carlsbad and the latter arrives here en route from a South German watering place about the 20th of this month.

Though it is officially denied that Dr. Stresemann has had any hand in the negotiations, it is not believed that he would overlook such an opportunity to act as pescemaker and play a leading role in getting the nations closer together. It is argued that with the various Foreign Ministers assembled in Paris the time would be fitting for putting the plan through without the volumes of note exchanging which ordinarily would be necessary.

CHILDREN SET CURTAINS AFIRE

Fire Brigade Responds To Call To Adeline Avenue During Storm.

WARNING ISSUED.

At 735 last night, the chief's car, number 1 motor, and the large ladder truck were called out into the heavy downpour of rain, in answer to a call from 172 Adeline street. Children playing with matches had set fire to the curtains in the residence at that address, but the blaze was quickly extinguished by the firemen. The damage amounted to about $10 or $15, according to Chief Gimblett.

In discussing the fire with The Examiner this morning the chief sounded a further warning to parents who allow matches to be left within reach of their children. "The danger is not alone to property but of the youngsters themselves, and if parents do not use good judgment in the matter, how can we expect the children to do so" said he.

VICTORY FOR U.S. IN 400 METRES

Canadian Runner Finishes Second in Final Track Event.

Ray Burbutti brought the United States its first running track victory by winning the 400 metre championship in a close finish from Jimmy Ball, of Winnipeg. Barbutti's time was 47 4-5 seconds, which is within one-fifth of a second of the Olympic record.

Ball Forces Pace.

Ball just failed by inches to nip Barbutti at the finish and secure the victory. He forced Barbutti to set such a terrific pace that the United States runner collapsed completely at the tape. Ball timed his final spurt a little too late or otherwise he would have been a certain winner, as at the finish he was gaining on Barbutti at every stride, losing out by less than a foot.

MANY PERMITS FOR PLUMBING

Inspector Has Issued 34 This Month For 66 Different Fixtures.

CLOSETS REMOVED.

Plumbing in the city of Peterborough is by no means behind this year according to Plumbing Inspector A. G. Metherall, who this morning gave The Examiner the following interesting statistics from his department. In comparison with similar records of last year, for corresponding periods, they are decidedly favorable.

During the past month of July no less than thirty-four plumbing permits were issued, providing for installation of eighteen water closets, eleven baths, fourteen basins, sixteen sinks, one laundry tub, one combination tray, one urinal, one shower bath, and three floor drains.

Inspections of new and other plumbing, made by Mr. Metherall included twenty nine water tests and seventeen smoke tests, with miscellaneous inspections totalling forty one. No less than forty certificates of completion were issued, while eight more outdoor closets were done away with during the past month. In July last year, there were only 53 fixtures installed, thirteen less than the total for July 1928.

NO REQUEST YET RECEIVED

Dominion Deputy Minister of Agriculture Has Heard Nothing of Embargo.

IN RABIES SCARE.

TORONTO, Aug. 3. — (Canadian Press).—Dr. J. H. Grisdale Deputy Federal Minister of Agriculture, who is in Toronto to-day stated that no request had been received from the Ontario Health authorities, supposed by evidence that the Dominion place an embargo on American dogs to check the rabies epidemic. Dr. Grisdale was speaking in regard to a statement made by Dr. Forbes Godfrey, Ontario Minister of Health, to the effect that the Province had asked an embargo

LEGION STOPS RELIEF MONEY

Campbellford Branch Will Save Funds As Much As Possible For Winter.

NEW CHAIRS ARRIVE.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 3.—There was a very small attendance at the meeting of the local branch of the legion held in the armouries at eight-thirty last night. Major Bygott, the president, being out of town on business and there being none of the vice-presidents present, Comrade McEachern was voted to occupy the chair for the business of the evening. There was much to be discussed since this was the first regular meeting since June, but only matters of immediate importance were dealt with.

One application for membership was accepted. It was also decided that the fee for the second year would be two dollars as set forth in the by-laws but which may be changed by vote of the Legion. This matter was considered since the branch is now in its second year and some of the original memberships are now in arrears.

Relief work came in for considerable discussion and it was pointed out that there were prospects for considerable unemployment among the returned men next winter and that the treasury would receive many urgent calls. It was considered advisable to curtail relief work at the present as much as possible and thus be prepared to assist where necessary when cold weather came. In the course of the discussion several cases and incidents were brought to light which were not fully understood before hand. In order that the funds for this purpose might be more wisely distributed, a motion was passed cancelling all relief work from May till October, both months inclusive. There was, however, a rider attached, that in the case of extreme situations, relief would be forthcoming upon the recommendation of the Executive committee who would be authorized to investigate and report.

Two dozen new chairs for the club rooms which were authorized at the last regular meeting have arrived and are in the rooms, awaiting uncrating and placing. These will add considerably to the appearance of the rooms where the business of the branch is formally transacted, and which have been constantly improved since the formation of the Legion here and the time when they were given quarters there.

OBITUARY

J. C. McCONKEY.

The many friends of the late J. C. McConkey will be shocked to hear of his sudden passing away on the 25th at his summer home at Chemong Lake.

The deceased had been in good health as far as his family knew, and his death was a great shock to them. He leaves to mourn his loss his sorrowing wife, whose maiden name was Ella Fitzgerald, and four sons—Allan, of Canadian Bank of Commerce, Humboldt, Sask.; Austin, of Toledo, Ohio; John E., on the homestead, and Reginald, also a farmer in Smith. Three brothers also survive—Silas, of Selwyn; Austin, of Rochester, and Herbert, of Smith—and six sisters—Mrs. T. Nicholls and Mrs. Portsmith, of Tollard, Alberta; Mrs. J. E. McIlmoyle, of Vancouver; Mrs. A. R. Nicholls, of Peterborough; Mrs. Bell, of Selwyn, and Mrs. Walbraith, of Peterborough.

The funeral was held on Saturday from his old home and was largely attended, showing the esteem in which the deceased was held. Officiating clergymen were Rev. Mr. Stark, of Cleveland, assisted by Rev. Totten, of Bridgenorth.

POST'S BED BUG POISON.

Post's Bed Bug Poison is composed of carbolic acid, Methyl Hydrate and Corrosive sublimate. When this preparation is used according to directions, it is sure death to bed bugs, cockroaches and insects of all descriptions. Two or three applications are all that is necessary, but as it is very poisonous, this preparation should be kept out of reach of children.

WASP IN CAR CAUSES CRASH

Saskatchewan Man Drives Car Into Ditch and Hits Pole.

WIFE BADLY CUT.

MILLBROOK, August 3. — A wasp finding its way into the car driven by Mr. Quibell, of Outlook, Sask., who with his brother and his wife and family were motoring from Campbellcroft to Lindsay, was responsible for a rather serious accident this evening about six o'clock.

The party was coming down Medd's Hill when the yellow-bodied visitor interfered with the comfort of those in the car, the driver, in his efforts to oust the intruder without stopping his car, meeting with disaster. The car went into the ditch and was rammed against a telephone pole, the top being smashed in. Only the fact that the pole was in its way prevented the car from being completely overturned.

Mrs. Quibell had her left arm badly cut by splinters of glass from shoulder to wrist, a number of stitches being necessary when Dr. H. A. Turner gave first-aid at his private hospital where the injured person was brought for medical attention. The others in the car were not hurt, suffering only from nervous shock.

Later in the evening Mrs. Quibell was taken back to her brother-in-law's home at Campbellcroft for convalescence.

Fractures Ankle.

Orval Rowland, the eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Rowland, at the Lower Mill, had his left leg fractured above the ankle on Thursday afternoon, while jumping from a board into the mill pond where he and his companions were swimming.

The board becoming wet, the lad's bare feet slipped on its surface, and in the consequent fall the accident occurred.

He was brought to Dr. H. A. Turner's private hospital for treatment, and later was able to be taken home.

STYLE IS LEADING WOMEN TO COMMIT CRIME, SHE STYS

LOS ANGELES, Aug 2—Style changes which constantly demand the purchase of new outfit of clothing have been a factor in the increase of crime among women, according to Mrs. Nettie J. Yaw, deputy sheriff of Los Angeles county.

There are now an average of 160 women always confined in the Los Angeles county jail, while when she assumed office here 12 years ago there was but one woman imprisoned, Mrs. Yaw said.

According to the deputy sheriff, most of the women serving terms in the Los Angeles jail have been sentenced for passing bad checks in order to obtain money to keep up with the ever changing styles in clothing.

CANADIANS WIN DOUBLES HEAT

Wright and Guest Defeat Dutch Crew By Three Lengths To-day.

FINISH IN GOOD SHAPE.

AMSTERDAM, Holland, August 3 (By T. H. Louden, Special Correspondent of the Canadian Press).—Canada's double sculls crew, Joe Wright and Jack Guest, of the Argonaut Rowing Club, Toronto, defeated the Holland crew in their preliminary heat at the Olympic regatta by three lengths to-day.

The time for the 2,000 metre course on the Sloten Canal was seven minutes 45 seconds.

This was the third victory for Canada in the preliminary heats of the regatta. In the sngles yesterday, Wright eliminated D. H. F. Gunterby, Holland, and the Argonaut crew defeated Denmark in the eights.

Wright and Guest stroked into the lead from the crack of the pistol, rowing thirty six to sixty minutes to Hollands 34. At the 250 metre mark, the Argonaut pair had a length lead, but Holland spurted in the next 250 metres and came up even with the Canadians at the 500 metre flag. They could not keep it up, however, and at the half way mark open water again separated the two crews with Canada out in front. The Canadians continued to pull ahead of their Dutch opponents and were in good shape when they crossed the finish line three lengths ahead.

Two of the three Canadians were eliminated in the 400 metres semi-final at the Olympic Games to-day, leaving James Ball, Winnipeg, to represent Canada in the final late to-day. W. A. Wilson finished fifth, and Phil Edwards, Hamilton, sixth, in one semi-final, while Ball was easily winning the other by a yard from Ray Barbutt of the United States.

Ritola Beats Nurmi

Willie Ritola, of Finland, won the 5,000 metre running championship at the Olympics to-day, succeeding as champion his countryman and rival, Paavo Nurmi.

Nurmi, after sticking to Ritola's heels for the last eight laps, created a sensation by not chasing as Willie closed with a spurt that carried him to the tape 4 0metres ahead of Paavo. Nurmi kept looking at the next man, Edwin Dide, and contented himself with just beating the Swede for second place. Ritola's time was 14 minutes, 38 seconds, nearly seven seconds slower than Nurmi's Olympic record.

Interesting Reading for All the Family

SPOILT MUSIC

A Splendid New Serial by Ruby M. Ayres

THE STORY THUS FAR:

JENNIFER FRY is saved from drowning by NICHOLAS GAUNT, wealthy young man-about-town. Later he takes her to tea and asks to call, but she refuses because she is ashamed of her humble surroundings. They continue their friendship and Jennifer comes to love Nicholas, but he is suddenly called abroad by his mother's illness. During his absence Jennifer's father dies. She reads of his engagement in the paper, and stands in the crowd to see him and his bride come from the church after the wedding. Her mother dies. Five years later she meets Nicholas again. He decides to divorce his wife, Lady Edith. But just then Lady Edith becomes ill. The doctors promise her only a year of life and she makes Gaunt promise not to see Jennifer for that year. Jennifer is angry and decides to be as gay as she can on a legacy of eight thousand pounds left her by an uncle. She gives up her job and goes to work to have a good time. She meets DOLORES and BUDDY, two women who live in the flat above her new dwelling place. Through them she meets CHESNEY, who quarrels about her with Buddy and proposes to Jennifer. Jennifer asks him to wait for her answer. They meet Gaunt and his wife at a night club. Jennifer, tired and unhappy, promises to marry Chesney. Buddy, when she hears of the engagement, tries to kill herself. Lady Gaunt invites Chesney and Jennifer to dinner. Gaunt tells Jennifer she shall never marry Chesney. Jennifer meets MR. WINTER, and MRS. RUDYARD, an old friend of Edith Gaunt's.

CHAPTER XXXII.

Another Meeting.

Just then Chesney came up to his sister and Jennifer. He looked a little angry.

"Are you going to dance with me?" he asked brusquely.

Jennifer laughed.

"Why, of course! What's the matter?"

He swept her into the throng.

"What were you saying to that fellow Winter?" he demanded.

Jennifer's eyes twinkled.

"We were quoting poetry to one another," she said mischievously.

Chesney's eyes flashed angrily.

"Poetry! With that grey-headed old badger!" he growled.

He looked and spoke so like an angry boy, that Jennifer laughed.

"You're not trying to be a Bluebeard, by any chance, are you?" she asked interestedly.

They were close to an archway which led into a passage, and with a swift movement Chesney swept her through it, keeping his arm about her. "I hate to see you interested in any other man," he said with rough jealousy. "I hate to see you with women like Mrs. Rudyard. She's not fit to be in the same room with you. I want to take you right away from London and have you all to myself."

The passage was only dimly lit, and now they were out of sight of the ball-room. Chesney held Jennifer tightly to him.

"What on earth are we waiting for?" he demanded. "Why can't we be married at once? Who wants a smart wedding? I don't! Isn't it good enough for you and me to slip off together?"

Jennifer caught her breath. Last night this was what she herself had meant to suggest, but now her whole heart cried out in protest. "No! no! no!"

She tried to laugh.

"Don't be in such a hurry. Aren't you contented to be engaged for a little while? I thought you were so happy."

"I shall never be happy till you are my wife."

"I told you if you would wait just a month or two. . . ."

He gave a stifled exclamation.

"A month or two! The world may have come to an end by that time. Why not now?"

"Tomorrow?" she teased him.

"Tonight, if you will," he answered recklessly.

She shook her head.

"I must wait till Dolores comes back."

"Dolores! What difference can she make?"

"I should like her to be at my wedding."

Jennifer felt as if she were fighting for her ground inch by inch. Last night she had meant to marry Chesney at once in order to place an impassable barrier between herself and Gaunt, but now, whichever way she looked, in imagination she could see Gaunt barring the way. She could see the little fiery look in his eyes and hear his inexorable voice:

"I will give you one week in which to make up your mind."

She felt Chesney's lips on her cheek, and she cried out and tried to draw away from him.

"Oh, please, please let me go!"

He released her at once, standing back a step, and looking at her with angry, baffled eyes.

"Something has happened to upset you," he said at last. "You've been quite different to me during the last few days——"

He broke off. It seemed as if he was trying to look back, and to find the moment which had first marked the change. Jennifer took his hand repentantly.

"I'm sorry. Nothing has upset me. I only want you to be a little patient."

"When will you marry me?" He was relentless, and for the first time Jennifer felt that he was beyond her control.

She frowned and turned away.

"You hold a pistol to my head," she complained fretfully. "How can I make plans all in a moment?"

"When will you tell me, then?" he urged again. "Tomorrow, or the next day, or next week? I only want some sort of certainty to look forward to."

Jennifer was silent for a moment then she laughed recklessly.

"Give me a week," she said. "I'll tell you in a week's time."

The next few days slipped away uneventfully.

Lulled by Jennifer's promise, Chesney became again the easy-going devoted lover she had always known.

He took her to spend the weekend at his sister's place on the river. The weather was delightful, and Jennifer thoroughly enjoyed herself in spite of the fact that Joey Rudyard was one of the party.

On Sunday evening, when they were all racing down the river in Dolly's extravagant electric launch, Joey gave a sudden exclamation and rose excitedly to her feet.

"It's Edith! Look! Stop! There, she's seen us!"

Chesney, who was driving the launch, turned her dexterously about and brought her alongside the houseboat from the balcony of which Edith Gaunt was excitedly waving to them.

Joey was blowing extravagant kisses to her.

"Darling, what a picture you make! And what on earth are you doing here? What a surprise!"

"We're only here for the day," Edith answered. "Hullo, Miss Fry! How are you? And Dolly, too! Come on board, all of you, and have a cocktail. Nicky's somewhere about. This is my aunt's boat," she explained, not even troubling to lower her voice. "This is a duty call, you know; boring, but necessary. Thank God you've all come!"

She turned and called over her shoulder: "Are you there, Nicky?"

Gaunt came out from the sitting-room. He was dressed in flannels, shirt open at the throat and sleeves rolled up.

Jennifer cast a swift look at him and her heart contracted.

He looked happy and contented enough, she thought resentfully. To the casual onlooker it would have appeared as if he and his wife were the best of friends.

He greeted her coolly and brought her an iced drink.

"Ideal weather for the river," he said. He dropped into a chair beside her and lit a cigarette. "Are you staying with Mrs. Harrup for long?" he asked.

"We are going back to town tomorrow."

She was amazed that she could speak so calmly, for her heart was beating so fast that she was sure he must hear it.

"We are going over to Paris tomorrow," Gaunt said.

"Oh!"

Jennifer felt as if a rough hand had wrung her heart.

That "we" of course meant himself and Edith. She could not trust herself to look at him.

"Edith wants to buy frocks," he went on casually "and I hear there is a new show at the Casino de Paris which is well worth a visit."

"Is there?" She hardly knew what she was saying.

She was remembering that it was a week ago tonight since she and Chesney had dined at the Gaunts' house—a week ago tonight that he had said: "I will give you one week in which to make up your mind." So he had meant nothing after all, seeing that tomorrow he was going to Paris with his wife.

She looked up and found Joey Rudyard's eyes upon her, a queer suspicious little gleam in them, and with an effort she roused herself.

"The river is lovely at this time of the year."

An ironical smile twisted Gaunt's lips.

"Do you remember a day which you and I spent at Cookham some years ago?" he asked.

Jennifer remembered it well. One of those stolen days of Complete happiness before her father died, when she had still been contented with life in the Kilburn High Road.

She tried to answer, but her lips trembled so she could form no words.

Dolly Harrup cried out: "Are you asleep, Jennifer? I've spoken twice and you don't answer."

"I'm so sorry. I didn't hear you. What did you say?"

"Only that it's time we were off," Dolly said dryly. "Joey wants to get a train back to town tonight, and she'll miss it if we don't start at once."

"I'm quite ready," Jennifer said.

Gaunt gave her his hand to assist her into the launch.

"I'm glad to see you looking so well," he said perfunctorily.

"Thank you. I hope you will enjoy Paris," she answered.

He laughed.

"I'm sure I shall," he said carelessly.

Jealousy, cruelly alive and merciless, held her in its grip.

IN DAYS GONE BY

What Peterborough People Read in The Examiner.

25 YEARS AGO TO-DAY.
Tuesday, August 3, 1903.

A short meeting of the Board of Health was held in the town clerk's office, the following members being present: Robert Neill (chairman), Messrs. A. Parker, G. Schneider, Dr. McNulty and Chief Roszel, the sanitary inspector.

Announcement was made of a new Chemong Park bus service.

The annual printers' excursion was held to Jubilee Point, two steamers, "The City of Peterborough" and "The Water Lily" being required to transport the large crowd from the city.

10 YEARS AGO TO-DAY.
Saturday, August 3, 1918.

Large number attended dance at Chemong Park, given by the Peter Robinson Chapter, I.O.D.E. Nearly fifty dollars was realized for Prisoners of War Fund.

The city's appropriation of $500.00 for the purpose of music was apportioned so that the 57th Regiment Band received $350.00 and the Salvation Army Band $150.00.

At a meeting of the City Finance Committee, Alderman Edgar moved that the chief of police be asked to furnish a monthly report of persons holding business licenses who violate any of the city bylaws. He said that he had been informed that some complaints laid at the city police office were lost in the wastebasket.

Local taximan submitted an account for 50 cents for having driven a fireman to a fire on Chamberlain street. Fire Chief Grange, who had refused to certify the item, was asked to furnish the fireman's name.

UNCLE WIGGILY

To-day: Bedtime Story

By HOWARD R. GARIS

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE WHITE BALL

Once upon a time, when Uncle Wiggily was sitting in the grass on top of a hill, a long way from his hollow stump bungalow, all of a sudden the rabbit gentleman heard something go "thump" on the ground close beside him.

"Ho!" cried Mr. Longears and he jumped to one side. "Some one is throwing stones at me!"

But as he looked on the ground he saw a white ball rolling toward him and he knew it was that which had made the thumping sound. At the same time a voice loudly cried:

"Four!"

"Ho! So there are four more balls coming; are there?" asked Uncle

"Why are you hiding behind that stump?"

Wiggily of nobody in particular "Well, then I guess I'd better keep under cover until they are thrown. I don't want to be hit!"

So Uncle Wiggily hid under a stump and waited, but no more white balls came thumping to the ground and pretty soon, after a while, Mr. Longears heard a loud: "Baa-a-a-a!"

"Who is that?" asked the rabbit.

"It is I! Your friend Mr. Butter, the goat," was the answer. And when the goat saw the rabbit he bleated to ask: "Why are you hiding under that stump?"

"I am waiting for whoever threw that first white ball to throw three more to make four, as he yelled he was going to do," said Uncle Wiggily. "Why are you laughing?" he asked the goat, for Uncle Butter was laughing as hard as he could laugh.

"I am laughing because you think three more golf balls will come sailing this way!" bleated Uncle Butter.

"That's what he yelled—four!" said Mr. Longears. "One from four leaves three. There are three more to come."

"Nonsense!" chuckled the goat. "That was somebody playing golf, and when they knock a ball they always yell FORE so no one will be hit. But that FORE isn't like the number FOUR."

"Oh, then I made a mistake!" and Uncle Wiggily laughed at himself. "So there will be no more balls coming this way."

"No," answered the goat, "not unless by accident. And I think whoever knocked this golf ball doesn't know where to look for it or he would have been over this way long before. So if you want a nice, white ball, you might pick it up."

"Since no one else seems to want it I will," said Uncle Wiggily.

He put the golf ball into his pocket, and was going to hop away with Uncle Butter and look for a new adventure when, all of a sudden, out of the bushes came the Bob Cat with his silly little tail.

Now the Bob Cat had seen Uncle Wiggily pick up the white thing and, wishing to play a trick on the rabbit, the Bad Chap growled:

"Where is my golf ball?"

"Your golf ball?" exclaimed Mr. Longears.

"You are joking!" bleated the goat.

"You'll soon find out whether I'm joking or not!" growled the Bob Cat. "You picked up my golf ball that I was playing croquet with and I want it back!" It just shows how much the Bob Cat knew about golf when he thought it was croquet. "Give me that golf ball!" he howled.

"Oh, all right! Here! Take it!" cried Uncle Wiggily. With that he took the white ball out of his pocket, but, instead of handing it gently to the Bad Chap, the bunny uncle threw the golf ball as hard as he could. It hit the Bob Cat on his nose with a terrible thud.

"Oh! Oh, wow! Oh, dear me!" howled the Bad Chap.

"What's the matter?" bleated Uncle Butter. "Didn't you get your golf ball back again?"

"Yes I did. I got it back too much!" howled the Bob Cat. "Oh, my nose! My nose!" and calpping his paw over it to stop the pain, away he ran.

Then Uncle Wiggily and Uncle Butter laughed and went to the ice cream candy store.

LYRICS OF LIFE

PROCESSIONAL.

All Nature has its compl'ement:
The Winter Spring, the rain, the sun.
And forward al' the seasons run,
A pl'an in all things evident.
For every night the morning skies;
For each declivity a hi'l',
And, if we won't or if we wi'l',
Beyond the depths the mountains rise.

Discouraged man, amid the gale,
Some sorrow of some present day;
With roads that lift not far away,
Will' lay him down within the vale.
The soul surrenders to its nights;
And while he hesitates to climb
The gr at procession of his time
Moves on without him to the heights.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

SATURDAY, AUGUST 4, 1928

Adverse signs rule this day, according to astrology, which reads in the stars certain sinister omens.

This is read as rather a depressing rule for aged persons and again the seers call attention to the rapid passing of all who have long enjoyed fame in any of the arts or in any branch of public life.

The new era now well under way is to bring new marvels in science and invention which will outdo all that have preceded them, astrologers foretell.

This is not an auspicious sway for signing contracts or agreements of any sort. Delays may be advantageous.

Labor now comes under a rule that seems to promise much activity along political and economic lines. It is to launch some sort of campaign boomerang, the seers predict.

Jupiter is in an aspect stimulating to American trade which will be most active in the autumn, it is prognosticated.

Crimes will continue to increase, if the stars are rightly read, and drastic measures to combat the desperate conditions in certain cities are foretold.

New fads that women will follow are presaged by the stars which seem to foretell extravagant expenditures for amusement.

A rule is interpreted as most ominous for politics, because bitter contests for office will involve intrigue and physical violence.

All the signs seem to presage great surprises at the polls in the autumn when excitement of an extraordinary character will be nationwide.

Many marriages are to be celebrated in the autumn and there is an aspect read as promise of lasting unions.

Persons whose birthdate it is should be exceedingly circumspect in the coming year which may bring danger of slander or misjudgment. The subjects of this sign usually have practical and philosophical minds.

Children born on this day may be too temperamental for their own best interests. These Leo people usually are extreme in their fortunes and attain either the heights or the depths.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY A GOOD MAN WANTS A REPUTATION FOR BEING BAD

REPUTATION FOR BEING BAD

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.

(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

No man wants to be called a sissy, a milksop, a goody-good. These are terms of scorn and ridicule because they stand for cowardice, weakness, and the lack of manly qualities.

Thus in order to avoid being put in the class with milksops a good man will seek a reputation for being bad. It is generally regarded as a greater compliment to be called a regular devil than to be classed as a sissy.

There are styles in heroes as in dress and religion. Years ago the goody-good man was stylish, hence the numerous hypocrites who feigned a purity of character that did not belong to them. Now that the prevailing style is a person with zip and snap the tendency is to become a hypocrite of the opposite type in claiming a reputation for badness that one does not possess.

A good man wants a reputation for being bad also because of a childish wish to appear grown up, to attract attention by his daring and strength even as young boys who try hard to be "manly." The boy who can chew the biggest cud of tobacco and spit the blackest and farthest gets the leadership of his gang. Somehow men never out-grow this attitude of impressing their fellows with their strength and daring and toughness of brain and brawn.

Polonius in advising his son, Laertes, who is about to leave Paris to complete his education, cautions him against the evils of a great city. But he is afraid the boy will take him too seriously and turn out a good-good, so he ends by telling him not to be too tame, either.

The modern version of this view is expressed in a certain college fraternity song that praises its members by describing them as scholars and gentlemen, "not too fast and not too slow."

Badness in moderation seems to be admired more than goodness in the extreme, hence the desire on the part of a good man for a reputation for being bad.

THE distinguishing goodness of Premium Hams and Bacon led Swift Canadian Co., Limited, years ago, to distinguish the appearance of the product so that identification at the time of purchase would be possible.

Many of these guides to identification, planned by Swift Canadian Co., Limited, for the protection of the purchaser—the branding on the rind, the sanitary wrapper, the blue tag—have become general trade practices.

Now, Swift Canadian Co., Limited, has inaugurated a new method of identification—the name "Swift" branded in dots on the side.

Hereafter, your smallest purchase will show whether you have or have not obtained the genuine Swift's Premium.

FUNERAL DIRECTORS MAY NOT ADVERTISE

Provincial Government Issues New Regulations—Course in Embalming Needed.

TORONTO, August 2. — No breed of frivolous undertakers will shock the sensibilities of Ontario citizens if regulations just enacted by the Provincial Government are enforced.

Tradition, which for years has sufficed to secure dignified and decorous conduct from those who perform the funereal offices, is finally to be reinforced by enactments having all the weight of compulsory law.

Little is left to the undertaker's own decision. No longer like the lawyer will he consult precedent as a guide to conduct. His appropriate etiquette is framed for him in various of the forty-odd clauses now applied to his calling.

Dignity and decorum and the creation of public confidence are the aims which are enjoined upon him. Generally he is allowed to pursue them pretty much as has been his wont. In one respect, however, he is compelled to make an important break with the past. No longer is he permitted to learn from experience; he must secure his proficiency from instruction.

University Course.

The regulations even go so far as to authorize a university course of instruction, or a course of instruction in connection with some other institution of higher learning, upon the embalming art. Students shall enter it only after having served one year's apprenticeship with a licensed funeral director. The subjects of instruction shall include anatomy, sanitary science, and the general practice of embalming. A condition of graduating and licensing shall be two years' service with a licensed funeral director. A further restriction is that each firm shall have not more than one student in its employ for every licensed embalmer.

Leaving the problem of technical qualifications, the regulations concern themselves with the conduct which is to be required from the undertaker in the course of his duties. The provision of suspension for "infamous and disgraceful" behaviour is inserted and the blanket statement of the personal bearing which is considered appropriate is then set forth as follows:

"The personal and professional conduct of a licensed embalmer or funeral director under this Act shall be such as to lend dignity to the profession and to inspire confidence on the part of the public in the members of the profession licensed under this Act."

To Inspire Confidence.

Subsequent clauses lay the funeral director under obligation to manage his business "economically and professionally," so as to reflect credit on the profession and "inspire confidence on the part of the funeral purchasing public."

Radical restrictions are laid upon the right to advertise. It must be exercised only in a "strictly ethical and professional manner and in conformity with the practice of the learned professions." It is forbidden to either directly or indirectly advertise by any other means than a "professional card or announcement, which shall not be larger than two inches by three inches and on which shall be stated only the name, the licensed standing of, and the business address of the person, partnership, firm or corporation, and the telephone number and the name, address, and telephone number of the manager." This card is not to be placed in more than one position in any publication, nor is it to be attached to "any calendar, souvenir or other object or device which may increase its importance or its value for purposes of advertising or publicity."

A postscript to this section adds that its spirit shall apply to the sign used by the funeral director or embalmer at his place of business.

A further disability which is placed upon the undertaker in the promotion of his business is a prohibition of the practice of paying any commission or remuneration to any person for procuring patronage.

The administration of the regulations is placed in the hands of a Board of Examiners constituted under the Funeral Directors' Act passed at the last sesion of the Legislature.

STORE AND HOUSE BURNED TO GROUND

Entire Block Threatened For Time at Port Colborne To-day.

PORT COLBORNE, One., Aug. 2 (Canadian Press).—Fire, which for a time threatened an entire block, completely destroyed the store and house of A. Trevison at the corner of Fares and Louis street, on the east side of the town this morning. The loss is estimated at $10,000.

Campbellford

(Examiner Staff Correspondence).

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 2.—Miss Lilian Smith and Miss Gertrude Maynard are enjoying a vacation by motor to Cleveland, Ohio.

Dr. and Mrs. Heber Teeney, Boston, Mass., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Lawrie, Ranney Street.

Mr. George Bowen, Mrs. Fred. Bolkey and Mr. George Heitzel of Erie, Pa., are visiting Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Hyland, Tice Street.

Scientists are unable to explain the peculiar case of Allen M. Luther, a 50-year-old resident of Dighton, Mass., who all his life has written backwards and read his papers upside down. Fortunately he is able to read and write as other people do if occasion requires.

LOBLAW OPENS CHAIN STORES

Company Intends To Open Twenty Stores in Ontario and Quebec.

WILL ISSUE STOCK.

At least twenty new Loblaw stores will be opened in various centres, chiefly in Ontario and Quebec, during the ensuing twelve months, says the president of the company, T. P. Loblaw, in the report for the last business year which has just been circulated throughout financial circles in Toronto and Montreal. A proposal to issue new capital stock increasing the common capital from 200,000 shares of no par to 300,000 will be laid before a special general meeting to be held along with the ordinary annual meeting on August 8.

Total sales for the year ended May 31, 1928, amounted to $13,975,186, as contrasted with $10,517,093 in 1927, and $7,717,459 in 1926. The ratio of net profit to sales was 5.71 per cent. against 5.98 in the preceding year, and 5.12 in 1926.

Net profit available for dividends was equal to $3.15 per share against $3.06 in 1927 and $2.06 in 1926. At the end of the period under review, there were outstanding 191,650 common shares, 174,234 at the end of 1926. Several non-recurring items were deducted from profit and loss in the year, and if not taken into consideration, the earnings per share would be increased slightly.

Net profit for the period is shown as $796,487, an increase from $529,140 in the previous year, and $395,272 in and common dividends, taxes, premium of preferred shares retired, writing off reorganization expenses of $7,306, and making adjustment of $8,683 re the Alberta company, surplus for the period remained at $461,-792, and with the addition of the balance forward of $902,368, total surplus is brought to $1,364,097. Net working capital shows an improvement of $908,735 comparing with $321,181 at the end of the preceding period. The ratio of current assets to liabilities is a little better than two to one, with the former $1,780,436 and the latter $871,436. Bank advances appear in the balance sheet this year at $193,105. Preferred shares outstanding show a reduction from $547,-to $533,300. Total assets are valued at $4,873,643, and capital assets $2,-383,984, an increase of over $1,300,000.

Mrs. Leonard and son James of Warkworth are staying with Mrs. J. Lagrow at her summer home, Oak Lake.

Mrs. A. Bissonnette accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Neil Bissonnette on a trip to the Sand Banks Thursday.

Miss Nellie Tulloch has returned to the Belleville General Hospital, after a short holiday spent with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Tulloch.

TOURISTS KILLED WHEN CAR STALLS

BEAMSVILLE, Aug. 3.—Two men died almost instantly last night when their motor was struck on the Canadian National Railway crossing about a mile and a half from this town. They were killed and the vehicle was demolished when a Hamilton-bound train crashed into the rear-end of the car stalled on the tracks.

The dead are: R. Montgomery, Jr., and Joseph Butler, both of Waterbury, Conn.

According to John Tiveron, of Beamsville, a youth who witnessed the fatal crash, the car endeavored to cross the tracks but stalled when it reached the middle of the right-of-way. A few seconds later the train, hurling along at a high speed, according to the boy, struck the vehicle at the rear and tossed it nearly 50 feet along the side of the right-of-way. Both occupants must have died instantly.

SUFFERS IN SILENCE.

WINGHAM, Aug. 3.—So seriously injured that she died within a few hours, Mrs. Alexander Campbell drove home with her nephew after an accident and never mentioned that she was hurt. She was 71 years of age.

On the way home from Bayfield, they were crowded off the road by another car. The driver halted so abruptly that Mrs. Campbell was thrown forward violently, striking the front seat. The steering wheel was broken, and all the time it was being fixed the aged woman never mentioned that she had been hurt.

Just as they reached home, Mrs. Campbell lapsed into unconsciousness and died yesterday.

Medical examination revealed that in the crash a rib had been broken, which penetrated the lung.

damaged the plant to a considerable extent.

As a marked contrast to the industrious paper mill, the Hydro Pulp mill which lies immediately to the north of the Paper Mill, is as silent as the grave. The intense silence is increased as one walks through the various rooms of the plant. Immediately inside the main door, loads of pulp still remain in the big hydraulic presses, although practically every drop of water has been pressed out of the pulp and its edges are dry as tinder. But there is not the usual film of water covering the massive steel pistons. They are quite dry and a thin film of rust is forming on their surfaces. The lunch and locker room is vacant. There is not a coat or lunch pail to be seen hanging on the wall. In the next room where the pulp is cut from the machines after it has been through the grinder, all is silent save for a jet of water running out aimlessly on to the floor. The great grinders are not revolving in their froth of pulpy water which looks and feels like hot soap suds, nor is their any "porridge" still hot, oozing from the chinks around the steel openings where the wood is fed to hungry monsters.

In the building itself there is only one man at work. He is the foreman of one of the shifts and is doing some necessary cleaning up and minor repairs that will aid materially in the amount of production when the mill is again running. As though in keeping with the atmosphere of the mill the high wooded hill on the far side of the river and the peacefully flowing stream far below, sliding over its smooth bed of rock do not bespeak bustling industry but rather cast over all a sense of rest and quiet.

The mill office staff is not rushed with work. This afternoon there was only one man to be found there and he seemed pleased that he was to have some person to talk to for a few minutes.

In all the plant, there was only one department where work was really going on. That was at the rosser house where the pulp wood as it is sent out of the bush is sawn into the proper length for the grinder and the bark removed at the same time. From the saws and rosser, is is carried on an overhead carrier way and deposited in huge pyramids ready for the men who supply the grinders

The mill has been closed for approximately three weeks and at the present time, there has been nothing definite as to when operation will be commenced.

CONTROL OF PORTS NEXT NANKING STEP

Finance Minister Says Nationalists Consider Ending Foreign Customs Administration.

DEMOBILIZATION BIG TASK.

Large Revolutionary Army Is Spread Out Over Whole Empire.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 3.—T. V. Soong, Nanking's Minister of Finance, declared yesterday that "China at present has no Director-General of Customs" and intimated that the entire reorganization of foreign supervision of the Chinese maritime Customs administration will be among the subjects to be discussed at the fifth plenary session of the Kuomintang Party, preliminary meetings for which opened Wednesday at Nanking.

Mr. Soong referred to the dismissal of Sir Francis Aglen, the last actual Director General of Customs, by Marshal Chang Tso-lin a year ago last February and the interim appointment of A. H. F. Edwardes as Acting Director General for one year, stating that Mr. Edwardes's term of office expired at the end of one year, which was Feb. 1, 1928.

"Thus China has no Director General of Customs, and has not had since last February," Mr. Soong remarked, discussing this most important phase of foreign relations immediately affecting the position of foreign powers in China.

Mr. Soong, in a press interview just prior to departing for Nanking expressed himself as firmly convinced that the Nationalist Government intends to terminate foreign control of the Customs administration, intimating that when other Powers follow America's lead in offering complete Customs autonomy, the problem will not be so difficult, but remains highly important to China's economic future. Most foreign loans are secured by the Customs, since there is the traditional foreign supervision of this as well as of the salt gabelle. The latter, however, in the past year has come into Chinese control. Incidentally, rapid progress is being made in transference of the Customs administration seat to this area, either to Nanking or Shanghai as well as the rejuvenated salt gabelle and postal administration.

Illness Bars Yen From Conference.

In the meantime all eyes are turned toward Nanking, where, with the exception of Yen Hsi-shan, Governor of Shansi, who was sent to a hospital, while en route from Peking and is critically ill, all military and civil leaders of China are gathering to discuss the next phase of the revolution.

Among the outstanding problems other than foreign treaty revision and the Japanese problem are the disbanding of the mammoth revolutionary army spread across the broad face of China and reconstruction. Manchuria apparently is falling into line, earlier reports of a breach in negotiations now seeming to be false. At least the original friction is past and young Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang is understood to have advised Nanking he is ready to accede to the Nationalist Government's terms to join in an effort to reach a peaceful unity among all factions in China from Siberia to Burma. The exact terms of the agreement are not announced, but the belief is growing that Manchuria intends to fly the Nationalist flag and that its leaders are sympathetic toward the Nationalist Government and at least willing to try the experiment if the Central Government does not seek to usurp too much of its autonomy.

Shantung Force Still Encamped.

There still are rumors that Southern armies under General Pei Chung-hsi, capturer of Shanghai and among the ablest of the young militarists in the revolution, is intending to advance into the Shanhaikdwan area above Tientsin where, at the termination of the Great Wall, several thousands of Shantung troops continue encamped, with little or no leadership, menacing the community. It is doubtful, however, whether this little "war" causes much trouble, with one possible exception, that the rabble might retreat toward Manchuria, in which eventually the Japanese certainly will not permit them to pass the wall, and a dash is liable to occur.

As far as the American treaty situation is concerned, it is understood that the Nationalist Government intends to let the matter stand. A Chinese paper carrying a semi-official report from the Foreign Office explains the Government's last note as appointing Dr. C. C. Wu to act if and when Washington and Nanking decide to open negotiations to revise phases of the treaty on relations other than the tariff.

CHEESEMAKERS HOLD MEETING

be stamped on cheese and box. This, he explained, was primarily to offset the opinion current in England that Canadian cheese could only be manufactured in the months of June and October.

A motion was next passed approving the action of Inspector Bailey in closing Daisy factory.

Another motion was carried to the effect that the prizes to be awarded by the association to its cheesemakers be awarded according to highest average score.

Roy Brown, cheesemaker at Stanwood, was then called upon as a visiting speaker. He asserted that the main thing in cheese-making was to get the right class of milk. Milking machines and careless farmers were, in his opinion, the cheesemaker's greatest drawbacks.

W. Henderson, of Foxboro, cheesemaker of forty years' experience, spoke next. Having stressed the need of co-operation, he pointed out that regard should be shown for flavor, for flavor is forty per cent. He also brought out the value of cold storage, maintaining that no factory should be without one. He advised that cloths be not used in the cleaning of cans because they affect flavor. Brushes instead should be used. Speaking as one of the directors of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association, he would say that they were going to work for the best interests of the cheese business. The industry was just commencing to get on a fair footing. The association had helped him as a maker more in the one year of its existence than he had been helped in any ten years before.

Hugh Moloney, one of the leading agriculturists of Marmora Township, in summing up what had been spoken, referred to the association as doing a great amount of good, and emphasized the fact that the care and handling of milk was something all should dwell upon.

John Finnegan, host of the evening, had a few characteristic remarks to make, mentioning among other things that milk should be cooled every night, irrespective of temperature outdoors, to 60 or 65 degrees.

E. O'Connor, president of Silver Leaf factory, Deloro, in a witty speech spoke in highest praise of the association, and said it was up to Canadian farmers to hold their place on the British market with their cheese production.

W. J. Cottrell spoke as one of the guests of the evening.

A vote of thanks having been extended to speakers and visitors, luncheon was served by Mrs. Finnegan and lady helpers, which provoked a final hearty vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Finnegan for their contribution to the evening's profit and pleasure.

The Flying Dutchman was a spectral ship seen off the Cape of Good Hope in stormy weather and considered unlucky.

Fear is felt for the safety of four United States explorers who are reported missing in Northern Saskatchewan, while en route to Chesterfield Inlet. The party consists of John D. Fuller of Culver, Ind.; Ralston Lattimer of Savannah, Ga.; Gordon C. Armstrong, Britt, Iowa; and Gilbert Jacobs, also of Iowa. The map above illustrates their proposed route from The Pas, Manitoba, which they left more than a month ago, up to Chesterfield Inlet. The circle marks the region at the south end of Reindeer Lake, where the four were last heard from.

MONTREAL LADIES TAKE UP FLYING

Necessary to Have Confidence in One's Instructor to Learn Easily.

MONTREAL, Que., August 3 (Canadian Press).—While Montreal women have not taken to flying in great numbers, those who have availed themselves of the opportunity for lessons are enthusiastic, and rather wonder that more women have not caught the contagion of the sport. Mrs. Eric Reddy, who is learning how to take the air, commented on the charm of sailing over large white clouds when all earthly Montreal things were discouragingly warm, and another learner, Mrs. W. S. Lighthall, was equally pleased with her flying.

The flyers were attired in light summer costumes with the temporary addition of goggles and helmet. The simplicity and accessibility of the sport was noted as a point in its favor. At present, it was pointed out, the only real difficulty is in finding hours for lessons, as there are numerous learners.

Confidence in one's instructor was indicated as the great asset for a beginner. Mrs. Reddy commented on the fact that both Lady Bailey and Lady Heath, the well-known English flyers had received instruction when learning from F. G. M. Sparks, who is at present instructor at the Montreal Light Aeroplane Club, and she expressed the opinion that this was a particularly good opportunity for Montreal women who would take up the sport.

The fascination of the game is the lesser point in taking lessons, it was pointed out. One flyer said she was looking forward to the day a few years hence when young people would drive their own planes just as they now drive their own cars, and when it would be convenient to hop up to one's cottage in the Laurentians for the day.

TRAVEL-LOG.

WHERE JULIUS CAESAR WAS KILLED.

Rich as have been the gifts of the Church to the eternal city of Rome, many and many a time I have wished that the so-called paganism of Rome's pre-christian days had been preserved for the modern generations to visit the sites of Rome's oldest past without reference to its religious tradition of later centuries. In a few spots this is so, but the veneer of the later though christian tradition has obliterated or hidden much. For example, the site of the ancient Curia of Pompeii, where Julius Caesar was assassinated, is now partly covered by the Church of St. Andrea della Valle, so named for the Palace of the Della Valle opposite. It was begun by Olivieri in 1504 and continued by Carlo Maderna till 1665. In it one sees much of real interest, such as the Lancellotti Chapel, the Holy Family has reliefs of Raggi, the tombs of Pius II and III, the copula which is second only to St. Peter's, and painted by Lanfranco, the Frescoes of Preti, and last but so far from least, the Strozzi Chapel designed by Michael-Angelo, but how fine it would be if all on this site recalled the glory not of the Middle Ages, but of the days of Julius Caesar who made it a shrine forever by his blood!

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

This rose colored taffeta frock is trimmed with matching tulle ruffles and embroidery.

The desire on the part of girls of seventeen, eighteen, twenty, to adopt the sophisticated fashions of the woman of thirty or thereabouts seems to be fast fading away.

Ten years or so ago there were girls still in their teens who were not happy until they had been allowed to wear sophisticated evening gowns of black satin or jade green. They yearned to wear heavy, dangling earrings that were anything but girlish. Proudly they thought that women of thirty had better times than girls of twenty or perhaps they took seriously the remarks popular with novelists of those days that a woman was never truly charming until she was thirty.

Among the young girls I know at present I can find little of that desire to seem older than they are. Perhaps because they really are sophisticated nowadays they realize that eighteen, nineteen—twenty—have their charms that cannot be matched by those of thirty. Their chief concern, it would seem, is no longer to dress like their charming mothers but to keep their charming mammas from dressing like themselves.

It was because older women adopted the bob, these younger girls have told me, that the flappers started to let their hair grow again. And because women old enough to be grandmothers took to wearing skirts to their knees that girls in their teens started in wearing their evening frocks down to their ankles.

And now, I understand, there is a much greater demand among the younger fry for frocks that really are girlish than there has been for many, many years. They want frocks that really are girlish, frocks so decidedly "jeunne fille" that mothers and grandmothers won't dare to wear them. So long as the young girl fashions were slender and boyish, slightly boydenish, older women fearlessly adopted them. But these new girlish clothes are dainty, feminine, almost Victorian—and any older woman not actually in her dotage knows that clothes of this sort add to rather than detract from her apparent age.

No. 14.

Often a man will see a great deal of beauty in a woman who is considered absolutely plain by his women companions. "What? You think she is a pretty girl?" a woman will ask and turn to look critically at a lady who is wearing a somewhat out-of-date gown, with hair just a little out of the mode and a manner that lacks finish. She is looking at the other woman from her own eyes and not from those of her companion. If she could get a mental glance into his cranium, she would see there the memory of an old daguerrotype that rested long ago in a bureau drawer at home. It presented a picture of his mother in her youthful days. She wore a muslin dress with lace ruffles around the throat, her hair was drawn softly and not too firmly down about her temples and she had a shy manner. Do you see the resemblance to the girl who intrigues his manhood fancy? The next time you have occasion to wonder audibly why a gay young Lothario becomes smitten with a rather homely, red-haired girl, see if you can find out the complexion of his mother or of the lady with red hair who used to give him hot ginger cookies when he was a tiny, lonesome boy.

HUSKY MAN SEEKS AID

TORONTO, Ont., August 3—(Canadian Press).—Appeal for protection against possible assault on him by his wife was the strange request heard from a husky man by Magistrate Brunton in County Police Court. The case was adjourned for a week, the court expressing the opinion that "a big fellow" like the complainant should be able to protect himself.

"TOBY"

By Dorothy Douglas.

Rupert Harris, successful young writer of short stories, opened his morning mail with an unusual sense of surprise. It was not often that he got three returned manuscripts in one batch, and it made him sit up and do a bit of thinking.

He knew that writers' brains become fagged at times and certainly he had turned out an immense pile of work during the last year.

The last letter he opened bore out the theory that a man's brain does become stagnant to a degree that he himself does not realize. The letter, being from a perfectly unknown person, was not only interesting but it involved Harris in a curious situation that was not without piquancy, whether the writer was male or female.

The letter was signed merely "Toby" and might mean most anyone.

"Dear Mr. Harris:—You must pardon me for writing to you at all but I just can't help saying that during the last year I have read ever so many of your stories in all the magazines but that lately they have fallen off in interest.

"I feel sure that your brain must be quite tired out and perhaps in need of new ideas. I am enclosing a number of ideas which I should love to have you make use of and can promise they are my own.

"For the time being I wish to remain nonexistent to you as a personality but if, at the end of a year or so I am still living I may perhaps make myself known to you. At present I am under sentence of a possible exit from this world—the doctors are doing all they can but—there is just a chance that I may pass out—in that case you will naturally never hear from me. If I recover, you will get a batch of plots from time to time as my brain swims with them.

"Please believe me, most sincerely your well wisher, Toby."

Harris sat up and rubbed his eyes and scrambled his hair into a perfect riot over that letter. To say that it hit him in a vital spot was putting it mildly. It also sent a wave of tremendous inspiration through his sagging imagination.

He dashed swiftly through the plots. They were wildly fantastic but thrilling and interesting. Harris's brain leaped about among them like a fox terrier scenting a bone. He dug into the atmosphere of them and remained there until some half dozen stories fell hot off his machine.

Checks rolled in from delighted editors as a result and Harris always put half of each check under a little account called "Toby."

It was six months after the first batch of stories had reached him before Harris again heard from Toby.

The letter this time had no beginning but just started as if carrying on a conversation.

"The stories are simply splendid. I had no idea you could make so much of those plots, and it has inspired me to jot down a lot more.

"I am feeling much better now and am hopeful of remaining in this good old world which we perhaps do not appreciate until we are on the threshold of that Other World of which we know so little."

Harris's brain whirled about as if a cyclone had struck it. What kind of person was this to leave him in such complete ignorance of his or her identity?

The second batch of ideas were far and away ahead of the first and Harris plunged into the working out of them with greater avidity than the first lot.

The result was checks of tremendously flattering figures—to be divided between the account marked Toby and his own.

Harris was standing in mid stream in the woods one day catching lovely little rainbow trout and putting them back in the stream again for the sheer joy of watching them squirm back into the joy of life. It reminded him somehow of Toby. Toby who had been under sentence for the Great Adventure and who had apparently been restored to health and given a new lease on life—even as the happy little trout.

He was interrupted in his dreams by a splash and looking along stream observed a girl sputtering about in the water. She had slipped on a rock.

Harris dropped his fishing basket and it floated down stream while he hurried to the damsel in distress.

He soon had her in his arms and was wading to the bank. Her face was laughing and brown and her lips were so scarlet that Harris could scarcely refrain from dropping the only thing possible on such lips.

"Oh," she said softly, "how good of you to salvage me from that cold water. It certainly was silly of me to slip."

"Not so silly," said Harris.

"I'm Rupert Harris," he said quickly. "Who are you?"

"I know," she said with brilliant roses fanning her cheeks. "I have had your photograph on my dressing table for two years—framed in a solid silver frame with amethysts in it. The rest are framed in wood. She glanced up at Harris and her eyes made his head swim. "I'm—Toby." She laughed. "I—slipped on that rock—purposely—"

Harris dragged her back into his arms. "It's too wonderful," he said softly.

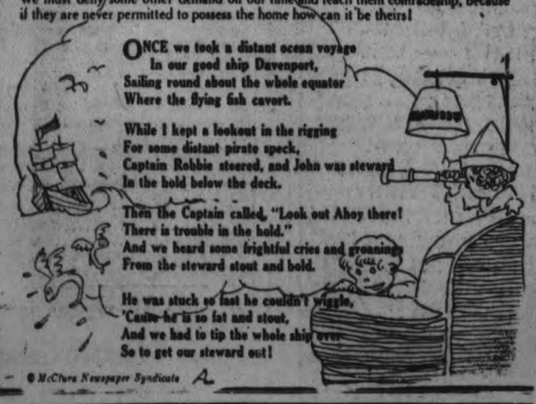
The Davenport Ship

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

IN theory many parents covet making the home a rendezvous for the children and their companions. They want the children to enjoy coming home with their friends and they dream of happy social times together later on. Then comes the day when they realize this condition does not exist. The children are anywhere but at home. They meet their friends some other place. Perhaps the parents realize, or perhaps they never reason out, that this weening away from home began whehn as wee children, they were too mussy, too noisy, too muddy, too many with their friends, too hard on the furniture and nerves and were made to realize it. So they played elsewhere. If we are to give the home over to the children, then it must be practically so, not only in theory. Let them play and teach them to straighten up afterwards. We must deny some other demand on our time and teach them comradeship, because if they are never permitted to possess the home how can it be theirs!



ONCE we took a distant ocean voyage
In our good ship Davenport,
Sailing round about the whole equator
Where the flying fish cavort.

While I kept a lookout in the rigging
For some distant pirate speck,
Captain Robbie steered, and John was steward
In the hold below the deck.

Then the Captain called, "Look out Ahoy there!
There is trouble in the hold."
And we heard some frightful cries and groanings
From the steward stout and bold.

He was stuck so fast he couldn't wiggle,
'Cause he is so fat and stout,
And we had to tip the whole ship over
So to get our steward out!

Nurmi's Time Shattered By Fellow Countryman

Finlander Sets New Record

Outruns French Threat 1,500 Metres Event at Amsterdam.

THREE MARKS MADE

Javelin Honors Return to Sweden for First Time Since 1912.

OLYMPIC STADIUM, Amsterdam, Aug. 3 (Canadian Press)—Finland trotted out a successor to Nurmi in the Olympic 1,500 metres yesterday afternoon and the slim 20-year star, Harry Larva, responded by outrunning the French threat, "Chesty" Jules Ladoumegue, and smashing Paavo's Olympic record.

This latest addition to the Flying Finns demonstrated why Nurmi is now confining his efforts to the longer distances by galloping around the field and past all rivals to break the tape in 3 minutes 53 1-5 seconds, just 2-5 seconds better than Nurmi's 1924 record.

Larva's victory in this Olympic classic featured the fifth day of the Olympic track and field competition. One world's and two more Olympic records went by the boards as Finland, Sweden, Germany and Japan divided the day's principal spoils.

Return to Sweden

Javelin honors returned to Sweden for the first time since 1912 as a young sign painter, E. H. Lundquist, smashed the Olympic record with a throw the equivalent of 218 feet 6⅞ inches, and beat a field in which all six finalists surpassed 207 feet. Mikio Oda won the hop, step and jump for Japan's first Olympic championship with 49 feet 10 13-16 inches. The 1924 champion, A. W. Abkaw Winter of Australia, failed to qualify.

The only women's final, the 800 metres, produced one of the day's most sensational races and won by a sturdy German frau, Lina Radke, in world's record time, as all six point winners, including Jean Thompson and Fanny Rosenfeld, Canada, bettered the former mark. Frau Radke's time was 2 minutes 16 4-5 seconds, more than 7 seconds faster than her own former world's record.

In the unofficial point score Finland served notice it is ready to make a strong finish by moving up to second place with 48, displacing Britain whose total after 15 events is now 37. Canada is now in fourth place with 28. The United States leads with 128½ points.

Finland's javelin throwers, including Eino Penttila, world's record holder, suffered setbacks at the hands of the young Swede, but Larva and his teammate Eino Porje put on a spectacular 1,500 metre act, to even matters.

PONTYPOOL LOSE FIRST GAME 6-5

Defeated by Yelverton in the Play - Off Series.

(Examiner Correspondence)

PONTYPOOL, August 3.—After being victorious in both games of the semi-finals with Yelverton the local team were outlucked in the first game of the finals with Nestleton by 6-5 score. Owing to the absence of some of the Nelstleton team the game was practically an hour late in starting which necessitated having to play the last innings in darkness. The first three innings saw Pontypool leading by five runs to nil while Nestleton added three when Payne and Lawery in the outfield missed a couple of easy outs in the fourth. At the end of the fifth innings the score was 5-3 in favor of Pontypool but in the last half of the sixth Nestleton scored three runs and enough to win. Clarke pitched one of the best games of his career in one inning retiring the side by the strike out route. He also did some timely hitting which included a double. Probably the weakest place in the local outfit was their baserunning and outfielding. H. Lawery was also a heavy hitter for the locals reaching first safe on every occasion while Chapman at short pulled of some very fast fielding. Nestleton best were the three Philip brothers, Percy doing the twirling, Fred at first and Howard at third. Hill and Jones also did good work for Nestleton.

The return game has not been decided on yet but a lively tilt will be certain. The umpires were Sisson at the plate, and Vinning on the bases.

The local line up was:

Broken or cracked glass windows on an automobile are dangerous as well as unsightly. If the glass has broken in a clean crack, without shattering at any point, it can be repaired so that the crack will hardy be visible.

Obtain a good grade of glass or celluloid cement and a sheet of celluloid. Remove the glass and cement it, at the cracks, laying the glass on a perfectly smooth surface if possible. Next, with a soft brush, paint the surface of the glass with the cement. Lay on the sheet of celluloid smoothly to avoid air bubble. Place a smooth board on the celluloid with weights on top of it until the cement has dried.—Popular Science Monthly.

C. G. E. Add to Lead in City Softball League

VIEWS ON SPORT

K. of C. and DeLaval meet tonight in softball fixture at Confederation Park. There will be no game on Saturday night.

The Electricians again added to their lead in the city softball league when they defeated the Lockworks last night. Owing to darkness and rain the game was called at the end of the seventh inning with the score standing 3-1 in favor of the C.G.E.

* * * * * * *

The victors staged the first t riple play of the season to pull themselves out of a tight hole in the fifth frame when Delahey drove a long fly to Playford who juggled it and appeared as if he would have dropped it but he caught the batter out and threw it to Powell and while the runners were trying to recover themselves they were thrown out at second and third for a triple putout.

Cognawagas and Bethany, responding to a request to step on the gas, are playing in Bethany this evening. This game is the replay of a tie score. Crescents play their game with Bethany on Monday or Tuesday of next week. With Vannest on the firing line, Cogs are hopeful of a win tonight.

The cream of the paddlers from twenty-one rowing clubs are ready to compete Saturday in the twenty-sixth annual regatta of the Canadian Canoe Association to be held on the Dominion championship course in the old Lachine canal. This year's meet promises to be the most cleverly contested meet ever staged by this organized competition in the history of the association.

The Canadian athletes did well at Amsterdam yesterday when three sprinters qualified for the 400 metres semi-final. Jean Thompson, Penetang, was fourth and Fanny Rosenfeld fifth in the women's 800 metre final, each breaking an old world record. Joe Wright, jr., starred in the scull preliminary and the Argonaut eight, Toronto, defeated Denmark in preliminary of the eight-oared contests.

BIG CHANCE ON SATURDAY FOR PETES TO GAIN

A HARD FIGHT

Both Teams Expect to Have Strongest Line-up in Action.

The defeat of Kingston at the hands of Belleville on Wednesday helped to further tighten up the Central Ontario League race and at present the Ponies are only half a game haead of the Petes although a win over Deloro to-night when they play in Kingston would leave the margin a full game.

However what ever happens in the Kingston-Deloro game this evening the Petes can close in on the Ponies and Motorists to-morrow when the Oshawa team will be here for an all-important battle. A Peterborough win in this fixture would leave the Petes only a game and a half behind Oshawa and either tied with or a half game behind the Ponies. And as Oshawa and Kingston clash in a double header in Kingston on Monday the possibilities are interesting, to say the least.

It will be called at 3 o'clock and both teams expect to have their strongest line up in action.

The biggest crowd of the season is expected.

Wireless Golf Match Is Being Arranged Between New York And Honolulu Teams

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Teams reprssenting the New York and Honolulu Rotary Club will engage in what is said to be the first wireless golf match in history during the coming month.

The match is the outcome of a challenge taken to Hawaii by James Sanderson, Chairman of the Sports Committee of the New York Club, and calls for teams of from twelve to sixteen players a side to play in the basis of their club handicaps, net scores to count.

The members of the Honolulu Club have accepted the challenge and the match probably will take place on Sept. 11, the scene of local action to be the Winged Foot Golf Club in Mamaroneck, which is the place where the national open championship will be decided next year.

Members of the New York team will play against par of the Winged Foot course and their scores will be wirelessed to Honolulu where they will be compared with the scores made by the opponents over there. The final reckoning will be based on the Nassau system of scoring, one point for each nine holes and one point to the winner of the match.

Details of the match are now being perfected by Mr. Sanderson, who is in Honolulu and they will be announced when he returns in the near future.

The Liberty House in Honolulu has offered a cup to go to the winning team and A. H. Dykes, President of the New York Rotary Club, has offered a consolation prize.

It is hoped that as an outgrowth of the wireless match the members of the two clubs may some day meet in man-to-man combat on the same course.

While new in golf, telegraph matches are common in some other lines of sport. Many colleges throughout the country now conduct rifle, chess and bowling matches by wireless and in the Western Conference even track meets are conducted in that way.

TWENTY-ONE CLUBS WILL TAKE PART IN COMPETITION

Cream of Dominion Paddlers Preparing for Canadian Canoe Regatta.

IN OLD LACHINE CANAL

MONTREAL, Que., August 3.—(Canadian Press).— The narrow strip of water in the old Lachine Canal, the Dominion championship course of the Lachine, is the maget that is drawing from all over Eastern Canada the cream of the paddlers of twenty-one clubs to complete Saturday in the twenty-sixth annual regatta of the Canadian Canoe Association. Most of the crews will be on the water today having arrived last night and will spend the morning and afternoon paddling the course, accustoming themselves to its little peculiarities, and putting the last touches to their shells.

The Canadian Canoe Association Regatta this year gives every promise of not only being one of the most closely-contested meets ever held by the organization but also gives every promise of being the best organized competition in the history of the Association. A new system of picking the winners is expected to eliminate this year disputes over the finshes and Saturday five competent men representing all three divisions will act in this capacity. Two men will pick first, one second, another third, and the fifth judge will place a fourth crew, in case of a disqualification eliminates one of the three.

War Canoe Races.

Three final events and the preliminary heats of the war canoe races will be held in the morning. The morning races will start with the junior single and the junior tandem intermediate single and war canoe heats will follow in order. All finals except these three in the small boats will be held in the afternoon, with the mile war canoe race, the starred event, closing the programs.

The final event of the day will be one that will be followed with more than usual interest by the competing clubs this year. For the past three summers, eastern and western paddlers have seen the crack Rideau crew sweep through to three successive titles, last year beating one of the smartest fields in history by a clear boat length. Rideaus are one of three clubs that has won the mile war canoe three times in a row but no club has ever been able to chalk up four straight wins since Grand Trunk hung up that record in the meets between 1902 and 1905. Rideaus will be out to equal that record against one of the strongest fields that ever paddled in A.C.C.A. meet. The Rideau crew, too, have another championship they will be straining every muscle to retain, the half mile war canoe championship, won last year when they swept both feature races at Gananoque. In this event, the record run of victories is held by Toronto Canoe Club who captured the race five times in succession between 1910 and 1914 and who won the event two years ago. The present champions will have plenty of opposition in retaining their laurels last year at Gananoque.

Brothers Meet In Golf Finals

HALIFAX, N. S., Aug. 3.—(Canadian Press.)—For the fifth time in the last six years the Mielke brothers of the Brightwood Club, Dartmouth, will meet in the finals for the Maritime amateur golf championship.

In the semi-finals yesterday morning the brilliant play of the younger of the brothers, Frank, sent Don McNaughton, Moncton's youthful star down to defeat, 6 and 3, while the steady playing of Brother Gerald proved too much for last year's champion, Tom McAvity, of Saint John who was eliminated by six up and four to play. To-day the brothers meet in a 3-hole match for the championship.

CANADIAN RUNNERS HAVE EVEN CHANCE

Will Dominion Repeat by Taking Honors in 400 Metres Race?

TWELVE COMPETITORS

World Records Broken by Women in 800 Metres Event.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 3 (By W. H. Ingram, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent).—Will world supremacy in the 400 metres race of the ninth Olympiad follow the 100 and 200 metre championship to Canada? To-day three representatives of the Dominion race with nine competitors in the semi-finals of the 400 metres, and six of the twelve will enter the final later in the day. Observers concede the Canadians at least have an even chance in the final.

The 400 metres race is neither a sprint nor a distance race. W. A. Wilson of Montreal and James Ball of Winnipeg are among the favorites, and they are supported by Phil Edwards, representing the Hamilton Olympic Club.

All three came successfully through two sets of trials yesterday, but the fourth Canadian entrant in the field of seventy-five was eliminated. F. W. MacBeth of Hamilton trailing the field in his second trial.

Wilson pressed Ray Barbuti of the United States to the best time of any recorded in the trials, 49 4-5 seconds, running a good second to the American in the second trial. Edwards won both his races, his best times being 49 1-5, while Bell won both his trials and showed 49 2-5 seconds in the last one. Bell displayed a great reserve of speed in both races, promising well for to-day's events.

World's Records Broken

The 800 metre women runners gave the immense crowd the thrill of the afternoon, the first six finishers all breaking the world's record. Canada's entrants finished 4th and 5th. Jean Thompson of Penetang leading Fanny Rosenfeld of Toronto, but each striving to give the other the honor. The winner was Fraulein Radke of Germany, whose time was 2 minutes 16 4-5 seconds. Kinuye Hitomi of Japan was second, and Miss Gentzael of Sweden third. Florence Macdonald of the United States finished behind the Canadian girls.

The women got off to a beautiful start and rounded the first curve at a stiff pace with Fraulein Dollinge of Germany in the lead. Jean Thompson was right at her heels. A little further Miss Hitomi went in front fairly even with Miss Thompson. Rounding into the straight-away Fraulein Radke opened up and took the lead from the Japanese girl. They raced evenly down the stretch, with the German girl spurting to cross the tape seven seconds under the world's record for the distance.

The Canadian activities for the day were completed on the placid Sloten Canal, five miles away, where Joe Wright, Jr., romped through his preliminary singles heat with D. H. F. Gunterby of Holland, and the Argonaut Club eight from Toronto won their heat from Denmark by two lengths. Wright's time for the 2,000 metre course was 7 minutes, 55 seconds.

Gains Early Lead

The Diamond Sculls' holder was master of Gunterby after gaining a slight lead at the start, being content to finish a length ahead, rowing only twenty-four strokes to the minutes at the finish.

The eight-oared crew were behind the fast-stroking rowers from Denmark for the first 250 metres but passed their opponents at the halfway mark and had a big open water lead when they finished in fairly fast time of 6 minutes and 28 seconds.

The Canadian wrestlers placed fifth in the international standing, and the Canadian flag was sent to the top of the secondary Olympic pole three times, in token of victories by James Trifunov, Regina, third in the 123 pound class; D. P. Stockton of Montreal, second in the 174 pound class, and Morris Latchford of Montreal, third in the 158 pound class.

ROOM FOR MILLIONS MORE.

Prof. H. L. Shantz, of the University of Illinois, recently told the National Academy of Sciences that the earth is capable of supporting 8,000,000,000 people, if all the land is fully utilized. This, says Popular Science Monthly, would be nearly five times the present population of the world.

THINKS TUNNEY'S KIDDING

Jack Dempsey, whom Gene Tunney dethroned as heavyweight champion, does not think Gene is serious in his announced retirement from the boxing game as undefeated champion.

Dempsey expressed the belief that Tunney would enter the ring again should the occasion demand it.

"It is a shame that Tunney is quitting just now when he is at the top of his fighting career," the Manassa Mauler said. "I can say, however, that Gene's retirement will not affect my own plans in any way."

Dempsey, who is also supposed to be on the retired list, did not appear to be sure that he was through with the game for keeps. He declared, however, that he had no immediate fistic plans.

"If I do fight again, it will not be this year," he said.

ELECTRICS WIN FROM LOCKIES BY CLOSE COUNT

Game Called at End of Seventh Frame With Score Three to One.

TIGHT CONTEST.

C.G.E. Stage First Triple Play of Year in Fifth Inning.

Rain and darkness called the softball game last night at the end of the seventh when the C.G.E. were leading the Lockworks 3-1. The seventh was so dark that the players could hardly see.

How it all happened. C.G.E. were the home team and took the field. For the Lockworks, Westbrook filed to Wilson at short, Delahey rolled to Calladine, who tossed it to first for the put out, and Haskell followed the same route.

Jones for the C.G.E. was first to bat. He struck out, Dyer walked and Weese and Wilson filed to Green at short. The second frame—Lockworks: Griffin filed to short, Green reached first on an error by Weese, and Jobbitt walked. Chambers popped to Powell and Bathgate struck out, retiring the side. For C.G.E. Barrie tipped out to Reggie Dyer. Playford rolled to Weese, who tossed it to third and Powell filed to Green.

The third innings—Nicols rolled to Wilson, who tossed him out on first. Westbrook rolled to Barrie on first, Delahey reached second on Freddie Jones' error in centre field, and Haskell was popped to Calladine. For C.G.E., Darling popped to Delahey, Calladine reached first on a passed ball, Freddie Jones walked and Dyer got a single, but Calladine was caught going to third, and Weese struck out for the third time.

In the fourth, Griffin hit safely for a single, and stole second, Green flied out to Wilson, and Jobbitt rolled to Weese, who passed it to first for the putout. Chambers singled along the third base line and Griffin was caught trying to reach that base. Here the C.G.E. started scoring. Wilson reached first on Weese's error, Barrie flied out to Green, Playford reached first on a bunt to Wilson. Powell popped to Weese, and Darling made two bases on a wild throw to first by Delahey and Wilson and Playford scored. Calladine tipped out to Reggie Dyer.

The fifth—Bathgate walked, scoring on Westbrook's double. Then came the sensational play of the evening, a triple put out. The first of its kind this year. Delahey drove a long fly to Playford, who juggled it and appeared as if he would have dropped it while the players rushed for home. He did not drop it but caught Delahey out and threw it to Powell while the runners were trying to recover themselves they were thrown out at second and third for a triple put out, getting the factory boys out of a nice hole. It all happened so suddenly that it was hard for a while to realize just what had happened. For the C.G.E. Jones struck out, Dyer popped to second, and Weese to first.

The sixth—Haskell walked, Griffin caught out on first, and Haskell was caught going to second, Green was caught out and Jobbitt rolled to Weese at third, who again passed it to first. For C.G.E., Wilson reached first on Delahey's error, finally scoring for the third run, Barrie rolled to Jobbitt, who threw to first for the put out, Playford to the pitcher who threw it to first, and Powell reached first on Griffin's error, but Darling popped out to short stop.

The seventh—It was now getting dark and it was hard to see the ball. Chambers tipped out to Reggie Dyer, Bathgate whaled out a triple, Nicols tipped out to Dyer, and Westbrook rolled to Powell, who threw to first for the put out, and that was all the score, being three to one for the C.G.E.

The line-up:

Lockworks—Westbrook, 3b; Delahey p; Haskell, c; Griffin, 1b; Green, ss; Jobbitt, 2b; Chambers, cf; Bathgate, rf; Nicols, lf.

Score by innings:

C.G.E. .. ..000201x—3
Lockworks .. ..0000100—1

Umpires—W. Hanger at the plate, and F. Scates at the bases.

Canadians Do Well In Olympic Games

AMSTERDAM, August 3.—(By W. H. Ingram, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent).—Canadian activities at the Olympic games on Thursday resulted as follows:

F. W. MacBeth, Hamilton, eliminated in 400 metres second trial.

Jean Thompson, Penetang, was fourth and Fanny Rosenfeld, Toronto, fifth in women's 800 metre final, each breaking old world record.

GREAT CRICKETER TO ENTER CHURCH

Parsons, Warwickshire Star, Completing Studies in Theology.

LONDON, July 31 (Canadian Press).—John Henry Parsons, the Warwickshire cricketer, who recently established a record for runs scored in one over and for the greatest number of consecutive sixes, was the subject of many interviews after this performance. He is one of the most interesting personalities in cricket in England and a fine future in the game is predicted for him, says Reuters, Limited. Mr. Parsons enlisted as a trooper during the war, won his commission, and was decorated with the Military Cross. He served with the Worcestershire Yeomanry. When peace was declared he was gazetted a captain in the 7th Hussars, then in India. He left the army to take up religious work, and now is nearing the completion of his studies at a theological college.

Parsons is one of the few cricketers who have changed their status. He played first as a professional for Warwickshire, then as amateur, and returned to the professional ranks. He is expected to be ordained into the Church of England priesthood next year, and it is pretty definitely settled his first curacy will be somewhere in Warwickshire, when, it is presumed, he will become an amateur again.

He is popular as a cricketer because he hits out. He made his records against the West Indian bowler, Scott. His scoring in the over was: 2—3—6—6—6—6—28. One of his smashes went into the dining room and another clean out of the Birmingham grounds. Another notable performance of Mr. Parsons was the scoring of 225 runs out of 315 in 3¼ hours against Glamorgan some years ago. He played for the Players against the Gentlemen in 1925 and headed the Warwickshire batting averages since 1919.

U. S. ATLHETES EAT TOO MUCH

London Papers Say Poor Quarters Also To Blame For Lack of Success.

ICE CREAM ALL GONE.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—Lord Beaverbrook's paper, The Daily Express, which for the last few days has been triumphantly featuring the unexpected victories of British track athletes over the American stars at the Olympic Games, came out yesterday with the startling suggestion that the great American running fiasco is due to one thing—overeating.

The charge is based on a press "hand out" issued from the offices of the United States Lines here, through Charles H. Heidorn, chief steward of the liner President Roosevelt, on board which the American athletes are livng.

Heidorn tells how the supply of ice cream which was brought from New York and was expected to last throughout the entire stay on this side, was all used up Wednesday, and gives a graphic account of the enormous amount of steaks and chops consumed by the American entrants.

According to his figures, a number of American athletes must have been in the habit of polishing off double orders, not only of ice cream, but of meat dishes as well.

The Daily Express was the only London morning paper which published the United States Lines statement and officials of the lines were horrified when they saw what use had been made of what they thought was only a good little feature story calculated to give the lines a little harmless publicity.

Their horror increased yesterday afternoon when Lord Beaverbrook's afternoon paper, The Evening Standard, burst out with a special feature story on the same theme from its Amsterdam special correspondent, complete with streamer headlines all the way across the front page, reading, "Secret of U. S. Olympic Failures."

Menus Contrasted

The special story begins: "Of the many attempts to find an explanation for the American failures at the Olympic games, one that stands out is the question of diet." The correspondent then gives the elaborate lunch menu to-day aboard the Roosevelt, contrasting it with the British team's lighter menu:

He also points out that the British contestants are living and eating in an airy hotel ashore, while the Americans are confined to a stuffy, ill-ventilated ship.

"I know of some cases in the American team where some of the athletes have actually put on weight through eating too much. For example, George Kopak, the champion swimmer, now tips the scales at fifteen pounds more than when he left New York. The American athletic team is dissatisfied with conditions on the President Roosevelt.

"They find it a great disadvantage to be so far from the stadium It takes the athletes something like an hour to go from the steamer to the stadium.

"Then there is the lack of working facilities. The decks of the President Roosevelt are not spacious, and the company on board is severely cramped for room. Considerable discontent has also arisen among the athletes in the track events because of the facilities put at their disposal Most of them, for example, are used to hard cinder tracks."

As an example of the hardships through which the Americans have had to struggle, the correspondent of the Express quotes the case of Cuhel, the hurdler, who was beaten by Lord Burghley of England in the 400 metre hurdles. "Cuhel, the 400 metre hurdler," he says, "had as his only practice, a leap over five hurdles before he was actually called upon to meet Lord Burghley

"One of the American managers said to me to-day, "There is also the factor of climate Our boys aren't accustomed to the damp air. They have been getting steadily worse in their fitness since we arrived. You must remember Amsterdam is below sea level. It might have been better to have stayed at the Hague, which is above sea level.

STIFFER COMPETITION.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 3 (Canadian Press).—Not overeating, as alleged by London newspapers, but stiffer competition is responsible for the poor showing of United States athletes in track events at the Olympic Games, members of the United States Olympic Committee state.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

"HONOR BOUND" THE FEATURE ATTRACTION AT THE CAPITOL TO-NIGHT, IS AN EXPOSE OF STARTLING FACTS ABOUT CONVICT LABOR—GEORGE O'BRIEN AND ESTELLE TAYLOR ARE THE LEADING PLAYERS.

After an extensive investigation the Fox Film Corporation have produced a motion picture based on the modern convict labor situation. This picture is called "Honor Bound" and opens at the Capitol to-day.

It is the story of John Ogletree who has been sent to prison through the treachery of a woman. He is embittered with life and is fighting through unaided. The reason for his sudden transfer to the coal mines is revealed when he finds that Evelyn, his former streetheart, is now the wife of Paul Mortimer, the coal baron. Seeking to win back Ogletree she has him appointed her chauffeur. His indifference so enrages her that she wrecks the car and is carried to the hospital badly injured. Her husband overhears her calling Ogletree in her delirium and consigns the latter to the coal mines there to meet an existence worse than death. How he comes through this with the aid of Selma, the prison doctor's daughter, and his convict buddy who helps him escape, reveals one of the most dramatic stories ever screened.

George O'Brien and Estelle Taylor have the stellar roles and are supported by an excellent cast including Leila Hyams, Tom Santschi, Sam DeGrasse, Al Hart and Frank Cooley, Alfred E. Green directed with his usual skill.

ANNUAL OUTING.

Residents of the Protestant Home wish to convey their sincere thanks to the members of Royal Arthur Lodge, A.F. & A.M., and to all others who contributed to their pleasure in a well arranged outing to Chemong Park on Wednesday, Aug. 1st. Comfortable cars, with careful drivers, carried a large number to the Park early in the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Westbye kindly gave the use of their cottage and grounds for the comfort of the visitors. Cosy seats beneath the trees, with a beautiful outlook over the lake and further shore made a delightful resting place, while motor boats were at the disposal of those who wished to go on the water. Many of the cottagers came over, and with handclasp and cheery words added to the enjoyment of the old people. An excellent supper prepared by ladies of St. Andrew's church was spread in the dining room of this cottage, and much enjoyed by all. The drive home later was a fitting close to an outing that will long be remembered by those who were fortunate enough to share in it.

Every atom of your Commonsense warns You to be Careful at Railway Crossings

Despite the fate of those who have attempted it, there are motorists still who try to beat trains to railway crossings. It is the most desperate chance in motoring. The train can't stop. The motor vehicle may stall, or it may be too late. Then two thousand tons shatter and wreck two tons.

If the motorist gets across safely, he saves a minute or so—and has the thrill of beating the train. If he loses—then to the hospital or the cemetery.

Railway crossings are well marked. Slow down as you approach them. LOOK—both ways—and LISTEN. If a train is in sight, SET YOUR HAND BRAKE, and wait for the train to pass. Do not take the most desperate of all chances in motoring.

REMEMBER these 7 Rules of Safety

1 Have your car in perfect mechanical shape—particularly Brakes, Steering Gear and Head lights.
2 Give your undivided attention to your driving. In passing traffic, be sure there is a place for you in the traffic line ahead.
3 When other motor vehicles try to pass you—let them pass.
4 In entering main streets or highways, or in approaching a railway crossing where a full view of the track is obstructed, stop and look.
5 Don't "loaf" where traffic is heavy.
6 Always signal before you slow down, stop or change your course.
7 Never back up before ascertaining that the road behind is clear.

ANCIENT DEAD PROVIDED FOR

GRAVES UNCOVERED

STOCKHOLM, August 3 (Canadian Press).—How lovingly and elaborately the Swedes equipped their deceased for the last journey about 1,500 years ago is strikingly illustrated by unique discoveries just made at Tuna in the province of Upland. Dr. T. J. Arne, a government archaeologist, there excavated a grave field which yielded remarkable finds. Two so-called boat-graves were found, both well preserved. In one of them was a skeleton of a man and the remains of the boat in which he had been buried and which was to serve for his last long voyage.

It was, like the other graves found, placed east and west and the traveller had been well provided for by the loving hands of his relatives. In the stern of the ship his horse and dog had been placed and as food for the journey he had, amongst other things, been given a killed bird. A round bronze buckle, evidently serving to fasten his mantle around his shoulders was also found, and a bunch of iron arrowheads showed that he had been well armed. In order to keep his arms sharp he had a small whetting stone, fastened in a ring, and his steed had been fully harnessed. Further a fine handle cut into the shape of a bear's head, and a number of well preserved earthenware pots were found in the grave.

The next grave also contained a similar boat, in which a man and his wife had started on their last journey together, each of them having a horse and a dog with them. The man had his sword and shield, and the wife had iron cooking pots and knives to enable her to prepare their food and also a number of small female appurtenances, including two combs of bone.

The most interesting find of all, however, was a grave in which a man, who seems to have been a rich and powerful person, had been buried under a stone mound but without a boat. This grave is about 1,400 years old and perfectly untouched. By the side of the deceased lay a mighty iron sword, a sword dagger, a knife, a flint and tinder for making fire, a specially interesting sword-belt of bronze and gold, richly ornamented, and a long and beautiful silver buckle, inlaid with garnet stones set in gold, all in a decorative design of unique character and probably of Southern Germanic origin. The man probably carried a leather hood, the silver ornaments of which were found.

These finds are said by archaeologists to be the most valuable ones made in Sweden for a long time and will throw light on the burial rites and on the culture in general of the period, from which they date, which is estimated to be about 500 or 600 A.D.

Some silken stockings owe their golden sheen to the inclusion of tin in the dyeing process.

Dr. McCoy's menus suggested for the week beginning Sunday, Aug. 5th:

Sunday.

Breakfast: French omelet, toasted triscuit, ripe figs.

Lunch: Ice cream, fresh peaches.

Monday.

Lunch: Corn, string beans, lettuce.

Tuesday.

Lunch: Watermelon as desired.

Wednesday.

Breakfast: Re-toasted breakfast food with milk or cream (no sugar), stewed figs.

Lunch: Melon as desired.

Thursday.

Friday.

Lunch: *Avocado salad.

Saturday.

Lunsh: Berries with milk or cream (no sugar).

*AVOCADO SALAD: Cut a ripe avocado in half and scoop out the pulp, being careful not to tear the shells. Mash pulp with a fork, mixing in the desired amount of chopped raw celery and minced ripe olives. Add no other seasoning, heap into the half shells, and top with a ripe olive. Serve each shell on a bed of leafy celery stalks.

Questions and Answers.

Question: "Thank You" asks: "Is there any way that broken muscles and tissues of the bust can be strengthened? It was caused by too tight a binding."

Answer: It is quite normal for the breasts to drop down gradually after the birth of a child or even sometimes after puberty. Exercising the muscles of the chest will tend to strengthen the muscles lying under the busts, but this will seldom raise them to their original position. There is nothing injurious about this sagging, and you must not injure yourself by using treatments to eliminate a condition which is probably natural for your age.

Question: Mrs. W. B. L. asks: "Will you kindly tell me the difference between buttermilk and acidolphilus milk and what would you advise taking for an acid stomach or intestinal indigestion?"

Answer: There is some difference between buttermilk and acidolphilus milk, but not much difference in that which is commercially sold. Either of these milks makes an excellent diet to take for a short time, excluding all other foods, or a pint of either milk may be used in place of a meal.

Question: Mrs. A. McD. asks: "What would cause my husband to have a pain under the left shoulder blade? Several years ago that lung closed for some time when he suddenly stepped under a very cold shower. Could it be a result of that?"

Answer: Pains under the left shoulder usually come from either heart trouble or from some lung disorder such as you mention. If the lung has remained collapsed it may still be possible to open it up by having your husband take deep breathing exercises.

(Unofficial Opinions on the Markets

MONTREAL, Aug. 3—The first day of August trading was a mixed one. While it did not produce the general collapse that some feared would result from the heavy calling of loans and the big payments on new issues, stocks generally finished weak, owing to the absence of buying support.

International Nickel wa sthe feature, heavy buying in the forenoon sending it up to 99 here and a fraction higher in New York, where it was reported a noted multi-millionaire operator was buying.

Locally the demand for Nickel in mid-forenoon was extremely aggressive, blocks of five hundred shares each making their appearance close to the high. The afternoon, however, brought some reaction.

Brazilian was strong near the opening, but gradually sold off, the impression being that many holders were switching to Nickel.

While some of the paper stocks held firm and Abitibi in early trading advanced, others declined, notably Port Alfred, which dipped two points after an early recovery.

I notice from a report of progress in Chili that an extensive development of railway and harbor works is contemplated, for which Canadian firms are invited to tender. There is reason to hope that a Montreal firm which has been prominent this year in similar work will share in the enterprise.

Noranda is showing exception to the general list. Monday, it slipped back to $52, but later refirmed above $53, and yesterday did some more drinking. Hollinger is unable to get up past $10.50 and lower-priced issues are suffering from lack of attention.

Amulet's finding of ore hasn't been reflected in the market price. One of the interesting features of the find on the 150 foot level is that the crosscut was intended to get on top of "C" ore body, only a fraction of which was thought to be higher than 150 feet below surface. Drifting in continuing in ore reported mostly high grade zinc with some chalcopyrite.

Several companies have had their shares approved, but won't list them on the Exchange just now. Buffalo Rouyn is one, and has done over 4,000 feet of diamond drilling, with two feet of commercial ore having been cut in one hole.

Tourist Claimed $60 Car Repaired For $5

OAKVILLE, Aug. 2.—The intercessions of a highway traffic officer saved a Toronto motorist considerable cash here last night when an Illinois motorist, with whom he had had a slight collision, claimed an indemnity of $60. Constable Rogers, however, took the tourist's car to a local garage, and the repairs complete totalled only five dollars. Townspeople got quite a kick out of the verbal battle between the motorists, and the consequent settlement.

MINING BRIEFS

A Special Service to The Examiner

TORONTO, Aug. 3.—A report from the north this morning is to the effect that Amulet is still in high grade ore in the south drift on the 150-foot level. This makes about ten rounds taken out of the new ore to date.

Further reports from the same field state that the Waite-Montgomery will commence shipments of copper ore to the Noranda smelter, over the Canadian National Railways, today or tomorrow. It is expected that at least 60 tons per day will be shipped indefinitely.

H. C. Hatch, M.E., prominent geologist, formerly with J. J. Reid & Co., and who owns extensive mineral lands in New foundland, is today completing a deal with the Lindsley interests whereby the latter company takes over 120,000 acres of well-mineralized territory adjoining the Buchans Mine in Newfoundland. This latter company is expected to come into production in about a month.

At a meeting of the directors of Moffat Hall held yesterday in Haileybury, plans were further discussed relative to McIntyre taking over the Kirkland Lake property, according to a report received this morning from Cobalt. No definite plans were made, but the matter will soon be placed before the shareholders.

Unofficial advice brought to a representative of this office from Red Lake conveys the information that at one point in the underground workings of Howey Gold Mines there is a length of about 200 feet, averaging $52 per ton across a width of 15 feet. This feet, averaging $52per ton across a wid ore lies in the easterly workings. Indiore lies in the easterly workings. Indications point toward Howey being a mine with possibly $10 ore, perhaps substantially richer at such time as the work in the easterly part of the property continues. While assays of $52 are reasonable to expect in certain parts of the mine, the officials, however, prefer to confine remarks to the general average value of the ore. Officially, it is known that the average grade of ore during recent months has improved at least 10 per cent. and with signs pointing towards even greater improvement.

Sudbury Copper and Nickel Company, is the name of the new subsidiary which it is proposed to form about the recently acquired properties of Sudbury Basin Mines, Limited, in the north and south nickel ranges of the Sudbury district. Altogether it is reported Sudbury Basin has between 4,000 and 5,000 acres of copper-nickel lands under option, which it is proposed to investigate and develop. It is not yet known whether the Cheney property at Dean Lake and the White River lead along with various other holdings of Sudbury Basin, are to be included in the properties of the new company, or whether they will be retained and developed by the parent organization.

Officials of March Gold Mines are said to be authority for the statement that the mine operated at a profit during the month of May, despite capital expenditures, including the building of a new cook-house and dormitory. When the present development programme has been completed, it is intended to continue the shaft to deeper levels and open up two new horizons. Diamond drilling indicates that the ore bodies are becoming wider and richer at depth, the officials state.

Lake Shore Mines.

In view of the fact that Lake Shore Mines headed the list of Kirkland Lake producers in the June report of the Ontario Department of Mines; the street is speculating on what the output will be. In the quarter ended March 31st, Teck-Hughes ranked first with production at the rate of $5,500,000 per annum. If Teck-Hughes maintained this high rate in June, then Lake Shore has stepped up both millheads and output very substantially.

A rate of something better than $5,500,000 per annum would give the company rather startling profits on its stock, of which there is only $2,000,000 outstanding.

Acadia Gold Mines May be Listed Soon.

While little was heard of the Acadia Gold Mines, in Nova Scotia, until recently, the property has been developed aggressively for a considerable period by present interests and is now a regular shipper of bullion to the mint. The shaft is now down over 2,000 feet and extensive drifting has been completed, while many thousands of feet of diamond drilling have been done.

Last year the construction of a mill was started and the company has been producing gold since late in March last, and returns are reported to have averaged $20 per ton. Over $250,000 was spent in development work last year and the property was brought to a producing basis before any public offering of stock was made. The property consists of approximately 2,000 acres, situated approximately 30 miles from Halifax on the Canadian National Railways. Application will be made soon for listing the stock on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange. A noticeable feature of the property is the peculiar vein structure which has caught the attention of the mining men who have visited it. A few weeks ago, Mr. Farribault, Government geologist, conducted a party of members of the Canadian Geological Survey over the grounds, lecturing on the various interesting formations.

McIntyre Carrying Drive at 3875 Feet Throughout Property.

McIntyre Porcupine Mines is proceeding with the development of the property at depth along broad lines. Just as the No. 11 shaft in the centre of the long property has become the main vertical operation, the 3875 ft. level is selected as the main artery for lateral development.

The general plan is to carry the drive at 3875 feet, which is at the end of the crosscut south from the No. 11 shaft through the property from end to end. This will not only prove conditions nearly 1000 feet below the old workings at the west end of the property towards the south, cut will open up the territory along the boundary line between Hollinger and McIntyre, where the managements of both companies believe deposits of major importance will be exposed. Similarly, the drive at the 3875 ft. level will be pushed north east right to the Coniaurum boundary.

The drive at 3875 feet has already been carried some 500 feet, and when it is completed should establish conditions from end to end of the property at this the lowest level. The drive is being carried in a straight line, irrespective of ore bodies, and the latter will be opened up by crosscuts driven every 300 feet both to the north and south. The grade and dimensions of ore bodies already located and entered by the workings satisfies the management that they are consistent and can be most economically mined by means of the comprehensive scheme being carried out.

Sudbury Basin Mines in Newfoundland Field.

It is heard in the Street that directors of Sudbury Basin Mines met on Tuesday of this week at which meeting the company's operations in New foundland were discussed.

The Financial News Bureau is informed officially that while there was no meeting of directors held, the company had a party in the Newfoundland field, on the lookout for some promising properties. Whether or not properties have already been acquired in this district was not stated.

It is reported that a gang of men were sent in this week to the White River lead holdings, where work has commenced in driving a tunnel into the side of a hill on the property, in an effort to reach the ore body. Machinery is also said to have been sent in.

Approximately 1,000 feet of drifting has been done at the Cheney property, and while some trouble was experienced at the western end, some good ore is said to have been shown up at the eastern extremity. There are 65 men employed at this camp.

Early this week Sudbury Basin drill at Vermillion Lake entered what appeared to be another high grade section, at a depth of 300 feet. At the same time favorable results are reported from the company's Cheney property, where the drift after following through a faulted area picked up its vein to the east. Furthermore, a diamond drill hole to the west indicated an addition of 200 feet to the length of ore. Here 8% copper was shown over a width of 10 feet. While the stock has been sagging with the majority of the list on the market, the properties have been improving their position week by week.

Values at Noranda Growing Week By Week.

Conditions at Noranda are such that the management are taking every means to get the utmost capacity out of the 1st unit of the smelter, which has been in operation since last December, and the 2nd unit which will be brought into operation almost immediately. By means of adjustments and minor additions, by the time the second unit is running smoothly, the smelter will, it is expected have a capacity of close to 2,000 tons daily. This should yield the company, from its own and customs ore approximately $20,000,000 per annum from which profits of between $6.00 and $8.00 per share on the stock may be looked for.

Already "H" and "B" ore bodies have proven fabulously rich at lower levels. What about the other six or seven ore bodies? It will be interesting when the workings get into these zones, and the market may be expected to reflect the news, as it comes out.

In view of the fact that the present deep shaft cuts right through the "H" ore body, apparently, it is imperative that a new shaft be sunk, which will be carried below 1000 feet.

A station is being built at 600 ft. level, from which a crosscut will be driven shortly to open up the "H" ore body, which has been tapped at 725 and 850 and 975 feet.

At the 400 ft. level, "B" ore body looks about as good as the "H" ore body at 975 feet, although it is not as big. Workings for 70 feet disclosed 12 to 15% copper with fine gold values. At a depth of 106 feet the "B" ore body was 61 feet wide and averaged 7.7% copper and $6.86 gold, or $27.00 per ton. Values were lower at 300 feet, but at 400 feet they are indicated to be $33.60-to $42.00 in copper alone.

Developments in the next five months in the mine have wonderful possibilities.

Montreal.—A progress report on the work being carried on on the Norticia Mining Company's property has been received in Montreal. A thorough survey has been made on the surface which confirms the values and tonnage so far uncovered. The geologists reported that the gold-bearing solutions emanated from a large body at depth, and the ore-zone would be found to persist at considerable depth.

The shaft-sinking operations recommended by the consulting geologist, Percy E. Hopkins, have been carried to the 150-foot level and sampling results have shown high values across big widths. The objective of the shaft for the present season is 300 feet. Assays on this property have run from $20 to $350 per ton. The financial arrangements made for this company call for an expenditure of over $300,000, and the extensive work being done is creating great interest in the Red Lake Camp, in which the Norticia property is situated.

Nickel Gains Rapidly After Opening Weak

TORONTO, August 3 (Canadian Press). — International Nickel featured the market at the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. Opening at 97¼, it dropped to 97, then with a firm jump it gradually climbed point by point until it had reached 101⅝, at which figure it closed, making a net gain of 3.00. Brazilian Light and Power with a moderate turnover, lost ½ at 51½. Loblaw was rather active when it advanced 1¼ points to 86¼. Other issues were uninteresting in trading and prices only fractional gains or losses being registered.

Canadian Canners First Preferred was lower by ½ at 21. Canadian Industrial Alcohol and Steel of Canada were also down a half at 38⅛ and 180⅛ respectively. British American Oil was unusually active this morning, remaining mostly steady, but closed with a fractional loss of a half at 39⅛. Hiram Walker's was down ¼ at 55, Imperial Oil ⅛ at 67⅜, Super Test Petroleum two at 30, and Power Corporation Rights ⅞ at 64¾.

Mine Trading Quiet With Changes Small

TORONTO, August 3 (Canadian Press). — The majority of the stocks showed little change in price on the Standard Mining Exchange this morning, though a few issues inclined lower and there were isolated firm spots. Amulet was one of these, gaining 13 at 428. Howey Gold sold up twelve at 111, and Jackson Manion improved 3⅛ at 92. Noranda weakened to 57.00, recovering only to 57.10 at noon for a net loss of 75 cents. Hollinger receded 45 cents at 935, and Kirkland Hunton eased a point at ten. Other Kirkland Lake stocks were steady, with Wright Hargreaves firming ten at 3.25, and Barry Hollinger selling around 45. Bidgood fractionally strengthened at 56¼.

Oil Shares In Demand With Advance In Prices

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.— (Canadian Press.)—A brisk demand for the oil shares, based on expanding earnings as a result of the recent increase in commodity prices, featured the resumption of the upward price movement in to-day's stock market. The lowering of the call money rate from seven to six and a half per cent. stimulated the buying movement.

Atlantic Refining, after running up more than six points, ran into heavy profit taking but the other oils, particularly the refining issues, continued to press forward. Houston climbed four half points and Union Oil of California, Pierce Oil Preferred, Mexican Seaboard and Sun Oil advanced two points or more.

Motors responded to reports of heavy mid summer sales of new cars, with Chrysler in the forefront of the advance. General Motors was a bit backward. International Nickel, Trico Products, Coca Cola, Warner Brothers Pictures, National Distillers, Johns Manville and American Radiator all advanced three points or more. The rails were quiet.

All Grains Decline With Wheat In Lead

CHICAGO, Aug. 3. — (Canadian Press.) — All grains underwent an early setback in price to-day. Selling which accompanied the downturns was owing more or less to declines at Liverpool and to rains in Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas beneficial for corn. After opening 1-8c. to ¼-8c. off, Chicago wheat values continued to sag. Corn started 3-8c. lower to 5-8c. higher and subsequently showed a drop all around. Oats were easy.

Opening prices were: Wheat, September 119 3-8, December 123 ¼-8. Corn, September 101 5-8, December 78 3-8. Oats, September 39 1-8, December 42 1-4.

WAR MEMORIAL WORK ADVANCES

History of Work Now Under Way Being Sent Out This Week.

$6,500 STILL NEEDED.

Citizens of Peterborough are receiving through the mail this week the history of the work of the Citizens Memorial Committee, which is rapidly taking form and an appeal to each home to take advantage of the opportunity to contribute to the fund. The memorial is being erected at a cost of $32,500, of which $26,000 has already been contributed by individuals or organizations.

It was felt that every home in the city would desire to have some part in the memorial and it is hoped by the Committee that subscriptions will be promptly sent in by our citizens so that a personal canvass will not be necessary to take care of the small balance of $6,500.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 3.—(Canadian Press.)—The majority of the Canadian athletes competing at the Olympics will take part in the Tailteann games in Ireland, August 15-17, the British games at Woolwich England, August 18, and the Scottish games at Glasgow August 21 it was announced to-day.

COUPE WRECKED.

Car Hits Railing Along Edge of Creek On Murray Street.

A coupe license number 358-422, was jammed against the steel railing on Murray Street just west of Bethune Street, this morning about seven o'clock. The railing was apparently all that saved it from going into the creek. The front axle, mud guards, and windshield were badly damaged.

RADIO CHAIN OPENS SEPT. 1

National Broadcasting Organization To Be Divided Into Two Sections.

BETTER PROGRAMS.

TORONTO, Aug. 3.— (Canadian Press).—A National broadcasting organization, divided into two sections, will commence operations about September 1, it is announced here today by R. W. Ashcroft, who has been appointed manager of the newly-formed trans-Canada broadcasting company.

The key stations of the new organization will be located in Winnipeg and Toronto. Stations in Montreal, Ottawa, Kingston, Hamilton, London, and Quebec, will be linked up with the Eastern section and stations in Saskatoon, Regina, Edmonton, Calgary, Lethbridge, and Vancouver, with the Western section Centralization of leading Canadian musicians at key stations would enable the company to meet the Dominion government's wishes for improved programs, Mr. Ashcroft said.

Wedding Bells

A very pretty wedding took place on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in All Saints church, when Mary Rivis Anderson, adopted daughter of Mrs. R. Brown, became the bride of William Arthur Bromley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bromley, of London, Eng.

The bride entered the church on the arm of Mr. Herbert Bromley, brother of the groom. She was charmingly attired in white romaine with a deep silk fringe. Her veil of silk net was held in place by a wreath of orange blossoms. She wore white kid shoes with hose to match. Her bouquet was of Ophelia roses and gypsopohlia. She was attended by Miss Winifred Cross as maid of honor who wore an orchid georgette dress and large black picture hat and carried sweetheart roses.

Miss Annie Blomley niece of the bridegroom, made a dainty flower girl, dressed in orchid georgette with hat to match and carried a basket of sweet peas.

The bride's mother was attired in navy blue georgette with hat to match and wore a corsage bouquet of sweet peas.

During the signing of the register Mrs. C. Scholey sang "O Promise Me." The organ was played by Mrs. Logan. The bride's bouquet was the gift of Mrs. S. McClennan.

The happy couple left on the 7.35 a.m. train on Thursday morning for Toronto, Niagara Falls and Bufaflo. On their return they will reside at 547 George street.

STARR—HAWKE.

A very pretty wedding took place in St. Luke's Church at 8 o'clock on Wednesday morning, when Doris Marion Hawke, daughter of Mr. O. Hawke, of 216 Woodbine Avenue, was united in marriage to Thomas Clarence Starr, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Starr, 656 Roger Street, the Rev. G. J. Bousfield officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was gowned in white satin-faced crepe, with radium lace, white kid shoes and white hose. She wore a large white mohair picture hat and carried a bouquet of roses and maiden-hair fern. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Grace Hawke, attired in a peach-colored crepe de chene gown, with large leghorn hat trimmed in peach and black satin shoes. She carried a bouquet of sweet peas.

Mr. Melville Starr, brother of the groom, acted as best man. The groom's gift to the bride was a fox fur, to the bridesmaid a gold vanity case, and to the best man a silver ever-sharp pencil.

Immediately after the ceremony a wedding breakfast was held at the home of the bride's parents, the rooms being decorated with garden flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Starr received, assisted by Mrs. T. Hawke, dressed in a navy silk dress, with touches of sand and a sand felt hat. Mrs. Starr, mother of the groom, wore a gown of navy blue crepe de chene, with a corsage bouquet of yellow roses and yellow felt hat.

The bride and groom left on a motor trip to Plymouth, Mass., amid showers of confetti.

On their return from their honeymoon the young couple will reside at 658 Roger Street, where they will be at home to their friends.

OBITUARY

SAMUEL HENRY BEST.

The death took place at his cottage, Stoney Lake, to-day, August 3, of Samuel Henry Best, of 469 Stewart Street. Details were not available.

MRS. JOHN BEST.

At 5.45 p.m. on Thursday, August 2, a life-time of useful endeavor terminated in the death at 326 Donegal street, Peterborough, of Annie Margaret Thexton, widow of the late John Best. She had resided here during the past forty-five years, having been born in Durham almost seventy-five years ago, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Richard Thexton. The late Mrs. Best was a devoted member of Trinity United church.

Left to mourn are one daughter and two sons, Mrs. C. D. MacFarlane, at whose residence on Donegal street, she had resided; L. T. Best, druggist, of Kingston, and Dr. Elmer S. Best, of Minneapolis, Minn. Eight brothers also survive.

The funeral will take place at 2.00 p.m. on Saturday, August 4, from the residence of her son-in-law, C. D. MacFarlane, 426 Donegal street, the Rev. David Wren, of Trinity United church, conducting the services, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Greatrix.

Interment will take place at the Presbyterian cemetery, Mount Pleasant.

SIGNAL PLACED OVER DRIVEWAY

Belleghem's Wish to Warn Passers-by of Ambulance Coming Out.

BELL TO BE ATTACHED.

Belleghem and Sons, on Hunter street have taken a step in the interest of public safety. The ambulance drive which is between the Bell Telephone building and Belleghem's building has long been considered as very dangerous to people passing. An ambulance call means hurry and as pedestrians or cars approaching the drive cannot see the approach until they are upon, it there has been many narrow escapes both for those coming along Hunter street and the drivers of the ambulance.

In view of this a warning signal has been placed over the sidewalk in full view of everyone which flashes in red: 'Danger, Stop" when the ambulance is about to start out. Below this is a metal sign with the one word ambulance, which should signify to the public the importance of co-operation, both for their own safety and for those on their errand of mercy. A bell likely will be placed in conjunction with this warning signal to warn the less observant that something is about to happen and for them to keep their eyes open.

Wrestlers Attract Many Spectators

At one o'clock to-day, at the corner of Park and Charlotte streets, in Peterborough, was held a wrestling match. Whether it was for the Olympic tryout or getting ready for the next strong man, one of which always travels with circuses and sideshows, is not decided yet. Whatever the reason the wrestlers amused many spectators who gathered to watch the good natured cotnest. Two of the men who were laying the asphalt where the tracks were taken up on Park street, feeling rather good after their lunch, chose S. T. Medd's lawn for their mat and went into a real struggle, after which many spectators gathered and were rather disappointed as the contestants got up laughing. Perhaps they wanted to see a fight of real temper instead of fun.

In MEMORIAM

COOK.—In loving memory of our dear baby, Ruby Lavina Cook, who died August 3rd, 1927.
No one knows how much we miss you, dear;
No one knows the bitter pain
We have suffered since we have lost you, dear,
Life has never been the same.
In our heart your memory lingers
Sweetly, tender, fond and true;
There is not a minute, dear Ruby, that we do not think of you.

Loretta Moher Meets Accidental Death

Driver Is Freed Of Blame

Verdict of Jury Impannelled To Inquire Into Death of Douro Girl.

RUN OVER BY TRUCK.

Four Witnesses Called at Inquest Held in Lakefield.

That Loretta Teresa Moher was killed on Wednesday, August 1st by the wheel of a truck passing over her head," was the verdict of the coroner's jury empannelled to inquire into the cause of death yesterday afternoon in Lakefield. The jury also freed James Emeric Robinson, the driver of the truck from all blame, believing that the child met her death in an accident.

The inquiry was conducted by Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton, K.C., before Coroner Dr. J. C. Smith. The mother, the only witness who might have been able to give the real facts of the accident, was unable to be present, but the four witnesses called were able to supply sufficient evidence to show that the little girl met her death when the driver of the truck was backing up after calling for the day's milk supply for the cheese factory.

In all probability the little tot, who was on the verandah playing when the driver got into the truck, toddled out behind the truck and fell. The little girl was only fifteen months old and when the accident happened the father was in a field nearby.

The driver of the truck, Emeric Robinson, is 18 years old and furnished to the Crown Attorney his chauffeur's permit to operate a truck. The father, grandafther, an uncle, and the driver of the truck, were the only witnesses called while Dr. Smith told of visiting the home after the accident.

Heard Screaming.

William Moher, a resident of Douro, and grandfather of the child, was the first witness called. He is a little hard of hearing and was in the kitchen when the accident occurred. He heard screaming outside and when he came to the kitchen door he saw the dead child in her mothers arms with its face badly crushed.

Frank Moher, father of the little tot, said he was in the field at the time the accident occurred and about 300 yards from where the truck was standing. The first he knew that anything was wrong was when he heard the mother scream. He came over and found the little girl dead. Witness said the driver had been coming for his milk every day since June 18. He was unable to say how the accident occurred.

James Moher, an uncle, was unable to give any evidence relevant to the case except that the little girl was his niece.

Emeric Robinson was the last witness called by Mr. Hatton. On the morning of the accident he arrived at the Moher home shortly after eight o'clock and loaded the milk on to the truck. In getting out of the yard it was necessary for him to back up. When he got ito the cab he saw the little tot playing with her older sister on the verandah and the first he knew that something had

HEALERS OFFER CERTAIN CURES

Vie With Farmers On Market This Morning—Few Patrons Attend.

HEAT SPOILS SALES.

The market was a good place for sick men this morning. Two men with wonder cures, guaranteed to heal one, no matter what was the matter. The only things they drew the line on was cancer and consumption, while Elmo corn cure was offered as definite relief to those suffering from that ailment.

Professor Thomas Patrick Murphy, a returned soldier and lightweight champion of the world for nine and a-half years, who was broken in health after the war, roamed the byways and highways collecting all the common herbs and blending them to heal himself, which discovery he wishes to pass on to his fellow men.

He drew the crowd by demonstrating how he can make all figures come back to nine, which Burroughs applied to his adding machine. The magician then advertise dhis wares, after which he entertained the crowd some more by passing a chain through his wrist and a rope through his neck.

The outside market gave a display of local and imported vegetebales and fruit. Local cherries sold for 2 quarts for a quarter, guaranteed honest weight with no stem. Peas sold at four quarts for a quarter, and beans two quarts for twenty-fice cents. Gherkin cucumbers sold by the two-quart basket for twenty cents and the dill variety sold thirty cents for the six quart basket.

Upstairs, butter was very scarce and ranged in price from forty to forty-five sents a pound, while eggs had a very wide range in price; the highest quality, fine large, clean white eggs selling as high as forty-five cents a dozen, while a few paces away a smaller variety, not so attractive-looking but which the vendor claimed to be as good as any, was selling for thirty cents. Huckleberries, also claimed to be honest weight and no stems, sold for twenty cents a quart. Broilers were quite plentiful, selling from forty to forty-five cents a pound. Last fall's chickens sold for eighty-five cents at some places.

The table at the left of the entrance was a profusion of flowers, sweet peas selling for fifteen cents to twenty-five cents a bunch, and gladiolas selling for twenty and twenty-five cents a bunch.

The attendance at the market was slim, especially on the outside market where people found it too hot to spend much time. The heat also effected the upstairs market, where buyers were also few.

Cerealist Says Western Canada Will Have Rust-Resistent Wheat Within Three Years

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 4 (Canadian Press).—Within three years Western Canada should have a rust-resistant wheat which will grade as high as the varieties now being grown, according to L. H. Newman, Dominion Cerealist, who arrived here from Ottawa yesterday.

Mr. Newman is spending a month or more in the West, inspecting the work of the Dominion Rust Research Laboratory at the Manitoba Agricultural College and the various Dominion experimental farms in the West. He will also visit farms where rust-resistant grains are being produced for experimental purposes.

The Ottawa official announced that the work at the research laboratory here would be extended within a year. An expert cytologist, Miss Hollingshead, formerly of Saskatoon, Sask., and now at Berkeley College, California, has been added to the staff, he said. Miss Hollingshead will assume her new duties next Spring.

The appointment, Mr. Newman said, is the first of its kind in Canada, marking a distinct advance in the linking of pure scientific research with the practical purposes of agriculture.

Another phase of cereal work which is engaging the attention of the department, is the raising and marketing of high grade malting barley.

"We have found that "Tribi," a variety of barley grown in Manitoba, corresponds closely with the favored variety bought by Old Country brewers from California," Mr. Newman said. "Professor H. C. Grant, of the Manitoba Agricultural College, is now in England to confer with heads of malting firms there on the marketing of Canadian barley."

POLISH PLANE WELL FUELLED

Could Stay Up Until To-morrow Morning, Say Airmen.

NOW OVER ATLANTIC.

PARIS, Aug. 4 (Canadian Press).—The Polish fliers, Major Kubala and Major Idzikowski, can keep their plane, now somewhere over the Atlantic, afloat in the air until 7.46 a.m. Eastern standard time it is calculated. The Marshal Pilsudski has a cruising radius of 5,000 miles.

Airmen said that this morning the fliers should be over the steamer lanes and that something was likely to be heard of them from some vessel. Reports of fog along the Grand Banks, it was thought, might cause them to abandon their intention of going by way of Newfoundland and they might head straight for New York from a point 1,400 miles east of the Metropolis.

LONDON, Aug. 4.— (Canadian Press).—Wireless messages today indicated that possibly the Polish plane flying from Paris to New York had been sighted at sea going well at 9:40 p.m. last night, Eastern Standard Time.

The Valencia wireless station said that it had received a message from the British steamer Port Hunter, relaying a message intercepted from the steamer Aztec which read:

"Biplane passed this morning latitude 44.22 north longitude 24.08 west in direction of 75 degrees at 2.40 Greenwich time."

The position given would place the plane about 200 miles north of the Azores. If the plane is that of the Polish airmen they are apparently behind schedule as they estimated that they would pass over the Azores between 9 and 11 p.m. Greenwich time last night.

Turning Back?

LONDON, Aug. 4 (Canadian Press) — The possibility that the Polish trans-Atlantic plane Marshal Pilsudski, which started for the United States early yesterday, has swung around and is returning to Europe was suggested to-day by a message received from the British steamer Amakurax. The message said an airplane approached from the West, encircled it at a distance of half a mile at a height of 500 feet, and disappeared northward, flying very fast. The message was sent at 10.02 p.m. to-day, Eastern Standard tine.

Direction 75 degrees

NEW YORK, Aug. 4 (Canadian Press). — The Navy Hydrographic office to-day interpreted the reports of ships at sea which sighted the Polish trans-Atlantic airplane as definitely indicating that the Polish fliers were headed back towards Europe.

A message received from the steamer Aztec said that the direction of the plane was 75 degrees. Officials at the Hydrographic Office said that this meant that the plane was travelling in a north-east direction, which would take it towards the British coast.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR EVERY CITIZEN

Is Given to Subscribe to the Citizens' War Memorial.

Subscriptions are coming in daily to the treasurer, Mr. G. H. Thompson, from citizens who are desirous of doing their part in the erection of the handsome memorial in honor of the Peterborough city and county men who gave their lives in the Great War.

The cost is $32,500, and of this amount $26,000 has already been raised by private subscription and by amounts received from organizations. Every household should send in some amount whether it is large or small. Letters are being sent out daily until the whole city will have been covered.

Just as soon as this week-end holiday is over, it is expected our citizens will forward their remittances in large numbers.

EASTERN PADDLERS HAVE MOST POINTS

Score Fourteen, Against Eight, For Western Clubs at Lachine.

LACHINE, Aug. 4 (Canadian Press).—In the morning contests of the Canadian Canoe Association regatta here to-day, the eastern division clubs, Montreal district, scored fourteen points against eight by the western division. The Central and western Ontario Algonquin division had two points and the northern division one.

JOE WRIGHT BEATEN TO-DAY BY HUNGARIAN ROWER STRAKA

Canadian Sculler Has Another Chance, Rowing Against Other Losers.

HAMPERED BY WIND.

European Rival Rows Along Sheltered Side of Canal But Finishes Poorly.

AMSTERDAM, August 4 (By G. T. Louden, Correspondent of Canadian Press).—Joe Wright, Jr., holder of the Diamond Sculls, was defeated by Straka, of Hungary, in the preliminary trial of the Olympic single sculls event to-day, but will get another chance on Monday, sculling against the other losers for the right to keep in the running.

The Canadian was defeated by three lengths, but appeared much stronger at the finish than his conqueror. The Hungarian rowed on the sheltered side of the Sloten Canal, with Wright getting the main force of the terrific gale that prevailed to-day.

Straka took the lead at the 250-metre mark, one-eighth of the distance, and continued to gain to the finish, winning in eight minutes and 36 seconds.

Wright at times fought terrific gusts of wind, while Straka rowed the full 2,000 metres in smooth water. It was conceded the result was not an absolute indication of the respective merits of the scullers.

The Canadian 1,600-metre relay team finished second in the Olympic trials to-day to the United States team, but qualified for the finals to-morrow. The Canadian team was composed of W. A. Wilson, Montreal; Phil Edwards, Hamilton; Stan Glover, Edmonton, and Jimmy Ball, Winnipeg.

Swede Wins Pentathlon.

S. A. Thofeldt, of Sweden, won the Olympic modern pentathlon championship to-day, succeeding his countryman, B. S. G. Lindman, who finished second.

PRINCE OF WALES ATTIRED WITHOUUT VEST ABOUSES TAILORS OF OLD LONDON.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—London tailors were shaking their heads doubtfully to-day at pictures of the Prince of Wales wearing a gray flannel suit without a vest. They agreed that although the Prince could do no wrong, it was an unheard of sartorial liberty for royalty.

It was warm, sticky weather when the Prince arrived at The Daily Telegraph exhibition of antiques at Olympia.

One West End tailor agreed that under certain conditions it was permissible to follow the American example and abandon the vest, "but general neglect of waistcoats is hardly likely to follow the Prince's lead," he said. "Warm weather does not last long enough in this country."

A BULLET EVERY YARD OF 34 MILES IN HOUR

The machine guns which are in action at the rifle range on the Norwood road are capable of firing 250 rounds each and 250 rounds a minute every minute — 1,000 rounds a minute for the four guns in action. If kept firing continuously at this rate for one hour 60,000 bullets would be fired, enough to place one bullet every yard along a front 34 miles wide.

11,000 WAR VETS TO VISIT FRANCE

Great Pilgrimage To Battlefields Arranged By British Legion.

SERVICE AT YPRES.

LONDON, Aug. 4.— (Canadian Press Cable).—Eleven thousand ex-service men and their families, constituting the greatest pilgrimage of modern times, are leaving Britain this week-end for battlefields of France and Flanders under the auspices of the British Legion. Three thousand women are included in the party

The Prince of Wales will join the pilgrims at Bethune on Tuesday and without formality will drive through the historic towns of war. On Wednesday a great commemorative service will be conducted at the Menin gate at Ypres by the Most Rev. Cosmo Gordon Land, Archbishop of York and next Archishop of Canterbury. The Prince will take the salute before the ruined cloth hall of Ypres with Prince Charles of Belgium, Marshall Foch of France and Admiral Lord Jellicoe attending.

2,000 DROWNED.

Reports From Interior of China Say River Overflowed There.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 4. —(Canadian Press.)—Chinese reports from Tsinan state that about 2,000 persons in the towns of Ankiw and Linchu in Central Shantung have been drowned in a flood caused by the overflowing of the Tai er river, a tributary of the Yellow river. The area has been experiencing an unusually heavy rainfall

ALDERMEN SAY PUMPS MUST GO

Stand By Recent By-law in Spite of Opposition—Committees Meet.

ROUTINE BUSINESS.

What to do with the $4,000 recently received by the Council from the Utilities Commission was the subject most frequently mentioned at last night's meeting of the Finance Committee and the Board of Works, although nothing official was done in the matter. Routine business occupied the attention of the aldermen, during which, however, they expressed their determination to stand by the by-law ordering the gasoline pumps off the curbs in the centre of the city, in spite of opposition met with.

In connection with the pumps it was mentioned that some of the dealers intend to bring action to compel the closing of coal cellars, etc., below the sidewalks, and it was pointed out that these are permissable as they do not obstruct the street but that, technically, the Council should never have allowed the pumps to be put up. At any rate, they were erected under an agreement by which the owners bound themselves to take them out when notified to do so.

The Finance Committee decided to buy a new Remington typewriter to replace one of the same make now in City Treasurer Adams' office. The old machine is ten years old, and the aldermen felt that the increased efficiency to be expected was worth more than the difference in price between a new machine and the repairing of the old one.

City Clerk Armstrong submitted a list of twenty-two combinations of polling sub-divisions to be used in the vote for the Nicholls Hospital by-law, to be held September 28. The vote is confined to property owners, and will be small, so that all the 28 divisions will not be needed.

A sidewalk will be built on Downey Street for a short distance east from the Monaghan Road, to serve two new houses being constructed there.

Use for the heat generated in the incinerator was suggested by Ald. Stocker, who proposed that a garage which may be erected on the city's property nearby be heated by a hot water coil from the furnaces there.

ASKS ALL-YEAR SCHOOL TERMS

Californian Would Let Parents Choose Vacation Time to Suit.

FIVE PERIODS

SACRAMENTO, Cal., July 31.—Soft sunny summer may not mean playtime to swim in the old swimmin' hole if state superintendent of schools William John Cooper tinkers with the school year in the fashion he outlined today.

The latch string will always be hanging out on the school house door the whole 12 months in the year, if Cooper carries out his plan of a permanent "open door" policy in California schools.

A school year divided into five periods of 10 weeks each, with two weeks off for everybody at Christmas is the educator's new school calendar.

But it will not be necessary to play hookey to go fishing, for the superintendent expects Johnny and Willie to attend only four of the five semesters during the year.

"School vacations do not always occur conveniently for the rest of the family," Cooper asserted. "I would keep the schools open all the year and let the parents choose any 10-week term they care to for vacation purposes."

SOUNDS THAT CLIMB HIGHEST

Recent tests show that the crowning of a rooster, the ringing of a church bell, and, under some conditions, the shout of a man, penetrate almost a mile into the upper air.

A cricket's chrip carries up 2,500 feet, and the croak of a frog can be heard at an altitude of 2,000 feet. Among sounds produced by living things, says opular Science Monthly, a dog's yelp holds the altitude record. It has been heard by balloon

CAR LIGHTS BAD JURY DECLARES

Death of Frederick Barnsley, 10, Investigated—Driver Faces Serious Charge.

APPEARS ON TUESDAY.

A coroner's jury, inquiring into the death of Frederick Barnsley, ten-year-old youth, who died in the Ross Memorial Hospital last Sunday night, following a motor accident on the Little Britain road about two miles south of town, failed to embody in its verdict that which might clear the young driver of the car from the charge which he at present faces—manslaughter. The verdict returned after fourteen and a half minutes' deliberation on the evidence submitted at the inquest held in the Council Chamber here last night, read that "We, your jury, empanelled to investigate the death of Frederick Barnsley, find that he came to his death in the Ross Memorial Hospital due to an accident to a car in which he was riding, without proper lights, and driven by Roy Bools, on Sunday evening, July 29, 1928, the car overturning in a ditch on the Little Britain road while attempting to pass another car,—Arthur Gamble, foreman."

Roy Bools, aged fourteen years, who was driving the car, will come into court on Tuesday, August 7, on the manslaughter charge.

The inquest, conducted by Coroner Dr. F. A. Logan, was attended by a large number of persons, a few curious, many sympathetic, not only to the bereaved parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Barnsley, but also to Mr. and Mrs. James Bools, parents of the accused lad. Evidence bearing on the case was given by young Bools, who told of connecting wires on the car and taking it out contrary to the instructions of his older brother, in whose charge it had been placed by the owner, Hugh Irwine. Ewart Rogers, a chum, had assisted him and had accompanied him on the drive to Trotter's farm, south of town, where some of the lads had hoped to get work. Carl Rogers, aged nine years, Teddy Lawson, aged seven years, and Frederick Barnsley were the other occupants of the car, and when the car turned over following the visit to the farm, it was two of the trio who suffered. Barnsley, sitting on the left side of the rear seat, received a fractured skull (from which he suffered concussion of the brain), a fracture of the femur, and shock, from which he died, while Teddy Lawson, sitting on the opposite side of the rear seat, sustained a broken arm.

Other witnesses were Hugh Irwine, owner of the car; Fred Bools, in whose charge the car had been placed; Kenneth Robertson, who had seen the accident, and whose car the lads had been attempting to pass at the time, and Ewart and Carl Rogers, who told similar stories, while Provincial Constable F. Wetherall and Dr. Hugh A. Logan gave evidence dealing with the scene of the accident, and the nature of the lad's injuries. Crown Attorney J. E. Anderson assisted the coroner.

The jury comprised: A. Gamble, foreman; B. Bateson, B. Courtney, R. Butler, B. Parrish, H. Elliott, W. E. Ferguson.

MacDonald Expects It Soon

Former Premier Lands in Canada For Short Holiday.

NO TROUBLE IN PARTY.

Denies Rumor That Chief Difficulty Comes From Radical Wing.

QUEBEC, Que., Aug. 4 (Special to The Examiner, by R. E. Knowles).—I have just concluded something more than an hour spent in personal an dexclusive interview with the Rt. Hon. Ramsay Macdonald, ex-Prime Minister of Great Britain.

It is no light thing at any time to talk face to face with one who has fought his way to a great place. It is still more impressive to speak with a man who has, so far as we can survey the ages, secured a place among the immortals.

And it is hardly the language of extravagance to concede such a place to Ramsay Macdonald. For it was his unique experience, his unprecedented achievement to become the first "Labor" Prime Minister of a realm whose rulers from the immemorial had been aristocrats and patricians. Not only so, but "Labor" regarded as something to be kept sternly in its place to be ruled rather than to rule, and to accept as the will of heaven its abiding lot as hewer of wood and drawer of water, for the sons of privilege and station.

"Mr. Macdonald," I began, as I settled myself down in his spacious parlor at the Chateau Frontenac, "Is it true, as many say, that your chief foes are of your own household"

"This—That the rank and file of the Socialist party are so extreme and unreasonable, so radical and drastic that they make your life one long struggle to appease them on the one hand and still to maintain public confidence on the other"

"That is all rubbish," was the unequivocal reply, "and is trumped up for the interest of what are called the classes."

"What do you think of the recent railwaymen's voluntary consent to reduced wages?"

"It's sad; but it's glorious. It tells with a thousand tongues the reasonableness of the Labor classes when properly appealed to. And it speaks volumes for my old colleague, J. H. Thomas. He is the greatest trade union leader in the world. Be sure (as he turned his earnest eyes on me) to say that I said that about Thomas."

"Does the Labor party grow any more kindly toward protection?"

"Never. We stand with faces of flint against protection. It's no good. And Winston Churchill holds the same view, and he is Chancellor of the Exchequer. In his heart he distrusts protection, much to the consternation of Mr. ——; well, perhaps, I better not give the name."

"Mr. MacDonald, I have interviewed many eminent visitors from the Old Land. Almost without exception, they express the belief that you will again be Prime Minister. What is your view about that?"

"I won't speak of it at all." The face and voice both touched with Scottish sternness.

Socialist Rule Soon.

"Well, do you think a Socialist leader will yet, and soon, be Premier?"

"I surely do, and my highest personal ambition is to make the country believe in us. I say with assurance that the people are far readier to take us now than they were before. They are sick of Baldwin. What happened in 1923 will soon happen again."

"Forgive my daring, Mr. MacDonald but why did you never take a title?"

"Because I don't want one. Be-

POPE BREAKS OLD PRECEDENT BECAUSE OF SPRAINED ANKLE.

ROME, Aug. 4.—The Pope on Thursday, in accordance with an ancient custom, should have descended into the Pauline Chapel to pray for the special indulgence known as that of Portuncula, through the intercession of St. Francis of Assisi.

This ceremony usually occurs in the afternoon, the Pontiff going three times from his apartment to the Pauline Chapel. Thursday, instead, the Pope broke the precedent and retired to pray in the chapel of his private apartment.

In the Vatican it was explained that the Pontiff's decision was prompted first by the fact that about ten days ago he sprained his ankle, which still gives him considerable discomfort and the intense heat, which he feels very much. It is absolutely denied that he is not well. Thursday morning, in fact, he granted as usual both private and public audiences.

Shipping Boards Appointed For Grain Pool

MANY FARMERS JOIN THE POOL

Keene Section of Otonabee Reports 100—Shipping Boards Appointed.

SHIPPING STATIONS.

Three hundred farmers around Peterborough have joined the Canadian Grain Pool, and are now completing their arrangements for shipping. One hundred from the vicinity of Keene have signed contracts, and on Thursday night appointed as their shipping board, Messrs. W. A. Nelson, W. A. Drummond and F. A. Eason.

South Monaghan, Smith and Ennismore Townships contribute the rest of the present membership. Nearly sixty live comparatively close to the city in Smith and Otonabee. The shipping points arranged for or under consideration are Peterborough, Keene Station, Indian River, Lakefield and Fraserville.

Mr. W. R. Shields, who has been assisting in the work of local organization, went to Keene on Thursday night, and in spite of the obstacle of a heavy rain storm, succeeded in having a shipping board appointed. Last night he went to Bensfort, and tonight the Peterborough shippers meet at the office of the representative of the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

The chief duty of the shipping board is to act as intermediary between the farmer and the elevator owner in any dispute that may arise respecting the grading of wheat. In any such disagreement the board shall submit a sample of the disputed grain to the nearest Government grain inspector.

Pool contractors in Peterborough County would have been more numerous if Mr. Shields could have arranged for other meetings, especially at Warsaw, Westwood and Indian River. Officials of the Pool were too busy to devote further time to Peterborough County this year. Reports from Ennismore and South Monaghan have been quite encouraging, and the general response in the county has demonstrated the interest of local growers in the sale of their grain products.

It was stated at Keene that Warden Morley E. Smithson has been ill since the conclusion of the County Council sessions in June, and was unable to canvass the farmers of the section of Otonabee which had been allotted to him. Mr. Smithson's many friends in the county and city will regret his illness and hope for his speedy recovery.

Friday's canvass by Mr. Shields, accompanied by John McIntosh, secured quite a number of signatories in North Monaghan.

CIRCUIT SUPPER HELD AT CAVAN

PRESENT PLAY.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAVAN, August 4. — A circuit supper was served in Cavan Community Hall on Thursday Evening. Ladies from the three appointments supplied and served the food, which formed an abundant and appetizing menu. Berries and cream with bread and butter, biscuits, cakes and all kinds of pie were on the menu.

After the supper the young people of Elizabethville gave the program, which consisted of a good play, "The Old-Fashioned Mother," with music between acts.

WARSAW UNITED W.M.S. MEETING

Religious and Medical Work Are Studied By Ladies.

(Examiner Correspondence)

WARSAW, August 4.—The regular meeting of the Warsaw W.M.S. met at Mrs. Rufus Payne's home on Thursday afternoon. Group C, of which Mrs. Payne is leader provided the program and refreshments.

After the usual opening exercises, the notes on the subject for the day were given. The subject was the connection between religious mission work and medical among the strangers coming into Canada. Stress was laid on the care of mothers and several stories told. Mrs. George Taylor sang a missionary hymn.

Among those present was Mrs. Alec Watts, the oldest member who is still very interested in missionary work and attends meetings whenever she can.

Flowers for shut-ins were requested from the members.

Miss Northcott, a missionary from China, who is home on furlough, and plans to return to her work this fall has said she would come to Warsaw during September. As Miss Northcott is interested in other missions besides United church missions it was decided to have this meeting in the Town Hall and invite any an deveryone to come, also to have a program besides.

Farm Notes.

There are still huckleberries in abundance, and raspberries are still good in quantity and quality. Many carloads from in or near the village went picking on Thursday. Some reached home before the storm.

In spite of the rains, much hay wheat and rye has been gotten in and in good condition this week. It is not often that hay must be left to cut grain, or draw it in, by the first of August, but such is the case. Men usually look for a few days slack between hay and wheat harvest but not many get it this year; at least if they have wheat or rye.

Threshing has been as early as July 26, but there has been none around Warsaw yet. Mark Lonsberry expects to start on Monday.

This is his first year with his own machine.

George Moore has a new threshing outfit. He has been driving the stone crusher with the engine during the early summer.

William Darling is among the few who have summer plowing done.

Thunder Storm.

A heavy electric storm accompanied by torrents of rain passed over part of Dummer on Thursday evening commencing after five o'clock. Even the cattle seemed terrified. It was very dark before the storm burst. It was not long before flats and ditches were as full of water as they are in the spring.

SOCIAL IN HONOR OF BRIDES TO BE

Misses Gladys Gray and Kathleen Fowler Receive Handsome Gifts.

MILLBROOK NEWS.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, Aug. 4 — A very pleasant social event took place at the parish hall of Saint Thomas' church on Friday evening, in honor of two brides-to-be, Misses Gladys Gray and Kathleen Fowler, both of whom have been popular and active members of the church and its various organizations, the marriage of each having been announced to take place in the early part of this month.

Rev. P. C. Howard filled the position of chairman, and regret was expressed that the rector, Rev. Canon Allen and Mrs. Allen, were unable to be present .Summer flowers and foliage added beauty and fragrance to the interior of the Hall, and following the chairman's opening remarks, a brief program was enjoyed, the items including:

Piano duet by the Misses Marcella and Marguerite Lang; reading, "Membraneous Croup," by Rev. P. C. Howard; solo, "Beautiful Land of Nod," by Mrs. Howard; Miss Mamie Collins played the accompaniment, and presided at the piano throughout the evening.

At the invitation of the chairman, the guests of honor were given seats at the front of the gathering, when Rev. Mr. Howard read the accompanying address and two girl friends of the brides-to-be, Misses Kathleen Donnelly and Nellie Miller, on behalf of the congregation presented each with a handsome silver meat platter

The recipients of the gifts made suitable reply, and later refreshments were served, and a delightful social hour enjoyed. Miss Ella Grandy was convenor of the refreshment committee and as usual her share of the evening's responsibility thoroughly carried out

Miss Gladys Gray has been an active worker in the A.Y.P.A., holding the position of secretary for the past year; after her marriage, which takes place on Saturday, her home will be in Detroit, while Miss Kathleen Fowler, who is also an A. Y.P.A. worker, will have her future residence at Belleville.

44-MILE JAZZ MARATHON NOW ON BLISTERED FEET

BOSTON, Aug. 4.—Louis Lerner, "Back Bay Dancing King," yesterday afternoon won the forty-four mile Providence to Boston "Blister Derby."

When Lerner, dancing and walking, ended the long grind over the highways at Boylson and Tremont streets, in the heart of the city's shopping district, at 12.47 p.m., he was miles ahead of Harry Wiseman, Boston dancing master and originator of the "dancing duel."

Noon-day throngs watched Lerner and his stockingless six girl partners struggle in the intense heat into the business section of the city. They had been on the road almost continuously since 12.30 a.m. Two of the girls collapsed on the road and Lerner himself fell once.

The "dark horse" in the "Jam Marathon," George Sleeper, with two girl partners, dropped out in Westwood, about twenty miles from the finish, their feet blistered.

Wiseman and his nine girl partners charged Lerner with not dancing the whole way, asserting the Lerner group walked arm in arm most of the distance.

THE UNTOUCHED MEAL.

"I simply cannot eat." Actual tragedy is suggested by these simple words, so often heard, because loss of appetite is the beginning of trouble that sooner or later reveals itself as indigestion, nervous dyspepsia, with violent headaches and other serious symptoms. Loss of appetite, whether a man or woman, is a symptom you dare not ignore. If you do, much suffering is sure to follow.

The secret of a good appetite—the secret of keeping well—is to keep up the quality of the blood. By enriching and purifying the blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills supply strength to the enfeebled organs of digestion, and enable them to digest thoroughly the food eaten without causing pain or distress. Proof of this is given by Mr. William H. Kelly, Kingston, Ont., who says:—"I cannot recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills too highly. I had been bothered with indigestion in a chronic form for almost ten years. Everything I would eat would turn sour. I felt as though there was a big ball in my stomach all the time. I felt tired and weak and would often turn dizzy. I doctored and tried many medicines, spending many, many dollars, but to no avail. One day I heard a lady praising Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I decided to try them. I am more than glad I did, for soon I found relief, and after taking the pills for a couple of months the trouble had disappeared, and now I can eat all kinds of food, and have again my old time health and strength."

Send for These Health Books.

Two useful books, "Building Up the Blood," and "What to Eat and How to Eat," will be sent free by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., if you mention this paper.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all dealers in medicine or will be sent by mail, post paid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box.

THE OLD ARMY GAME.

HOMES, Mich., Aug. 4.—Although the new models had been shown, automobiles continued to hold the centre of interest here while the school superintendent and students battled over an edict which prohibited the latter from using "gasoline buggies." The deciding factor in the fight came when eleven students were expelled for disobeying the order. Their parents got after the town officials, who went to the mayor, who got after the superintendent, who declared a truce by reinstating the students pending an investigation.

Two Horses Ordered Off Paving Work On Account of Run-Down Condition

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 4. — That the men are not doing all the heavy work was evidenced this morning when two horses were ordered off the paving work until they were in better condition to continue the grind. The animals had been recently purchased from farmers in the district and it is believed that they had not been fed for hard work but allowed to keep in shape on the pasture field. The veterinary called to inspect the animals did not think that their condition made it necessary for them to be taken off work, and suggested to the drivers that they keep the animals in the stables for a couple of days and then put them back on the job.

To the unskilled horseman, the chief complaint seems to be that the horses have become scalded where the harness chafed them and a few small sores have made their appearance. These, the drivers claimed, were being treated and were drying up. In a day or two they would entirely disappear.

Earlier in the game, horsemen kept a watchful eye on two horses which were just out of the lumber camps and were hauling cement in the steel dump carts. These animals were thin and seemed to be getting thinner. But it was a case of not being hardened to that particular type of work and not having been fed for it. The same two horses have grown much fatter on the job and have every appearance of being in the pink of condition.

MEDICAL MISSIONS STUDIED BY W.M.S.

Madoc United Church Ladies Hold Their Regular Meeting.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MADOC, Aug. 4.—The W.M.S. of Trinity United church held the August meeting at the home of Mrs. O. Dingman. Owing to the illness of the president, Mrs. L. Ashley, the first vice-president, Mrs. McMeechan, presided and Mrs. Rivers gave the scriptural reading, "Christ's Standard of Greatness" and Mrs. J. Henderson offered prayer.

The Watch Tower was responded to by several of the Heralds. Mrs. Dafoe, secretary, was requested to send letters of sympathy to four members who had illness in the homes.

The topic, "Medical Missions of the United Church in Canada" was introduced by Mrs. McMechan and taken part in by Mesdames Wellman, Blakely, A. Reid, Nickle, Bristol, Miss Wood and Miss S. Ashley.

Sunshine bags for use in August were distributed and Mrs. M. Bristol closed the meeting with prayer, after which a social half hour was spent. The attendance was 22 with several visitors.

Madoc W.C.T.U.

The postponed meeting of Madoc W.C.T.U. was held on July 26 at Sagonaswka cottage at Moira Lake, the cosy cottage of Mrs. A. H. Watson, Mrs. McCaffrey, president, in the chair.

The usual opening exercises were held and on motion of Mrs. C. Whytock and Mrs. R. Bristol, it was decided that 60 pledge cards be sent for.

Minutes were read and accepted, after which Miss A. Sinclair was called on for an address on "Child Welfare." A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Miss Sinclair on motion of Mrs. Rivers and Mrs. (Dr.) Young.

It was decided to hold the next meeting at the home of Mrs. J. Tucker by invitation.

HAY CROP LOST.

MILLBROOK, Aug. 4 (Examiner Correspondence). — Harvey Gardiner, of Carmel, about three miles south of the village, had his barn burned through being struck by lightning during the heavy thunderstorm which passed over this section between three and four o'clock on Friday afternoon.

The fire broke out apparently, in the hay-mow, and in a little more than half an hour the building, which was approximately thirty by eighty feet, was completely destroyed; all of this season's hay crop, two pigs, a number of fowl, and some machinery were included in the loss sustained. There was some insurance but not enough to cover the expense involved in replacing the barn and its contents.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MARMORA, August 4.—About seventy-five members of the Bailey family assembled at the Booster Park on Wednesday for the third annual reunion. Since the first reunion took place, four members have passed away, the last being Mrs. James Edgar Bailey appointed president last year. Mrs. William Pack, of Marmora Township, was chosen president on Wednesday. It was decided to hold the reunion two weeks earlier next year.

Wide-Awakes Picnic.

The Wide Awake Sunbeam Class in connection with Marmora United Sunday School whose teacher is Mrs. (Dr.) D. L. Curtis held a pleasant picnic at Marble Cliff on Thursday afternoon. The occasion was used to present Miss Nellie Davidson who is shortly leaving for the West, with a beautiful ivory manicure set.

To Hold Picnic.

Marmora Lodge A.F. and A.M. No. 222 is holding its annual picnic on the grounds of Dr. Mackechnie at Crowe Lake on Wednesday, August 22.

Reopen Rooms.

One Tuesday evening all rooms in the enlarged Royal Hotel were occupied. T. N. Potts, proprietor, received many tributes of praise for the attractiveness of the rooms and the comfort which they impart.

Personals.

Mr. Kenneth Prentice, of Toronto, visited his brother, Mr. E. C. Prentice, for a couple of days this week.

The brothers, Bernard and James Hughes, are on a three weeks' motor trip to Minneapolis and Dakota.

Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Jones and children, of Detroit, are visiting relatives in this community.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Norris motored to Laconia, N.Y., to spend the week-end there.

New Beauty - New Luxury
New Performance - nowhere equalled - - -

NEW Masterpiece Bodies by Fisher endow these new McLaughlin-Buick creations with a measure of style, individuality and dashing beauty unapproached by any other automobile.

Gorgeous new colors and wonderful new upholsteries lend an added touch of luxury. New adjustable front seats and wider rear seats provide unequalled driving—and riding comfort.

Increased bore and stroke—greater piston displacement—improved carburetion and other advancements in McLaughlin-Buick's famous valve-in-head six-cylinder engine—give tremendous new power to what was already the most powerful automobile engine of its size in the world.

The same great developments impart thrilling new pick-up, lightning acceleration and new top speed that few drivers will care to attain.

Other features include new high-pressure gas pump—handsome new radiator design—new chrome-plated head-lamps and cowl lamps—new type instrument board—as well as many additional appointments of luxury and convenience.

The 1929 McLaughlin-Buick is an epic car marking the supreme achievement of automobile engineering.

CHRIST SPEAKING IN PARABLES

Matt. xiii, 1-3, 10-36. "The same day went Jesus out of the house, and sat by the sea side. And great multitudes were gathered together unto Him, so that He went into a ship and sat; and the multitude stood on the shore. And He spake many things unto them in parables saying, etc."

THE time is especially important and significant here. It was the same day n which Jesus had come to words with the Pharisees of Jerusalem about the rce of demonia. For the first time they charged Him with being inspired by te Evil One. He retorted the charge with what we might call fearful distinctess. Nor is this all. By a touching coincidence when this rupture took place, ile the words were on His lips, His mother and brethren came that they might ke charge of Him—as they said because He was beside himself. The same day sus sat by the sea side, sad and alone. Many sorrowful reflections passed rough His mind, perhaps, as He watched the pebbles on the seashore, of the sult of so much sowing for so little fruit. This had been the result up to then His ministry.

But the crowds now gathered for struction, and He went up on a fishg-boat, upon the sunny water, and the ople stood by the seashore. And He ake many words that afternoon, t not like other times, for lo! as He ened His mouth He spake in parables. ot pious words, such as the people re wont to hear uttered by those acious lips, but strange words about easure, corn and seeds. When he had ded all these sayings, and without word of explanation, He left them tonished—"for without a parable ake He not unto them." His disciples re confounded for they had never ard Him speak thus before, and as ey felt incapable of taking the fruit om the husks, as it were, they sought n explanation; and so when they re alone with Him, their first ques-on was, "Why speakest Thou to em in parables?" and their second estion was, "What might this parable ?"

Brethren, there was a deep reason r this change of method. This marks change in His teaching, it marks a rn in the career of Jesus. The parable nd its adaptation, but before we seek explain this, let us see what are the culiarities of parabolic teaching. e parable belongs to a class of disurse which has always been familiar Western Asia. In the Old Testament have the parable of Nathan, etc.: e veiled, the historical type, the symol, the entire language of active etaphor—all these abound in Biblical nd historical literature. But Jesus adapted the parable, and wrought to such a point of beauty that, rearded from the literary standpoint one, His are the only parables we care remember. Once or twice it breaks to the allegoric. It is always related its earthly covering to the spiritual uth it is intended to typify. It takes e widest range; any fact in nature, ch as the progress of vegetable owth, or anything in human life, like supper or a banquet, all these are vailable for the purposes of parabolic aching. Only the incident narrated ust be possible. It may be a narrae fact, though it does not necessarily llow that it should be so. It must owever be true to the facts of nature. ut beneath all this lies the real meang, the religious truth; in other words, e fact or incident of the spiritual orld. This is what underlies the outard statement. Only when this is got t is the parable useful, unless you asp the Divine truth within, it is eless.

Now it is very plainly a most gracious t to begin with, for the Lord Jesus speak to us men in such accommodaon to our earthly speech; and we shall e struck to find that the incidents on hich these parables are based are of e homeliest—marriage, fishing, serice, the judge, the housewife, and the btor. Common references and the plainest things, always in order that ey might reach the lowest understandings.

It is well for us to mark the value of his parabolic use of the world we live in. Did Jesus put gospel ideas into the tural life of plants and men, or did e only bring these ideas out? Was He e inspirer of nature or only her interpreter? It seems to me quite clear at He spoke here not as the Maker f nature, but as the Son of Man; nd that He read from the pages of od's creation lessons which had been written from its beginning—written ast, indeed, by His own fingers, n the statue of nature He imbibed ese things, but as the Son of Man e interpreted them. Some things hich had been written from the reation of the world had to be dug p, as it were, from the rock, as one ho had been commissioned to do the will of His Father upon earth found His scattered suppliers, who ame again to the light and were grafted into the true vine. And the parables were prepared in the heart and mind of Jesus before He spake them to the people. He knew the hearts of men, and knew how they would receive what He said, and what they would say. He knew the people were blind and deaf, and that they would not see nor hear nor understand. He knew that they would not receive the truth in the love of it, that they would not be saved. He knew that they would not come to Him that they might have life. He knew that they would not believe on Him whom the Father had sent. He knew that they would not receive the witness which God had given of His Son. He knew that they would not receive the record that God had given of eternal life in His Son. He knew that they would not receive Him as the Christ, the Son of the living God. He knew that they would not receive Him as the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world. He knew that they would not receive Him as the Saviour of the world. He knew that they would not receive Him as the Prophet like unto Moses. A PRAYER FOR TEMPER

O Almighty Father, Who art the Author of all good things, and suppliest the bodily wants of Thy creatures; Give us grace to receive all Thy gifts with thankfulness, and preserve us, we beseech Thee, from all self-indulgence and excess in the use of Thy creatures. Give us the spirit of temperance and sobriety, that in eating and drinking we may seek only to serve our necessity with moderation and thanksgiving. Grant that we may so eat and drink, that our flesh being subdued to the spirit, we may ever obey Thy godly motions in righteousness and true holiness, to Thy honour and glory; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

helped or hindered by it. It seems to me in this respect to be meant by Christ, "He that hath ears, let him hear," because this kind of speech needs a special kind of hearing. Let a man have only a fleshly mind and he will hear only the husk—a story about plants or men or sheep—and will have no mind for deeper lessons. He cares to listen to no more. But the divinely opened ear of religious faith and spiritual understanding perceives beneath the spoken words an unspoken idea, or he suspects a Divine meaning and is stirred to search for it, and thus he learns lessons of truth that are spoken to the ear of the spirit. Now once you have this inner ear, you hear that meaning of God better in the parable than if it had been spoken in a plainer form. The human interest given to the Divine truth brings it nearer to our bosoms, brings it, as it were, into our intellectual life.

The parable, therefore, is plainly by its very action upon men, an angel of judgment to one man and an angel of mercy to his neighbour. It cuts two ways, like a double-edged sword. When the soul is dead to truth, then the understanding is too dull to listen to the whispers of the spirit world, and the words of the parable spoken glide unheeded over the man—nay, they do more, they conceal the truth; because if the same thing had been plainly spoken you might have heard something; it would have given to the unspiritual man a seeming knowledge of the truth. But here there is nothing of this action for you. A poor little simple story suited to your earthly taste. You see the husk; to you is not given to know the inner life. But when the man has the eyes to see and the ears to hear, then he is led most graciously out of this courtyard of God's house into the holy place within, and the mysteries of the kingdom, which from the foundation of the world have been locked up, are opened and put forth into light, and the most royal principles of eternal truth are no longer disguised, and they stand forth as guests from heaven. The very veil wrapping up the truth stimulates the spiritual senses to seek to unveil; and nature for her part becomes the clearer when we trace the outline in her of the things of God.

This two fold aspect of parabolic teaching suited the purpose of our Lord. We know that He had been speaking openly to the people, and the result, as usual, had been to deafen or to enlighten. A few only were willing to do the will of the Father and gathered Him as personal suppliers, who came again to the light and were grafted into the true vine. And the parables were prepared in the heart and mind of Jesus before He spake them to the people. He knew the hearts of men, and knew how they would receive what He said, and what they would say. He knew the people were blind and deaf, and that they would not see nor hear nor understand. He knew that they would not receive the truth in the love of it, that they would not be saved. STORIES FOR LITTLE PEOPLE

SAMUEL, or THE UNGRATEFUL WISH
I Sam. viii.

Who was the king of the Israelites? God was the king of the Israelites. When Samuel grown up to be a man, he was c judge; but he was not a king. He i to tell the people what God wished them to do; and he used to punish bad people. Moses had once been the judge of Israel, and Joshua had once been the judge, and Eli had once been the judge. Now Samuel was called the judge. He did not sit on a throne, or wear a crown, as kings do; and he always asked God to tell him what the people ought to do, and then he told the people what God had said. The Israelites ought to have been very glad that God was their king. No other king was so good and so great as he was.

You will be sorry to hear that at last they grew tired of having God for their king. They said, 'We shouldt like to have a king that would go out to battle before us.' They wanted to have a king that they could see. So they came to Samuel and said, 'Give us a king.'

Samuel was very sorry to hear this, and he went and prayed to the Lord. Do you think that God would let the Israelites have a king? Yes, he would; he was displeased with them for wishing for a king, but as they wanted a king, God said they should have one.

So Samuel called the Israelites to gether to speak to them, and then he said, 'God will let you have a king, but this is the way in which the king will treat you.

'He will make your sons work for him. Some of them will run before his chariots, and some will make swords and spears for him, and some will manage his ground, and reap his corn; and some of your daughters will bake, and some will cook for him. Things he has to eat, and he will take many many of your fields, and gardens, and vines, and keep them for himself, and give them to his servants; and then you will be sorry that you wished for a king, and you will cry to God, and he will not hear you.'

But the Israelites still wish for a king, and they would not mind what Samuel said, but they cried out, 'We will have a king over us.'

Then God told Samuel what he must do, and Samuel sent the people away to their own homes.

We little know the deep mysteries of the human heart; it is because of our deep sin and pride that we bear correction with so much impatience; but if we had a desperate malady, and knew it, we should not complain of the bitter taste and burdensome effects of the medicine given to us to heal our disease. Romans viii. 13, 14. One blow will sometimes take the life of the body; but as usually we are not to be always striking, because sin is always struggling.

If we succeed with sin, be assured that we shall be victorious sooner or later, there is not a single sin but the conflicting power received may be subdued. (1 John i. 7.)

It is the nature of sin to obtain great power by small beginnings.

But the wicked are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt. There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked. (Isa. lvii. 20, 21.)

SIN

"(By Robert C. Chapman)"

The perfection of our obedience in the sight of our heavenly Father lies not so much in attainment as in endeavour. Reserves spoil obedience. We may be dealing honestly with Sin that is seen outwardly, and yet not skilfully and effectually, because of not striking at the deep roots of evil within.

God indeed, as our Father in Christ Jesus, does not blame us for Indwelling Sin; but He does not require that we should contend against it.

It is one thing to be blameless before men, and another to be aiming at that perfect obedience which Christ rendered to the Father: "I do always those things that please Him."

The first sign of spiritual life in the soul is generally the cry of distress from the sight of that which never gave trouble before—the pollution of Sin. The mere natural man may dread the punishment of Sin, its uncleanness he cannot feel, he cannot discern.

David said, "Horror hath taken hold upon me, because of the wicked that forsake Thy law." If we be spiritually-minded, we shall in like manner mourn over the unregenerate. Lot did not apprehend as did Abraham the state of Sodom, because, without God's leading, he was in it, and, alas! too much of it.

God would ever have us regard Sin in its pollution and guilt, and deal with it as done against Him. (Ps. li, 4.)

Those who deny the Godhead of Christ, and atonement by His blood, know not their sickness; and such need not the Physician that God hath sent, nor the remedy that God hath provided.

It is a great principle of God's government, that a sin not repented of becomes a seed which greatly multiplies.

The slack conscience that questions the everlasting punishment of the ungodly, betrays the soul's neglect of solemn dealing with the death of the Son of God on the tree, and of the testimonies of the Scriptures thereto.

Sin does not lie in being tempted but in not resisting temptation. The Lord Jesus Himself was tempted, and because of His holiness, suffered pain unspeakable, yet could not be defiled. So far as we have His mind, we, His members, suffer pain in temptation; and the greater the pain of the soul the less the defilement.

How precious the words of Rom. vi. 10, 11!—"In that He died, He died unto Sin once . . . Likewise reckon ye also yourselves." He liveth unto God." We with Him live to God. He died to Sin by dying for Sin. It was once imputed to Him. He put it away by the sacrifice of Himself, and now, with the glory of His atonement, lives at the right hand of God. The poor and needy one, by faith in the Son of God, is in Christ as Christ in God's sight. Is no Sin now imputed to Christ?—so now to the believer. Is Christ, with the glory of His atonement, accepted of God?—so the believer. The apprehending by faith these great things is the true way of mortifying Sin. "Sin shall not have dominion over you; for ye are not under the law, but under grace." (v. 14).

The sinner thinks to improve himself by lopping off this or that branch of his Sin; he knows not that thereby he does but nourish the evil root.

The greater power we have over Sin, the more intolerable do we feel the burden of it, and the more earnestly do we seek the cleansing of that blood which purges the conscience from its defilement.

Let us not be discouraged by any humiliating discoveries we may make of the evils of our hearts. God knows them all, and has provided the blood of Jesus Christ His Son to cleanse us from all sin.

God regards our Sins with the heart of a father, but now with the eye of a judge; for his sin-avenging justice has no further demands; the cross made satisfaction.

The imaginations of man's heart are only evil continually. Oh come to close quarters with this truth! to be willing to be judged by it! There must be something more than man's own will for this; there must be the working of the Spirit of God.

We little know the deep mysteries of the human heart; it is because of our deep sin and pride that we bear correction with so much impatience; but if we had a desperate malady, and knew it, we should not complain of the bitter taste and burdensome effects of the medicine given to us to heal our disease. FALL FAILS TO KILL; MEN ARE STRANGLED

BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 3.—(Canadian Press.)— Charles P. Carey and Benjamin F. Spraggins paid with their lives early to-day for the killing of a prison clerk in an attempted escape from the Maryland State penitentiary in July, 1927.

Neither of the men's necks were broken in the first fall through the trap and the bodies were left hanging until the victims had been strangled to death. Of the sixty witnesses in the death chamber when Carey, the first man to die, was dropped through the trap, but twelve remained when Spragins was led in.

MEET AT CHATHAM.

CHATHAM, Ont., August 3.—(Special).—Chatham and district negros, celebrating emancipation day under the auspices of the Canadian League for the Advancement of Colored People here yesterday, turned back the hands of time to honor the memories of the men who first lifted from their race the yoke of slavery.

Wilberforce and Pitt, British statesmen whose campaign was climaxed by emancipation in the British Empire, August 1, 1833, were the heroes of the day, but the colored men chose Chatham for their celebration for the added reason that here their ancestors found a haven at the end of the "underground route" of the abolitionists. Here their forebears, having eluded thes lave masters the bloodhounds, and the Southern American spies, found refuge, safety, and freedom on Canadian soil. Here the conspirators for abolition, black and white, met and plotted and here, in a house still standing near the C.P.R. depot, John Brown organized his insurrector government with the wild, frenzied notion to overthrow the government of the United States, and free the slaves.

The old two story ivy covered red brick house recalls the dramatic conferences in an upper room in 1858 and the final decision reached there, under which was proclaimed the provisional government of the United States with William Charles Monroe, a negro, as its president. Here John Brown was named commander, in chief of the little Motley band with the crack brained scheme to seize power by a coup at Harper's Ferry, Virginia. Here, too, from the roof of a little shed still standing, United States government spies who literally infested Chatham, looked in through unguarded windows on the prologue to the blood drenching civil war and prepared their reports for Washington. John Brown's puritan zeal to end slavery ended in his hanging, December 2, 1859, at Charleston, Va.

To-day John Brown's soul was in the parade of the League for the Advancement of Colored People, as an endless string of decorated cars moved through the business streets of Chatham. Delegates from the Toronto, Detroit and London branches of the League, from Buxton and other nearby negro settlements, and young ladies societies, the Hollywood girls, the odds and ends club, and many others joined enthusiastically in a celebration puzzling to the mind of the white people; people celebrating the fact that they are free, not slaves, not the chattels of a master to be bought or sold like cattle. Colored folks, perhaps more than others, are awed by the presence of death and yesterday and unfortunate incident cast a shadow over their celebration. Just as the sports were due to start in Chatham's civic park, Riverside Park, boys swimming in preparation for aquatic sports saw two palm hands thrust up above the water. The body of a man, much decomposed, was pulled ashore and land and water sports were off.

To him give all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins.—Acts x. 43.

But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned. I. Cor. ii. 14.

Detonation Day, May 20, has been fixed for the start of this year's California-to-Honolulu ocean yacht race for the Sir Thomas Lipton Trophy.

ROADS GOOD AROUND CITY

CONSTRUCTION GOES ON.

The roads around Peterboro are in very good condition. The Keene road and the road to Hiawatha are of good gravel and the recent wet weather has not made much impression on them, except to lay the dust perhaps. There is, however, a lot of fresh gravel on the Keene road which calls for careful driving.

The condition of the Chemong detour still remains the same. The road is in good condition but the presence of the long narrow bridge and the impatience of some drivers which has caused a few accidents in this spot, calls for careful driving.

The Norwood road is in good condition with one small detour around a bridge construction, which is short and in good shape. The Warsaw road is in good shape as well as the Lakefield road, which carries a lot of traffic. There is some road work being carried on on this road about six miles out, but there is no detour, and the road is not cut up. The Selwyn road is in good shape as is also the Buckhorn road and the road across from Lakefield to Bridgenorth is narrow but in good condition.

The following is the report on Provincial Highways in this district for the week ending August 4th, as issued by the Department of Highways:

Road No. 2.

Toronto to Kingston paved—Roadside detour at Napanee. Construction work is in progress east and west of Napanee. Roadside detour. Motorists are advised to drive carefully where men are at work.

Road No. 7.

Sunderland to Peterborough via Lindsay—Two detours. Sunderland to Lindsay, gravel road good. Construction work in progress west of Lindsay. No detour. Lindsay to Hillhead macadam. Hillhead to Peterborough all under construction, and sections will be rough. 11-2 miles east of Omemee, detour south one mile, thence easterly four miles, and north one mile to highway at Fowler's Corners. Detour is two miles longer than Provincial Highway. Detour north of Peterborough plainly marked from four miles north of Peterborough into Peterborough.

Road No. 28.

Port Hope to Peterborough—One detour. Port Hope to Bewdley, and Welcome-Dale road, gravel road under construction. New detour established one mile north of Port Hope. Signs are erected to direct traffic. Detour two miles longer than highway. Bewdley to Baillieboro good gravel road. Baillieboro to Peterborough paved road good.

Dale Detour.

The detour from Dale to Davidson's Corners is in excellent condition. During the past week, efforts have been made to widen the narrow and more dangerous sections, to good effect. The road is well protected by signs and guard rails. Branching east from Dale, traffic detours one and a half miles east, three miles north and one and a half miles west, returning to the new pavement at Davidson's Corners.

ASKS ALL-YEAR SCHOOL TERMS

Californian Would Let Parents Choose Vacation Time to Suit.

FIVE PERIODS

SACRAMENTO, Cal., July 31.—Soft sunny summer may not mean playtime to swim in the old swimmin' hole if state superintendent of schools William John Cooper tinkers with the school year in the fashion he outlined today.

The latch string will always be hanging out on the school house door the whole 12 months in the year, if Cooper carries out his plan of a permanent "open door" policy in California schools.

A school year divided into five periods of 16 weeks each, with two weeks off for everybody at Christmas is the educator's new school calendar.

But it will not be necessary to play hookey to go fishing, for the superintendent expects Johnny and Willie to attend only four of the five semesters during the year.

"School vacations do not always occur conveniently for the rest of the family," Cooper asserted. "I would keep the schools open all the year and let the parents choose any 16-week term they care to for vacation purposes."

SOUNDS THAT CLIMB HIGHEST

Recent tests show that the crowning of a rooster, the ringing of a church bell, and, under some conditions, the shout of a man, penetrate almost a mile into the upper air.

A cricket's chrip carries up 7,500 feet, and the croak of a frog can be heard at an altitude of 2,000 feet. Among sounds produced by living things, says opular Science Monthly, a dog's yelp holds the altitude record. It has been heard by balloonists 5,000 feet up. The report of a rifle will carry about the same distance.

Of all sounds recorded, a locomotive whistle reaches highest. I has been heard more than two miles above the earth.

A TIMELY WARNING.

Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons, local tent manufacturers, stencil a warning on the flap of many of the tents they sell warning campers to be careful about their fires.

It is a warning that should be heeded, especially at this time of the year when, in spite of the frequent rains, there is danger of costly forest fires.

Campers should remember that a dead camp-fire means a live forest.

It is not necessary to build a big camp-fire as a matter of fact.

If you build it small you will find it cooks better, is far safer for the surrounding woodland, and is more easily extinguished; a big camp-fire, on the other hand, is too big to approach, too big to cook with, and difficult to put out when you are through.

Everybody who has occasion to light a fire in a spot where forests are threatened should see that it is extinguished.

Put it dead out if you want to be sure that our forest wealth is not threatened by your carelessness.

A MISCARRIAGE OF JUSTICE.

The Belleville Intelligencer protests vehemently at a decision given by Magistrate Mikel in that city by which a young man, guilty of being drunk in charge of an automobile, was allowed, under certain conditions, to go on suspended sentence.

The offence was a particularly flagrant one, and The Examiner is in thorough accord with the Intelligencer in protesting against a suspended sentence in a case of this kind.

There is no excuse for the man who attempts to drive a motor car while he is under the influence of liquor; under modern traffic conditions such a driver is a potential murderer, and his offence should be treated with the severity it merits.

To give Ontario's magistrates credit, they have been enforcing the law in regard to intoxicated drivers as it was intended to be forced, and Magistrate Mikel, of Belleville, has made himself a conspicuous exception by his failure to send this particular offender to jail.

In ordering him to be home every night at 9.30 o'clock and to remain out of motor cars is nonsense; the Act calls for a jail sentence for this offence, and the Belleville magistrate should be called upon by the Attorney-General to explain why he failed to carry out the law.

Ontario magistrates have been asked for their resignations for decisions not nearly so misguided as this particular ruling.

THE MAPLE LEAF FOR EVER.

Canada came within inches yesterday of adding first place in the 400 metres race to her victories in the 100 and 200-metre events at the Olympic Games, James Ball, the Winnipeg runner, only just failing to catch the American winner, Barbutti, at the tape.

To win two firsts and a second in the short distance events against world competition is a record that Canadians did not dare to hope for, and the great showing of Williams and Ball has electrified the Dominion from coast to coast.

With few of the training advantages that the United States athletes have constantly available, Canadian representatives in the shorter races won two events, and almost took the third, while the American runners had to be satisfied with one first place and a tie for third position in another competition.

If nothing more is won the Canadian Olympic team has done magnificent work, and there is still the marathon to look forward to, while Joe Wright, Jack Guest and the Argonaut eight will give the Dominion plenty of advertising in the Olympic acquatic events.

The Maple Leaf has been to the fore daily since the competitions began—and Canada has made much the best Olympic showing on record.

It will be great encouragement for Canadian athletes in general to persevere in their training.

PUTTING RELIGION IN BUSINESS.

A "business man's stewardship platform," which the Christian Century (undenominational) describes as sane and sound, is presented in a bulletin published by the General Council of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. It will be of interest to all churchmen. The platform is thus summarized by the Chicago Journal:

"It starts with these principles: That all productive work to produce wealth and serve human need is a holy task; that work and business can and should be conducted in accordance with the principles of Jesus; that the Christian must 'avoid covetousness, foolish pride, unseemly luxury, careless waste, and all excessive self-gratification in the use of money, remembering it is a stewardship.' Then this fine statement of the aims of business: I believe that God intends that my business should produce fair and legitimate returns, sufficient, first, to maintain my business on a sound economic basis; second, to provide myself and those dependent upon me with an adequate living on a Christian level; third, to furnish all my business associates and their families income and leisure sufficient to enable them to realize a full and complete life; and fourth, to provide the resources needed fully to finance the agencies which promote the Christian program in my church, in my community, and in the world.' And, finally, as a practical method of making effective the fourth of the objectives just mentioned: 'I will acknowledge this stewardship of mine by carrying on the books of my business, or in my personal budget, a 'Separated Portion Account.' Into this account I will regularly set apart a definite proportion of my income, increasing it as my ability grows.' There, we say, is a combination of good religion and good business sense, with not a particle of flimsy argument or false authority."

SELF-CONTROL AND SOCIAL CONTROL.

That man's moral progress has not kept pace with his technical and purely intellectual advances is generally conceded. Selfishness, fear, love of money or of power, envy and malice are among the formidable obstacles in the path of human advancement toward exact justice. As a rule, no such obstacles bar the way to advancement in the exact sciences, hence their wonderful and rapid progress.

In politics, economics and ethics progress is resisted by bias, interest and timidity. Institutions and laws cannot be perfect while men are imperfect. Yet moral progress is a fact. Self-control is developing with the increasing application of social control. It is too pessimistic and quite unscientific to affirm, as does Prof. Tilney of Columbia, a noted neurologist, that human emotions to-day are still the emotions of prehistoric man of 300,000 years ago. The assertion, in the nature of things, is unverifiable, but it is contradicted by numerous facts.

Law, order, institutions, treaties, co-operation in a thousand forms exemplify self-control and social control. What men cannot do individually they do collectively. Even individuals, however, are being socialized and humanized by evolutionary processes, customs and traditions.—Chicago Daily News.

CIVIL SERVICE NOT EXTRAVAGANT.

(Ottawa Citizen)

Hon. James Malcolm's speech in London last week included an illuminating comparison of public expenditures in Canada as they were before the war and at the present time. When criticism is directed against the Government for alleged extravagance no allowance is made for the decline in the purchasing power of the dollar nor for the increase in legitimate demands upon the civil service due to Canada's growth in population and industrial enterprise.

Far from the civil service of Canada being an extravagant organization, it is being maintained on an exceptional basis of economy. In the year before the war, the fiscal year ending March 31, 1914, ordinary expenditure for governing purposes amounted to $103,236,179. In the last fourteen years there has been an estimated increase of 25 per cent. in population. A proportionate increase in expenditure for purposes of civil government would have raised the annual outlay in 1928 to about 129 million dollars. In the meanwhile, however, the purchasing power of the dollar has diminished by 50 per cent. Allowing for this shrinking of the dollar, the Government's annual expenditure for ordinary purposes—in which the civil service is concerned—might this year amount to 194 million dollars without exceeding the rate of expenditure in 1914.

Actually, ordinary expenditure for Dominion purposes during the fiscal year ending March 31, 1928, amounted to only $126,123,000. Clearly, the Government is entitled to some credit for economy, instead of being accused of extravagance. The able Minister of Trade and Commerce, Mr. Malcolm, generously gave credit to the civil service. He told the Western Ontario audience that the people of Canada owe much to the capable and conscientious workers who keep the machinery of government running so efficiently.

The wonder is, particularly with reference to the highly trained technical workers and men whose education has to be equal to the high standard of the learned professions, that they can be retained in the public service of Canada. Because the Dominion is paying out about a million dollars a day, it is no evidence that there is extravagance in the public service. Half of the annual expenditure is attributable to the war. The ordinary expenditure for government purposes, the cost of the civil service of Canada, is relatively much lower than it was in 1914. The Dominion is being governed with far greater economy, as well as with increased efficiency.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Monday being set apart as a civic holiday, Peterborough people will celebrate it by getting out of town.

Captain Courtney has surely decided by this time that he is not fated to fly the Atlantic.

The British Empire is not slipping, judging by the showing made at the Olympic Games.

Safety first should be the rule over the holiday, whether on highway or on water. Ontario's toll of automobile fatalities and drownings offers a grim warning.

The West has supplied most of Canada's thunder at Amsterdam. Williams, double winner, comes from Vancouver, and Ball, second in the 400 metres, lives in Winnipeg. It will be up to Joe Wright, Jack Guest and the Argonaut eight to win laurels for Ontario.

The Financial Post declares that if there were a Dominion election just now it would be fought on the question of bank mergers. Undoubtedly that matter would be a leading issue.

Ontario Minister of Health declares that before long all bread sold in this Province must be wrapped. He doubtless is convinced that it should be possible to bring about this reform without increasing the cost to the consumer.

Baron von Huenefeld, the German flyer who crossed the Atlantic in the Bremen, has written a play. That looks like crowding his luck.

COMPLETE THE WORK

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear sir:

Many of the residents of the west end are watching the improvements at the corner of Park and Charlotte streets and yet are wondering if the good work is going to stop without taking up the tracks at the intersection itself. This is probably the most noticed corner in the city by visitors. After the drive along the highway they come along the really beautiful Charlotte street where the tracks are not yet in bad shape and then the first intersection we have a little park, nice buildings and all the makings of a nice corner if only the old tracks were taken up and the street levelled off.

We would strongly urge that when we have the work in hand an extra effort should be made to complete a piece of good constructive business.

Yours truly,

SOME WESTENDERS.

The Question Box

Reader: Q.—Will you please explain what a "round robin" is, and oblige?

A.—"Round robin" is an expression given to a remonstrance or petition, signed by a number of persons generally in a circular form, so as to avoid giving prominence to any single name. The expression probably is a corruption of the French "rond" (round) and "ruban" (ribbon), although several other derivations have been suggested with a fair degree of plausibility. It is said to have been first used by the officials of the French Government as a means of making known their grievances. The most celebrated "round robin" in the English language is the one signed by Edmund Burke, Edward Gibbon, Sir Joshua Reynolds and others, and sent to Dr. Samuel Johnson, requesting him to amend the epitaph to Oliver Goldsmith in Westminster Abbey, and suggesting that it be written in English and not in Latin. Dr. Johnson accepted the "round robin" in a kindly spirit, but told Sir Joshua Reynolds, the bearer of the mission, that he would "never consent to disgrace the walls of Westminster Abbey with an English inscription."

D.R.F. Q.—Could you tell me how old Robert B. Mantell the actor is, and give some incidents of his life?

A.—Robert Bruce Mantell, the actor, was born at Irvine, in Ayrshire, Scotland, on February 7, 1854. He made his professional debut at Rochdale, England as the Sergeant in "Arrah-na-Pogue" in 1876. He came to America, and played juvenile roles with Mademoiselle Modjeska in 1878. After his return to Great Britain he was Miss Wallis's (now Mrs. Lancaster) leading man for three years. Later he appeared in New York as Loris Ippanhoffin "Fedora" with Fannie Davenport. Mantell became a star and head of his own company in classic and romantic plays including "King Lear" (which many people think his best role); "The Merchant of Venice," "Julius Caesar," "Hamlet," "Othello," "Richard III.," "Macbeth," "Romeo and Juliet," "Richelieu," "The Lady of Lyons," "The Corsican Brother," "Monbars," and "Dagger and Cross."

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, August 4. — The cattle market this week was firm with a tendency to slightly higher prices. On the whole the stock was of better quality and brought correspondingly better prices. Individual varieties were as follows:

Cattle—The cattle trade on Monday and Tuesday in most respects held steady with last week. There has again been a very light offering of finished stock. Choice fat steers 1,200 pounds selling for 12c, with very few of these. Choice light butchers $11 to $11.50; choice light heifers, $10.50 to $11. The cow trade was somewhat draggy with prices steady, $6.25 to $8.75 for choice. The bull market steady with slightly better price for bologna type. $7 to $7.50 for choice heavy; Butchers' bulls, $8 to $8.50, and rough bologna, $6.35 to $6.75. The offering of baby beeves this week was of better quality and sold at $12 to $13 for the choice. Wednesday's cattle trade held steady for all good classes. Trade was very slow on half-fat heifers. Good baby beeves sold for $12 to $13.50; other classes held steady.

Springers and milkers—Cows in this class having poor mouths are not wanted, and in most cases must be sold for beef purposes. Choice springers, $90 to $115; medium springers, $70 to $90; common springers, $60 to $65; choice milkers, $70 to $90; medium milkers, $55 to $70.

Stockers and feeders—There was a more plentiful offering of Western cattle this week, the bulk of the offering being heifers. The choicest steers in this class are being purchased in the west and being shipped direct to the United States. Good Ontario dehorned steers, 900 pounds, selling at $9.75 to $10; yearling steers 700 to 800 pounds, at $9 to $9.50; heifers 600 to 700 pounds, $8 to $8.50.

Calves—Choice calves, 14c to 14½c; medium, 12c to 16c; light, 10c to 11c; heavy, 8c to 9c; grassers, 6½c to 7½c, with steady trade throughout the week.

Sheep and lambs—The lamb trade on Monday opened at 15c and on Tuesday were 15c to 15¼c for the choicest; medium, 13c to 14c; culls, 11c to 12c. As previously advised, there is a dock of $2.00 per hundred on buck lambs commencing Wednesday, August 1, and as a result good ewe and wether lambs sold for 16½c, with an odd lot at 17c.

Choice light yearlings, 8c to 9c; butchers, 6c to 6¼c; medium, 5c to 5½c; heavy and bucks, 4c to 4½c; culls, 2c to 3c.

Hogs — The market opened on Monday at $12.50 f.o.b. selects and on Tuesday it strengthened to $12.75 f.o.b.; Tuesday's quotations, selects f.o.b., $12.75; off cars., $13.75; fed and watered, $13.45; off the road, $13.50. Wednesday's market held steady with Tuesday's.

Receipts.

The receipts for the week were as follows: Cattle, 5,716; calves, 1,667; hogs, 2,066; sheep, 2,263.

Heavy steers, choice	$11.00 to $12.00
Butchers, choice	11.00	11.50

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 4 (Canadian Press). — Extreme dullness marked the export trade in Canadian grain here yesterday, there being practically no demand from foreign buyers.

Further weakness developed in the domestic market for Canadian Western oats and prices were reduced another cent per bushel.

The demand for Spring and Winter wheat flour was quiet but prices for all grades were steady.

A moderate amount of business was done in all lines of millfeed and values were steady.

A moderate amount of business was done in all lines of millfeed and values were firm. Standard grades of rolled oats were unchanged under a quiet demand.

The undertone to the egg market was firm and the demand for all grades continued good. The receipts were 1,400 cases.

There was little inquiry for cheese but the undertone to the market was firm. The receipts were 8,338 boxes.

Imported beans continued in good demand. New crop October and November beans were quoted at $2.40 to $2.50 per barrel in car lots to arrive, ex-track; and immediate stocks of choice white hand-picked sold at $4.10 per bushel, ex-store, and car lot at $3.90 per bushel.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Aug 4 (Canadian Press).—Tumbling down of prices in the grain market went hand in hand with especially favorable crop news both as to corn and wheat. Heavy selling to realize profits for holders of the September delivery of corn led to a break of nearly five cents a bushel as compared with the day's top figures for that delivery. All deliveries of wheat dropped to a new low-price record for the season, and so likewise did much corn.

Closing quotations on corn were heavy, 1¾ to 4¾c net lower. Wheat finished 1½ to 3c down; oats, ⅛ and ¼c to ½c off, and provisions varying from 5c to 20c decline.

Speculative selling in anticipation of lower prices for corn was done yesterday on a large scale, and gave additonal impetus to downturns brought about by efforts by holders who were trying to turn paper profits into hard cash. Meanwhile, the fact that Chicago receipts of corn yesterday were somewhat larger, 126 cars, and that Iowa points were offering corn a little more freely to arrive here, tended to furnish an advantage to the bear side o fthe market. Furthermore, shipping call yesterday here for corn was only moderate.

Likelihood of a bumper yield of corn this season was reported yesterday as excellent, the outlook having been materially improved by beneficial rains Thursday night in Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas.

Some sections of Iowa sent word that the crop is now practically perfect. Under such circumstances, buying support for the corn market as a whole and for the September delibery in particular was much less aggressive yesterday than has of late been the rule.

Wheat even more than corn was dominated by unusually auspicious crop reports. Canadian advices said preparations were in progress for an early harvest, that cutting in Manitoba would commence within ten days, and would be but a few days later in Alberta and Saskatchewan. On the other hand, wheat export business was described as a little better and Galveston cleared 871,000 bushels, the largest amount yet for any day on the present crop. Oats were easier, sympathising with weakness of other grain.

Provisions tended downward, responsive to a setback in hog values as well as in corn.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, Aug. 4.—The local butter market is about steady with top grades in demand. Other grades are not wanted and as a result there is considerable accumulation of stocks reported in Toronto. The range of prices for good graded number one creamery butter has been from 38¼ to 38¾ cents a pound this week. The latter quotation applied only to fancy lots. Yesterday's price was about 38¼ cents.

In order to offset the bullish report on storage stocks issued during the week the price of New Zealand supplies for Fall delivery has been reduced to 37 cents c.i.f. Halifax, allowing local dealers to lay it down here 39c, all charges paid. Produce men stated yesterday that they do not expect to see much change in the market for some time as consumption is good. Receipts during the week have been fair and as yet there is no noticeable falling off in production.

Yesterday the cheese market was steady at 22½ to 22¾c.

Poultry is Unchanged

The poultry market does not show much change. Spring broilers are increasing in size and some of these are now out of the broiler class. For live birds over 3 pounds dealers are quoting 38 to 39c; 2¼ to 3 pounds, 36 to 37c; 2 to 2½ pounds, 30c; 1½ pounds, 18c. Fowl are beginning to arrive more freely and are inclined to be easier. For live birds over 5 pounds, dealers are quoting, 23 to 24c; 4 to 5 pounds, 21 to 23c; 3 to 4 pounds, 18 to 20c. Ducks are easy with dealers quoting for birds over 5 pounds, 24 to 25c; 4 to 5 pounds, 22 to 23c.

HOW OLD WAS METHUSELAH?

Did Methuselah, of Biblical fame, really live to an age of 969 years—or was that the life of the clan he founded, that bore his name? The latter is the sensible interpretation R. P. Field, of Philadelphia, recently told the American Philosophical Society.

The chronicled birth, apparently a son, to many a patriarch, Mr. Field declares in Popular Science Monthly, was not that of a person, but of a new tribe that had split off from the father's clan. All dates of the Bible need revision, he says. He places the time of Adam, for example, between 15,000 and 20,000 B. C.

GOD'S MINUTE.

It is better to trust in the Lord than to put confidence in man.—Ps. 118:8.

Great God of Hosts, Who reigns above and in our hearts, for all the gracious favors of to-day which bless and strengthen us, we give Thee thanks. Let not our gratitude be limited to words, but be expressed in every impulse, thought and deed, and serve to draw us nearer to Thee; for we desire to praise Thee with our lives and not alone with suppliant words.

Our weakness and faults, which oftentimes grow to errors and misdeeds forgive—nay cover them with Thine eternal love. Restore our wills, too prone to bend to sinful things which we give place to in our lives. Cleanse all our thoughts and plant the seeds of righteousness within our minds. Uproot from in our hearts the tendency toward wrong or selfish interest or pride, and put instead the love of truth and a yearning for a Christlike life with knowledge to attain it.

Should trials come, O Jesus, be Thou near; encourage with Thy presence, strengthen with Thy power. If temptations come, O fill our hearts with holy and heroic resolution that we will yield ourselves to Thee and not to them; and may tomorrow find us still drawing nearer, Lord, to Thee. This we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

A Thought

YOUR OWN BOOKS

A private library should be a growth. It marks the stages of progress of the mind of its owner; no other property that a man leaves behind shows what he really was so fully as his books.

There are few hobbies a man can adopt from which as much enjoyment and instruction can be derived as from the gradual acquisition of a lot of books on some subject of special interest.

Emerson's advice, "Buy in the line of your genius," is weighty and should be heeded. A man of moderate means may gradually get together a more complete collection of his specialty than the richest man could secure at short notice, and his satisfaction in the growth of such a library can never be experienced by the wealthy book collector who employs others to do the work for him.

All that is needed is steady attention to buying such books as opportunity presents itself. Many of the rarest and most valuable books cannot be procured on demand and must be bought when found, or the chance of securing them is gone, perhaps for ever.

THE ADVENTURES OF SECKATARY HAWKINS AND HIS CLUB

THE TERROR ON THE ISLAND

Well, here we are at last, in our camp on the island. Peace and quiet for a while. Yet I don't know. Everything looks so lovely. The three tents are sitting up beyond the beach, in the same old place, making an interesting picture against the background of green, while over all hangs the great canopy of the tall trees, like some vast cathedral of Mother Nature's.

Yes, it's a mighty fine place to spend a vacation—especially after all the excitement we have just gone through up around our clubhouse. And it does seem that weshould have peace and quiet now. Yet, as I said, I'm not so sure. Seems like no matter where we boys go, trouble is always bound to be tagging at our heels. Of course, the Pelham fellows who live across from us up at the clubhouse, never want to see us get ahead of them. They knew we would most likely make camp again on this island. And it seems that they have arrived here ahead of us. Not that they have taken our camping ground—no, they prefer to be up at the other end, near the stockade and the log house. The reason for that is that they have not got such good tenting equipment as we have, and the old log house helps out for a place to sleep. They must have fifteen fellows in their gang. We have made a rule to keep away from them. For we know that they will most likely claim ownership of the island, since they got here before we did.

We had been camping for a few days before the Pelhams found out we were here. And one night we all sat around our camp and started to sing. The Skinny Guy's pop was with us, and he had a banjo and began to play all sorts of old plantations songs. We began to sing:

"Meet me tonight, in a field of snowy white,
Hear those darkies singing soft and low—"

Just at that moment I caught sight of a light—it flashed in the bushes and went out quickly.

"Look there!" I exclaimed. But of course by the time the other boys looked, the light was gone. They all made fun of me when I told them about it, and said I had the jimmies, but I told them I would cross my heart and double cross it—I had seen a light. The Skinny Guy's pop didn't laugh, though. No. He kept silent and put his banjo in his houseboat and brought out his gun. And when all the other boys had gone to bed, he came silently in to me and asked me to point out to him as close as I could remember the place where I had seen the light. I did that, and he went out with his gun. I thought he must know something he didn't want us boys to know. I couldn't go to sleep for thinking about it, but at last I heard his footsteps coming back, and he looked in and said:

Which I did.

And the next morning, when I awoke, I was alone. All the others had gone somewhere—most likely to pick blackberries. So I got dressed and found some breakfast which they had left for me in the Skinny Guy's houseboat, and afterwards I took my old cap and went out into the high grass to see if I couldn't catch some new kind of a butterfly. It was pretty sunny in the high grass, and the grasshoppers jumped all over me, but I spied one nice butterfly with orange wings and black stripes, and I set out to capture him. He led me quite a chase—seems like sometimes those things have plenty of sense and know you are after them—and I finally fell flat on my stomach in the tall grass and lay still for a while, but when I slowly peeped under my cap—there was the orange-and-black beauty. I was very careful to see that I did not hurt him—and all of a sudden I heard an owl hoot. I said to myself: "Uh-huh! That's no real owl this time o' day—that's the old Pelham boys' signal." I looked around slow—I kind o' wondered what the Pelhams were up to on this island—and then I heard the owl hoot again. "Yes," I said to myself, "it's them—and here I am, all alone, what kind of a chance will I have against them?" I felt sore at the Pelhams for being there, but I felt sore at my fellows, too, for not sticking around to help me out. Why, those Pelhams could give me two black eyes and a flat nose—what chance did I have all by myself against fifteen Pelhams?

So I stooped down in the tall grass and hid myself as best I could. Pretty soon I heard two fellows talking. I heard one of them say: "Is that you, Booby?" And then I wasn't half so scared, any more, because I could lick Booby Warren and another fellow thrown in for good measure, so I stood up. There, not ten steps away, was Ham Gardner, talking to Booby Warren. When Booby saw me rise out of the grass so suddenly and silently, he gave a yell of fright and ran like a rabbit. But Ham recognized me, and walked right up to me.

"Halt, there, Hawkins!" he says; "you're my prisoner."

"Since when?" I says, and I laughed at him. "How do you get that way, Ham?"

He closed one eye and looked me over. "Honest, Hawkins," he says, "I've got to take you prisoner."

"Come on and show me how you're goin' to do it," I says. He walked over slowly; I put one foot out and held up my fists. He stopped short when he saw me do that.

"Wait," he says, "just wait a minute."

"Two minutes, if you want," I says with a grin; "what put that notion in your head, Ham, to take me prisoner? What have I done?"

"'Tain't no use, Hawkins," says Ham, "'tain't no use to fight back; you fellows got to surrender sooner or later, we got this place surrounded, this island is going to belong to the Pelhams. I am your friend and you don't know it."

"You said something that time," I says; "you ought to be a friend of mine, but dog-gone if you act like it. Why can't we keep our camp on this island, and you Pelhams keep yours, and none of us need have anything to fight for? There's room for all of us here. Now, if you know what's good for you, you'll get out of here before I get good and mad at you."

He wanted to say something else, I believe, but he turned suddenly and started running the way Booby had gone. At first I had a notion to follow and see what the Pelham camp looked like, but then I realized that wouldn't be a wise thing to do. I might be taken prisoner sure enough, if more boys than Ham and Booby were there to do it. So I put my butterfly in my notebook and skipped back to our camp to wait for the other fellows. When they came, I told them what Ham Gardner had said. The Skinny Guy's pop laughed. "Don't worry about the Pelham boys," he said; "I wish that was all we had to worry about." But Jerry Moore sat and talked with me for a long time. He was mad at the Pelhams and wanted me to promise that I would get all the other boys to chase the Pelhams off the island. Which plan I certainly would have nothing to do with, as I told Jerry straight to his face. Plenty room for everybody on this big island. It was only fair and square.

That night we heard a loud "boom!" like a roll of thunder, and we thought a storm was coming up. But nothing happened. And next morning when we woke up, the Skinny Guy's pop was walking up and down all excited.

"What's-a-matter, pop?" asked the Skinny Guy.

"Matter enough!" he answered. "I guess you kids will have to go home—it looks dangerous to me on this island."

"Why, Mr. Lambert," I says, "you don't think we boys are afraid of those Pelhams, do you?"

"No," he says, "but I don't think the Pelhams will stay here long, either. There's something funny going on here—look over there!"

He pointed toward the houseboat, where, on the shore nearby, a big tree had fallen, having missed the houseboat by a foot.

"Must have been a storm last night," says Jerry Moore.

"Storm nothing!" said Mr. Lambert; "just look at the roots of that tree." We all walked over and took a look. The roots of the tree had been torn to pieces. "Dynamite did that," said the Skinny Guy's pop. "Somebody's been going around here making all sorts of dangerous things for us. I'm going to find him if it's the last thing I do. You kids stay close to camp, now. Don't you dare to leave till I come back."

Then he walked into the woods. We boys felt kind of funny. We talked in whispers, but we hadn't been talking five minutes when we saw the whole pack of Pelham fellows coming. Jerry Moore grabbed a stick and the others scouted for weapons, but Briggen held up his hands and shouted:

"You don't have to be scared, we come peaceful, we don't want any trouble." And all the Pelhams held their hands high in the air to show they didn't have any sticks or stones. I stepped up to Briggen, the leader, who walked with Dave Burns.

"Well," I says, "I thought you fellows were going to chase us off this island."

"That's what we intended to do," says Briggen, "but we had to change our mind for a while—we are in trouble, Hawkins—we lost Ham Gardner."

"What!" I says, "I was just talkin' to him yesterday—"

"Yes," broke in Briggen, "him and Booby Warren went scouting around the island and promised to meet us at the spring at sundown. Booby was there, but Ham never did come. We thought you fellows took him prisoner."

"What would we do that for?" I asked. And I told them of my talk with Ham, and how he had left me. Briggen was almost crying.

"Pshaw!" he says. "Pshaw! I am sorry, his poor old maw, all alone in the world by herself, she made me promise to take care of crazy Ham, he always gits in trouble, but I thought he could take care of himself a little."

Briggen rubbed his eyes as he walked away. The other Pelhams followed him in silence. And I felt sorry for the leader and his Pelham gang. They had been our enemies, they had done us many mean tricks, yet here I was feeling sorry for them. I'm funny that way. All the other boys forgot about it, but not me. Our captain said: "Let the Pelhams take care of Pelhams." But all that night I thought about it. I thought of poor old Briggen going back and telling Ham's mother that Ham was lost—perhaps drowned—who knows? The Skinny Guy's pop came back and wouldn't talk much. He said he hadn't seen anybody on the island but the Pelhams. Jerry Moore said the Pelhams were the ones blowing up trees and everything. But I paid no attention to him; when Jerry hates a fellow—goodnight!

Thursday morning Mr. Lambert told us to stay close to the houseboat until he returned. He was going up to get Doc Waters and the Sheriff. He gave the Skinny Guy a rifle, but told him not to shoot unless he had to. He got a canoe and paddled up the river. We played baseball and took a swim near the houseboat, and after lunch we got out a checkerboard. We wondered why Link's pop didn't come back. About evening time we all felt kind o' lonesome and tired. Skinny says: "Let's all sleep in the houseboat tonight—you know my pop, sometimes he stays away longer than he ought to—maybe he won't come back till morning." We all thought it would be safer in the houseboat, so we carried our blankets and pillows in and made beds on the floor. It got dark, and still Mr. Lambert didn't return. So we all got ready for bed. But I couldn't sleep—I couldn't even shut my eyes, for the wind began to blow, and the trees made a wild noise as they swayed to and fro, and I wondered whether Briggen had found Ham yet.

All of a sudden I saw a light flash in the dark—yes, boy! I saw it through the window, and I was scared stiff. "Link!" I whispered, "Link! Get your gun!" Link was up and alongside me in a wink. "Where?" he asked. "Watch the window!" I told him. Bill Darby and Jerry Moore awoke. We all stuck close together, huddled in our blankets on the floor. Then of a sudden the light flashed again through the window—it was a lantern, an old iron lantern such as I had never seen before, and right beside the light there came an ugly face—oh, boy! hope to die if I ever saw a face so ugly—it had bushy hair and a beard and a short clay pipe stuck in its teeth, and its eyes were shining like fire! It grinned at us—and the next moment the light went out and we heard the window glass smash and tinkle down on the floor. We boys yelled then—all the other boys woke up, and we huddled together in a little crowd. Boy, oh boy! I can never tell you how really frightened we were. Scared to death. We waited silently, watching for the face to appear again, but it didn't. Then we heard footsteps on the porch—the door opened—and in come the Skinny Guy's pop with Doc Waters and the Sheriff. We told them quickly what had happened. Mr. Lambert looked at Doc Waters and said: "Looks like you are right about it, Doc." And Doc grinned down at us. "Yes," he says, "I'm sure I'm right." And they wouldn't say any more, but made us go to bed again. It was a long time before any of us could get to sleep.

The Skinny Guy's pop was waiting for us next morning. "Come on, boys," he says; "we're going to look for that ugly face you fellows saw last night." We hurried and dressed. Doc and the Sheriff were waiting outside. We struck out through the woods. About noon we came upon some tents—the Pelhams' camp. Briggen and Dave Burns told us they had seen a wild man run past their camp that morning at sun-up. He had thrown a big stone at their tents. They showed us which way he went. It was under a thick clump of bushes. We crawled through after Doc and the Sheriff. We heard a yell, and then an awful scream. I jumped up and ran fast. I saw a big hole in the ground, with boards over one end for a roof. I just came up in time to see Doc Waters jump down into the hole. Wehn I reached it I saw Doc and the Sheriff wrestling with an ugly man who was screaming and trying to bite the Sheriff's arm. By the time the others came up, however, they had the wild man down on his back and the Sheriff was putting handcuffs on him.

"We got him," says Doc, as Mr. Lambert came up; "here is the wild man of the island. He was jealous because you folks came over here to camp on his island."

We all started back for our camp, the Pelhams coming with us. The wild man looked at us boys with an evil grin. When he saw Briggen, he yelled out: "I got one, anyhow! I got one of 'em—ha-ha-ha-ha! I got one you won't find—I put him where he will roast alive!"

But Doc Waters and the Sheriff made the wild man shut up, and took him down to the river to wait for the steamboat which was due to pass at one o'clock. The rest of us went back to our houseboat.

"Hawkins," says Briggen, "you heard what the wild man said about Ham—he got him and put him some place to roast him alive."

It made us sick to think of it. But the Skinny Guy says: "Come on, I'll bet I know—get some ropes." Jerry fetched a long stretch of rope and we ran back the way we had come. I saw the Skinny Guy stop and look up. "Look at those big crows!" says Bill Darby. But the Skinny Guy shook his head. "They're not crows," he says, "they're buzzards!" The birds were flying around a high, dead tree that didn't have a sighn of green on it. All of a sudden Jerry Moore says: "Look! Tied to the top o' that tree!"

It was Ham! Poor old Ham Gardner, stretched out against the bare limbs of the tree, tied to it with thick ropes. The Skinny Guy went up the tree like a cat, carrying the ropes we had brought, and he quickly cut the ropes that bound poor old Ham and fastened our rope around Ham's belt in back,and threw the other end over a limb. We lowered Ham down gently. Briggen was crying—so were all the Pelhams. They thought he was dead. So did we. We carried him back to the Pelhams' camp and made a nice soft bed in his tent while the Skinny Guy ran for Doc Waters. Doc arrived just as we got Ham's clothes off, and his skin was sunburned like leather. Golly! We all felt sore at the wild man for this. It was the meanest trick anyone could do—tie a kid up in a tree where the sun could burn him to a blister. But Doc rubbed him all over with oil or something, and put some smelly stuff in his mouth. And we all sneaked away to our camp. At supper time Doc came and told us Ham was alive, but would be a pretty sick boy for a while. Briggen came over in the evening to see us. He was so glad Ham was found back. "Hawkins," he says, "that wild man busted up all our canoes and flatboats, we don't know how to git Ham back to his Ma." It was like asking us to lend him a canoe, but none of us fellows said a word. We couldn't forget the many mean tricks those Pelhams played on us. And Briggen sneaked away after a while, without another word.

It was all quiet on the island, now. We all sat around and sang for a while. But somehow, the fellows didn't feel much like it, and there we sat again in silence under the great spreading trees that stirred lazily overhead. Finally Jerry Moore says:

"Those Pelhams lost their canoes and boats, Hawkins."

"Yes," I says, "I know it."

We sat still another long time.

"Hawkins, you big simp!" yelled Jerry, "how in the deuce they goin' to get poor Ham Gardner home without a canoe?"

"I don't know," I says, "unless we go down and take him home in ours."

Which we did.

A LETTER FROM SECKATARY HAWKINS

Well, at last we are quite ready to start the Peterborough Examiner branch of the Seckatary Hawkins Club, and the application for membership form is being printed on this page.

Every week there will be a thrilling Club Story printed in The Examiner; letters from you boys and girls; a competition, and the password. Watch for this page every week, and write to tell me what you think of it.

Our first competition will be a story or a letter on "Fair and Square." That, you know, is our Club motto.

Only boys and girls who are members of the Club can take part in the competitions, so you must rush in your membership form at once. The prize will be a dandy book telling a long thrilling story of Seckatary Hawkins (that's me) and the gang.

The rules are simple. Write your story or letter or poem on one side of the paper only. Your composition must be original. You must write it without assistance from older persons. You must give your name, address and age.

The contest is open now. It will close next Saturday at midnight, and the result will be announced on the following Saturday.

Perhaps you know some incident in which a boy or a girl showed the fair and square spirit. Suppose you sit right down now before you forget it and write it down and send it in. But first, send in your application for membership, or send the application with your story or letter. If you want to write it in the form of a story all right; but if you think you can't write a story, just sit down and write me a letter and tell me all about it. Remember, there is the prize, and the one who wins is the one who keeps at it and never gives up the ship.

Our Weekly Meeting.

We will now call our weekly meeting to order. Always be sure to read our meeting proceedings.

The meeting will open with the reading of a communication from one of our members who lives in Virginia. Perhaps you would care to drop him a post card and tell him we are glad to have him in our club. Look how nice he writes—here it is:

Dear Seck.:

I guess you think I am a poor member because I haven't written, but I have been busy in school and have not had much time for anything.

I read every story and listen on the radio to your meetings and sit there and dream about the good times you must have down at your clubhouse, or shack, as Judge Granbery insists on calling it.

I wish all boys could have the pleasure of reading your stories as I have. I must close now.

Yours, fair and square,
ED. TAYLOR, 14,
Box 225, Dante, Va.

Let's all send a nice postcard to Fred Meiklejohn, who lives up in the Badger State and can't walk like other boys—here is his letter which we are glad to present:

Dear Seck.:

I am 12 years old, and I can't walk around like the other boys and girls. I have to sit in a big chair by the window all day long. So I thought I would write you a letter and ask you if you would have some of the members write me letters, and I would enjoy answering them.

I am one of your members, and every week I looked for my name in the paper, and today I found it.

FRED MEIKLEJOHN,
New London, Wis.

The meeting will now adjourn. Don't forget to try for a prize in the "Fair and Square" contest. Get your contribution in early, and then watch this page next week for announcement of our next meeting. Radio meeting on Monday evening at 6:15 from Station WSAI—so tune in and attend it.

Bye, till next week.

Yours, fair and square,

Seckatary Hawkins

FATHER SCOLDS HER; GIRL TAKES POISON.

WINDSOR, July 31.—Pretty 16-year-old Gertrude Burns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Burns, 1070 Moy Avenue is in Hotel Dieu, fighting off the effects of a bottle of iodine she drank yesterday morning because she believed her father scolded her too much and would not allow her this freedom allowed to her girl friends.

It's so much fun to drive their "Clouds" they drive them far, far more

A Reo dealer recently reported on 400 Flying Clouds which he had watched in his territory for about a year.

He wanted to know how the Flying Clouds stood up.

He found that buyers averaged 33 1/3% more mileage on their Flying Clouds in a year than they had on their old cars. It was so much more fun to drive a Flying Cloud than to drive any other car they ever owned.

Naturally, one would expect that the greater mileage of the Reo Flying Clouds would mean more repairs than usual.

No brakes to be relined—not even after 30,000 miles.

Never a record of freedom from care such as this

Never a Flying Cloud motor in with a burned bearing. Never a motor bearing that needed adjustment—or showed signs of wear. Not a piston knock in the bunch. No water pump or fan belt troubles. No timing chain adjustments. No piston ring replacements.

Those are extracts from the record of not 1 car, but of four hundred. Not of factory drivers, but of 400 Flying Cloud owners and their families. Unusual for the ordinary car—but typical of Flying Clouds.

And now the 1929 Reo Flying Cloud

Handsomer, sturdier, faster, more powerful, the 1929 Flying Cloud offers you all the advantages that set the first Flying Clouds apart from the ordinary. It gives you all the dependability that enables records like the one above to be made. It goes farther in giving you extraordinary performance. Be very sure, before you pay your good money for any car, that you know what a 1929 Flying Cloud can do. We have one waiting for you. Try it out.

SPOILT MUSIC

THE STORY THUS FAR:

JENNIFER FRY is saved from drowning by NICHOLAS GAUNT, wealthy young man-about-town. Later he takes her to tea and asks to call, but she refuses because she is ashamed of her humble surroundings. They continue their friendship and Jennifer comes to love Nicholas, but he is suddenly called abroad by his mother's illness. During his absence Jennifer's father dies. She reads of his engagement in the paper, and stands in the crowd to see him and his bride come from the church after the wedding. Her mother dies. Five years later she meets Nicholas again. He decides to divorce his wife, Lady Edith. But just then Lady Edith becomes ill. The doctors promise her only a year of life and she makes Gaunt promise not to see Jennifer for that year. Jennifer is angry and decides to be as gay as she can on a legacy of eight thousand pounds left her by an uncle. She gives up her job and goes to work to have a good time. She meets DOLORES and BUDDY, two women who live in the flat above her new dwelling place. Through them she meets CHESNEY, who quarrels about her with Buddy and proposes to Jennifer. Jennifer asks him to wait for her answer. They meet Gaunt and his wife at a night club. Jennifer, tired and unhappy, promises to marry Chesney. Buddy, when she hears of the engagement, tries to kill herself. Lady Gaunt invites Chesney and Jennifer to dinner. Gaunt tells Jennifer she shall never marry Chesney. Jennifer meets MR. WINTER, and MRS. AUDYARD, an old friend of Edith Gaunt's.

CHAPTER XXXIII

Ultimatum.

When Jennifer got back to her flat on Monday afternoon she was tired, and yet she felt terribly restless.

Chesney had wanted to take her out again that evening, but she had refused.

"I must go to bed early tonight," she declared. "I've had so many late nights. You must do without me for once."

The little surprising determination came again into his eyes as he answered her:

"The week will soon be up, Jennifer."

She laughed as she turned away.

Another week was more than up, and nothing had happened. She wondered if when the time came, she would treat Chesney as Gaunt had treated her.

She rose and began to pace the room restlessly.

Why could she not forget him? Why could she not tear his memory out of her life and throw it away?

Perhaps even now he was on his way to Paris with his wife. She hated her! Oh, how she hated her!

The flat seemed stifling and unbearable, and with the feeling that she could not bear its silence, Jennifer put on her hat and went out. She took a bus to Hyde Park Corner and sat for an hour under the trees, then she walked about aimlessly, trying in vain to get away from her thoughts and the tormenting imagination which kept gleefully showing her pictures of Gaunt and his wife on their way to Paris.

Edith Gaunt was still such a beautiful woman. No doubt Gaunt had lied when he said that his wife was nothing to him; no doubt there were many times when she was a great deal to him, even if only on account of her physical beauty.

Jennifer clenched her hands as she walked along.

Why was she not strong enough to put him out of her mind? . . . Strong enough to say: "I will not suffer any more because of him. I will forget him."

The bright evening had clouded over and it looked like rain. She turned towards home.

The little daily maid who worked for her was standing at the open door when she reached her flat. She wore her hat and coat ready to depart.

"Why haven't you gone?" Jennifer asked amazed.

"I didn't like to go till you came back, miss. There's a gentleman been waiting for over an hour to see you."

"A gentleman? Do you know who it is?"

"No, miss; but he's quite a gentleman," the girl assured Jennifer fervently with a grateful memory of half-a-crown which reposed in her pocket. "And can I go now, please?" she asked anxiously.

"Yes; of course. Good-night, Mary."

Jennifer was used to being alone, but a little thrill of apprehension touched her heart as she crossed the narrow hall to her sitting-room and opened the door.

The light was on, for the cloudy evening had made it dark unusually early, and as she entered a man rose from a chair.

There was a little silence, then Jennifer said shakenly:

"I thought you had gone to Paris."

"That is what I meant you to think," Gaunt answered, and he stepped past her and shut the door.

All around them everything was so still.

It almost seemed to Jennifer as if the world had paused in its rush and tumble to see what was going to happen, and to listen to the tumultuous beating of her heart.

The unexpected sight of Gaunt had robbed her of all self-control. She felt utterly helpless, like a straw tossed at the mercy of the wind, and then at last, although it was not in the least what she intended to say, she heard her faltering voice.

"I am all alone here, Nicholas. Please go away."

She saw the dull flush that rose to his face, and for a moment he seemed to waver; then he said harshly, "You will not talk me over like that, Jennifer. I shall not leave here till you come with me."

Her lips moved, but she could find no words. She wanted to be indignant, passionately angry, but she felt more like tears. Then with a great effort she took a fresh grip of herself and tried to scramble back to the security of the commonplace.

"Well, at any rate, let me take off my hat and coat. It's raining fast. I'm wet through."

She made a little movement to pass him to go to her room, but he stopped her.

"You can take them off here. Give them to me."

She began to refuse, then changed her mind.

"Very well."

She took off her hat, passing a shaking hand over her hair, then her coat, and gave them both to him.

"They're not very wet," Gaunt said, uncompromisingly. He laid them down on the back of the couch. "It's only a summer shower," he added.

Jennifer sat down in the big arm-chair.

"There are cigarettes in the silver box over there," she said, "and whisky and soda in the cupboard, if you would like one."

"I don't want either, thank you. I only want to talk to you."

She leaned her head back against the cushions behind her, forcing her eyes to meet his.

"Well, I am listening," she said.

Gaunt looked round the room.

"This is very different from the little place off Notting Hill," he said abruptly. "I suppose you have come into money since then." She made no reply and his jealous eyes searched her face. "Or does Chesney pay?" he asked with deliberate insult.

Jennifer made no answer; she was terrified because the tears were so near. In spite of her brave efforts she felt that she no longer had the power to resist him, and that by his ruthlessness he would break down her last barrier.

Then Gaunt said again: "Well, have you made up your mind? I gave you a week, you know."

Jennifer's hands were clutching the arms of the chair, and every nerve in her body was shaking.

She loved him so much. Her every impulse was urging her towards him, and yet . . . twice before he had failed her, and instinct warned her that if she were to yield to him now, he would fail her again.

"I don't know what you mean."

She knew that she spoke the words, but her voice sounded far away and unreal.

Gaunt came a step nearer.

"I think you do," he said. His voice was unemotional, and yet its very lifelessness gave one a consciousness of great suppressed passion. "But to avoid mistakes, I will ask you again if you are ready to come away with me tonight?"

Someone in the room laughed, and with a sense of shock Jennifer realized it must have been she.

"Of course I am not," she said.

There was a profound silence, then Gaunt shrugged his shoulders.

"Very well, then I stay here."

In desperation Jennifer told a hurried lie:

"You are very welcome. Malcolm and his sister will be here presently. I am sure they will be pleased to meet you."

He ignored that; he drew up a chair and sat down.

"Do you mind if I smoke?"

"I told you where to find cigarettes."

"Thanks. I prefer my own."

He struck a match and lit one, but after a few puffs it went out and he made no attempt to relight it.

It was growing rapidly dark. Outside the increasing rain pattered ceaselessly against the window, and the street lamps were lit.

Jennifer closed her eyes. Her head ached, and she felt as if she were in a dream—a dream which was half Heaven because this man was so near; half Hell because she knew that whatever happened she must send him away.

She rose suddenly to her feet to turn on the lights, but in an instant he was between her and the door.

"What are you going to do?"

"Only turn on the lights."

"I can do that for you."

"Very well."

But instead he put his hands on her shoulders, holding her in a grip that hurt.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS— by John Hix

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

7-days Bedtime Story

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE FOOLISH FOX

"Ha! Ha! Ha!" laughed the Fox as he sat in front of his den in the woods. "Ha! Ha! Ha!"

"What are you laughing at?" asked his wife, who was doing the washing, using a hollow stump for a tub and some rough pine tree cones to rub on the clothes to get the dirt out. Mrs. Fox had no washboard so she had to use the cones.

"I am laughing," barked the Fox, "because I just thought of a good trick to play on Uncle Wiggily. Ha Ha!"

"Oh, you're always thinking of tricks to play on that rabbit!" grumbled Mrs. Fox as she dropped some blue stones in the hollow stump tub to make rinsing water. "The trouble is none of your tricks come out right. Uncle Wiggily always gets the better of you."

The rabbit gentleman found it.

"He isn't going to this time," chuckled the Fox. "Look here! Do you see that?" and he pointed to something round and white growing in a grassy place not far from his den. "Do you see that round, white golf ball?"

"Yes, I see it," said Mrs. Fox. "What of it? Golf balls are no treat to me."

"With that golf ball I am going to play a trick on Uncle Wiggily," growled the Fox. "Yesterday he banged my friend the Bob Cat with a golf ball. Today I am going to bang Uncle Wiggily with that golf ball."

"How are you?" asked Mrs. Fox, hanging a sheet out to dry on a piece of wild grapevine she used for a line.

"I am going to write Uncle Wiggily a letter," explained the Fox, "and tell him if he will come here to the woods he can find a fine, new, white golf ball. When he comes to get it I will be hiding near it behind a bush. As soon as Uncle Wiggily gets near enough I'll rush out and bang that golf ball with a club. The ball will fly through the air, hit Uncle Wiggily on his pink nose and he will be so surprised that it will be easy for me to nibble his ears. Isn't that a good trick?"

"It will be if it works," said Mrs. Fox. "But Uncle Wiggily will never come to the woods if he gets a letter from you telling him to. He will know it is a trick."

"Ah! But he won't know that the letter is from me!" chuckled the Fox. "I will sign Baby Bunty's name on it and fool him."

So the foolish Fox wrote the letter with Baby Bunty's name on it and dropped it near Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump bungalow. There the rabbit gentleman found it and read what was written.

"Well, that is very kind of Baby Bunty," said Mr. Longears. "I would like to get a nice new golf ball. I'll go where she says it is and pick it up. Then I'll play about nine holes."

So Uncle Wiggily hopped to the woods where the letter said the golf ball could be found. The Fuzzy Fox was waiting with a club behind some bushes. As soon as he saw Uncle Wiggily hopping along the Fox jumped out and aimed a hard blow at what he thought was the round, white golf ball lying on the ground.

Now, if it had been a golf ball it would have hit Uncle Wiggily on the nose. But it wasn't a golf ball. It was just a round, white mushroom that looked like a golf ball. And when the foolish Fox hit the mushroom with his club, the soft white ball flew all to pieces like a soap bubble and only a little dust, that didn't hurt him, sprinkled on the rabbit gentleman.

"Ho! This must be a trick!" cried Mr. Longears when he saw the Fox hit the mushroom which the Bad Chap thought was a golf ball. "I had better run!" So the bunny uncle hopped away before the Fox could get him. And the Bad Chap growled:

"Fooled again!"

"I told you so!" chuckled his wife, who was doing the ironing. "I told you so!"

Well, that's that!

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE FIND FAULT

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.

(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

We find fault because we don't want to pay.

The pay may consist of actual cash, recognition of superiority on the part of another, or an apology. All of these come hard and we prefer to find fault as a means of getting out of paying.

If you are too enthusiastic in your praise of the good job the plumber does for you he is likely to raise his price a little or slight his job. Contractors find that if they appear to show too much appreciation all sorts of demands are likely to be made for extras on the assumption that they are making a lot of money. It seems to be the wise policy to grumble a little. Criticise the job and the plumber will be glad to get a fair price. Give the impression that you are losing money on your contract and the other fellow is more likely to be reasonable in the thought that he has driven a sharp bargain and is getting something for nothing.

Football coaches practice the strategy of underestimating the ability of their team to guard against over confidence and unfaithfulness in training.

We find fault partly because we think we get more for our money. We find fault also because we hate to give the other fellow credit. Finding fault is one way of discrediting another person and raising ourselves by comparison. The fault finder is a critic and the critic assumes the superior role. At least he feels more important to himself by this practice.

We find fault frequently to cover up a mistake of our own. It is a means of shifting the blame to somebody else. An apology is humiliating. Fault finding and shifting the blame is a means of bulldozing.

Not infrequently genuine dissatisfaction and disagreement with the views or methods of others leads us to find fault.

Finding fault is a common practice. With some it is a matter of getting out of paying something, with others it is a chronic attitude—a matter of habit and temperament.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

SUNDAY, AUGUST 5, 1928.

Good and evil planetary influences conflict today, according to astrology. The rule is favorable to church-going and to communion with nature.

In the early hours it is well to make the constructive plans and to take account of one's physical welfare.

Under this sway conferences with one's business associates should be beneficial, although it is wise to remember that it is a day of rest and recreation.

The planetary government is favorable to the churches which will take an unusually strong place in the public prints through the remainder of the year.

The clergy should benefit since the direction of the stars is supposed to bring the people into closer relation with religious leaders.

There is a sign of promise for writing of every sort, from letters to books.

Newspapers will benefit greatly under this rule which makes for much advertising and large circulation.

This sway makes for impulsive decision and under it prejudices may be strong and difficult to eradicate.

Warning is given that there may be accidents of unusually frightful results and for this reason caution should never be cast aside.

Beauty is to increase under the planetary government which makes for a return of natural standards and a departure from what is artificial.

The Moon is in a sign which should encourage intellectual and spiritual aspiration. Paradoxically the rule accentuates religious differences.

One of the most important pages in American history is to be written within the year, the seers prophesy. It is well for men and women to realize their national responsibilities.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the forecast of a year in which changes will occur. The subjects of this sign usually have keen intuition and are tenacious in their opinions. The next few months will give them opportunity to show individuality.

Children born on this day probably will have great initiative and will see life in its largest relations. These Leo people are good in directing the work of others and they have tremendous possibilities.

MONDAY, AUGUST 6, 1928

Today brings contrary planetary influences, according to astrology, but benefic aspects predominate.

It is wise to push all business enterprises this morning which brings assurance of success wherever tradition guides.

While speculation or ventures may be most unlucky, profit awaits those who follow sound lines of action in the commercial world.

Older folk should benefit today which promises for them an excess of energy. Their counsel will be sought.

Holders of real estate should benefit at this time when the stars seem to promise increase of values.

The desert is to be the scene of new enterprises which will start new towns, the seers foretell.

This is a favorable day for seeking employment, but the first opening should not be accepted unless it is most satisfactory.

The planetary government is auspicious for all political candidates, since the public mind is supposed to be open to suggestion under this rule.

More trouble concerning oil is prognosticated, but it will bring about good results later.

Under this configuration it is supposed to be lucky to attempt betterment of one's financial condition. Requests for advance in wages or salaries are likely to be heeded.

New friendships may be disappointing if begun under this sway, which is not favorable for romance.

Criticism and unfavorable judgment are more probable today than at other times. It may be difficult to make a good impression.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of prosperity in the coming year. The subjects of Leo will make big plans and carry them out at this time.

Children born on this day may be impulsive, but they make many loyal friends. They may be inclined to talk too much, but they will be able to accomplish what they promise. They will enjoy all the creature comforts and will be able to obtain them.

Canada's agricultural wealth has risen to 8 billion dollars, showing an increase of nearly 8 millions in a single year.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO TODAY

Tuesday, August 4, 1903

At a meeting of the Board of Education, held in the office of W. C. Morrow, Francis E. Kerr of Coldsprings and Roderick Roddick of Port Hope were appointed to fill vacancies on the school staff, the salary of each to be $550.00. The following members of the Board were present at the meeting: J. J. Hartley, chairman; Messrs. McBain, Stevenson, Hill, Fair, Pringle, Hamilton, Ferguson and Doctors Burnham and Eastwood.

The Wellesleys of Toronto defeated the Auburns in a baseball game played at the Murray street grounds. The score was 19—2. The Peterborough team comprising Lepper, ss; Coulter, 2b; Ramsby, lf; Hepton, cf; Taylor, 1b; Storey, rf; Love, 3b; Ferguson, c; Bentley, p.

The annual meeting of the Stoney Lake Cottagers Association was held at Juniper Island Pavilion, under the presidency of George Cochrane. It was decided to hold a regatta on August 14, while the idea of a fish hatchery was also discussed with a view to increasing the number of bass and lunge in local waters.

Marcellus Mowry and J. A. Tully, while riding on their bicycles on the right side of Charlotte street, were run down by a "furiously driven team." Mr. Mowry being knocked down beneath the horses' feet and sustaining a bad shaking up and many bruises. Mr. Tully escaped by jumping from his wheel and getting upon the sidewalk.

A BEDTIME STORY

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 3—Cedric Dickinson, 11, wouldn't go to bed. So his grandmother phoned police saying "there's a wild man in the house." Three officers rushed to the scene. Then grandma amplified her statement with "Cedric is wild, he won't go to bed." That tamed Cedric but made the cops wild and what they said on the way back to the station would have made grandma wilder

Glorious performance

Precision built in this Great Hudson

The great performance that marks Hudson out among all fine cars, with stellar brilliancy, is not alone in the genius of its design, but in a manufacturing execution that also stands at the head of the industry.

The hand-matching of all pistons is a detail in this precision manufacture, that is typical of every operation in building this greatest of all Hudsons.

Hudson leadership of mode extends to every detail and marks a new Hudson supremacy, as definite as its mechanical dominance through the Super-Six principle, and its companion invention which set today's standard for motor performance.

Every item of finish, construction and equipment expresses value as tangibly as its great chassis qualities. Come and examine the new Super-Sixes. They will give you an entirely fresh view of motor values.

TREE DAMAGES POWER LINES

East City Cut Off From Electrical Power As Tree Falls On Lines.

FIRE ALARM DAMAGED.

Without regard to the rain and storm of last night and the early hours of the morning, workmen of the Utilities Commission toiled ceaselessly from eleven o'clock until three to clear the lines on Hunter Street, near Burnham, after a large willow tree, struck by lightning, had fallen across them, interrupting the service of the three primary lines, each carrying 2,200 volts. It was found necessary to cut off the power from the entire eastern part of the city during the work of clearing the lines.

The fire department also experienced trouble as a result of the damaged tree. A fire alarm box wire was also interfered with in a manner similar to the Utilities lines. There was no further damage reported about the city this morning.

CROP REPORT

Below will be found a brief synopsis of telegraphic reports received at the Head Office of the Bank of Montreal from its Branches. The Branch Managers have complete and intimate knowledge of each local situation and are in close touch with crop conditions in all sections of the districts mentioned.

General

Consistently favourable crop reports continue to reach the Head Office of the Bank of Montreal from its branch managers in practically every farming district throughout the nine provinces of Canada. The report proceeds—with grain crops in each of the Prairie Provinces rapidly approaching maturity under favourable conditions preparations for an early harvest are now under way. Wheat cutting it is expected will start in Manitoba within ten days, and in Saskatchewan and Alberta a few days later. A feature of the situation is the absence of any extensive damage by weather or pests; reports indicating that there has been hail only in scattered localities and that while rust has appeared in various places, so far, it has not been of a serious nature in Quebec crops are making rapid progress under fair weather conditions. In Ontario the harvesting of a good average crop of fall wheat is now proceeding. Weather conditions have been better than the preceding week, although rain storms have delayed haying operations. In the Maritime Provinces ideal growing and haying conditions continue, while in British Columbia hot, dry weather continues and crops generally are doing well. Details follow:

Prairie Provinces

Alberta and Western and Northwestern Areas—Conditions are very favourable. The heads are filling and ripening rapidly and harvest will commence in three weeks. Rain would be welcome in some sections of the Northeastern area. Alberta Southeastern Area—The situation is very satisfactory and harvesting will begin in the second week of August. Saskatchewan Northern Area—Crops continue to make satisfactory progress but rain would benefit some localities. Saskatchewan Southern Area—Conditions are favourable with all grains well advanced. There is slight evidence of rust at some points. General wheat cutting is expected in two or three weeks. Manitoba—Crop conditions continue to be satisfactory with all grains approaching maturity. Early sown barley and rye are being cut and wheat cutting is expected to start in ten days. The hay crop is heavy but wet weather is interfering with harvesting.

Province of Quebec

Oats are heading out and prospects are for a good yield; other grains are also in good condition The haying is well advanced, a good average crop is being harvested under favorable conditions Corn has developed rapidly, and an average yield is expected Root crops, including potatoes, are making good progress Fruit trees are well laden and small fruits are plentiful. Tobacco is growing satisfactorily.

Province of Ontario.

Fall wheat cutting is under way. A good average crop is being harvested. In Southwestern Ontario threshing has commenced; the yield is better than expected and the grain crop a good sample Spring wheat and barley are ripening fast and better than average crops are predicted. Oats are a heavy crop. Corn is showing good growth with no damage reported as yet from the corn borer. Hay is an average crop, but some of the late cuttings will be discoloured from the excessive moisture Root crops are good especially potatoes. Tomatoes and beans on high land are promising. Apples, pears and peaches are good, while small fruits are plentiful. Tobacco is growing fast on well drained ground Pastures are in splendid condition Warm, dry weather is need.

Maritime Provinces.

Cutting of an excellent hay crop is well advanced. Potato plants look exceptionally promising. An apple crop of excellent quality is sizing well but it is expected that the yield will be somewhat less than last year, and the smallest for the last ten years. The pasturage is very good.

British Columbia.

A good hay crop has been harvested. Grains are well headed and promise above average yields Roots and other vegetables show satisfactory growth and are estimated at 110 per cent of average; plums and pears, 70 per cent; hops 60 per cent. Early peaches of good quality are now being shipped. Pasturage is abundant but rain is now required

BUTTER IS A WHOLESOME FOOD

Cow's butter contains more of the fat soluble "A" vitamin than any other food in comparison to the amount used. This makes butter a very valuable food for children, and they should be encouraged to use a reasonable amount.

Since the earliest primitive times, butter has been the source of one of man's best forms of nutrition. The milk of cows, mares, and, in fact, the milk of every domesticated animal has been used, and is still being used in many parts of the world, but because of economy of production, cow's milk is now the principal source of butter fat in practically every civilized country.

It is advisable to use a certain amount of hydrocarbons or fats each day, both for their nutritive and lubricating qualities.

Our best butter at present comes from the large and well organized creameries, since there it can be scientifically prepared so as to avoid all possibilities of uncleanliness. By this process, the cream is separated from the whole milk while it is still sweet by running it through a centrifugal separator. It is then pasteurized and treated by the addition of lactic acid culture before being churned. In this way there is no danger of contamination from outside sources, and it is a well known fact that creamery butter will keep longer without becoming rancid than farm butter.

The old-fashioned method was to allow the milk to stand for two or three days and then churn the sour cream, which formed at the top of the vessel.

Butter made from sweet cream is not as popular as a table article in this country as it is in Europe, and while it is relished by many, it is no more desirable from a standpoint of health than properly made creamery butter, to which a small amount of salt is added. Sweet butter, nevertheless, has a ready sale since it is used, especially in the larger cities, to re-construct cream and milk for restaurants and ice cream factories. Used in this manner, it is just as wholesome as the fresh cream, and has the advantage of being kept for a long time without spoiling.

The best butter contains only about 11% moisture, and will keep for a long time without spoiling. When much milk is present the butter tends to spoil. The rancidity is caused by the formation of butyric acid. By washing rancid butter in fresh milk, some of this butyric acid is absorbed, after which the milk may be washed out with fresh water.

Many families use oleomargarin. There are some wholesome butter substitutes called nut margarins being placed on the market at the present time, which are an advantage in families where the income is small and the butter bill is often a considerable item. Most of these butter substitutes are made from peanut and cocoanut oil, combined with milk and heavily flavored with salt. They usually contain a small amount of benzoate of soda, which is a preservative to keep the milk from souring.

Questions and Answers.

Question: A.R. asks: "What causes little red spots, like little speeks of blood, to apear under the skin? There are a few on my face and all over my body."

Answer: Your blood capillaries are breaking down because they do not contain enough calcium or other mineral matter. This may be due to your not eating foods containing these minerals, or simply because they are destroyed after eating by an acidosis in your system produced by a diet that is improperly balanced, from the standpoint of physiological chemistry.

Question: E. L. writes: "Will you kindly print a diet which should be followed by a person sixty years old, of apoplexie build, who is getting rapidly stout. We know that starchy foods are fattening, yet what articles of food are there that will give a varied diet and keep up one's strength?"

Answer: It would be all right for you to follow the weekly menus which appear in this column each Saturday. The only change you need to make is to substitute some one kind of fruit for the meals which contain starches. If you have high blood pressure, it will slowly reduce under this non-starchy diet. You will see that there are plenty of foods other than starches which you can use and which will "keep up your strength" and, at the same time, not be fattening.

Question: F. G. writes: "I have severe attacks of heartburn after meals. I would like to know what causes this and how to get rid of it."

Answer: Heart burn simply means over-acidity of the gastric juice, and is caused by bad combinations of foods, wrong kinds of foods, condiments, too much liquid at meals, etc. A teaspoonful of baking soda taken just after the meal will relieve the heart burn, but a real cure can only be obtained through removing whatever cause is producing the trouble.

MARRIAGE UNITES RIVAL TRIBES

The wedding reception which was given the Princess Floating Cloud and her husband Lorenzo, at Snake Island, would have been the occasion of warfare 100 years ago because the groom is of the Objibway tribe, while the bride is a Cognawagns, once bitter enemies. Now all is changed, however, and the festivities were conducted with all the modern social graces. Picture number one shows Charles Big Canoe, veteran chieftain of the Ojibways and grandfather of Lorenzo, who was born on Snake Island 97 years ago. On account of recent ill-health he was unable to attend the party. Picture number two shows the bride and groom, both wearing modern clothes. The groom teaches school at the Iroquois Reserve. The bride formerly was a saleslady in a Montreal store.

Wedding Bells

LICK—MACKENZIE.

The marriage of Ona Fraser, daughter of the late Mr. William Lyon MacKenzie and of Mrs. MacKenzie, of Winnipeg, and niece of W. J. Laing, Peterborough, to Cecil Havelock Lick, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Lick, of Davidson, Sask., took place at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. John N. Lyon, Wellington Crescent, Winnipeg, Saturday, July 21. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. Dr. C. W. Gordon, of Winnipeg.

To the strains of the Lohengrin Wedding March, played by Miss Mary Mann, the bride, gowned in a French model of white silk net and chiffon and carrying a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses and valley lilies, entered the drawing-room with her brother-in-law, Mr. John N. Lyon, who gave her in marriage.

The ceremony took place before a bank of palms and ferns, flanked on either side by tall standards filled with pale rose gladioli and delphinium.

Immediately preceding the marriage service, Miss Dorothy Dafoe sang "Thou Art Lovely as a Flower," and during the signing of the register gave another solo, "I Love Thee."

Following an informal reception, a buffet supper was served from a table centred with the wedding cake and decorated with pale pink rosebuds, valley lilies and tall pink candles.

After the usual toasts the bride retired to don her travelling costume, a smart ensemble in blue silk crepe, with which was worn a small felt hat in a blonde shade.

Later, Mr. and Mrs. Lick left for the West, where the honeymoon will be spent. On the completion of their trip they will reside in Davidson, Sask.

BROWNSCOMBE—AMBLER.

The marriage took place on Wednesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Ambler, Barrie, of their only daughter, Mary Elsie, to R. Minto Brownscombe, Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. Brownscombe, Peterborough. Rev. J. J. Black conducted the ceremony in the presence of a few immediate relatives.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of white georgette with silk net veil and orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of sunset roses.

The bridal couple left on a motor trip to Ottawa and Quebec, the bride travelling in a beige ensemble of marocain crepe with hat and shoes to match. On their return they will reside at Balmy Beach, Toronto.

ROBERT C. OGILVIE.

CAMPBELLFORD, August 4.—The funeral of the late Robert C. Ogilvie, M.D., took place yesterday morning at ten o'clock from Bennett's undertaking parlors. Interment was made at Mount Pleasant Cemetery. The Rev. Dr. Thompson, Hastings, officiated at the service at the grave.

Dr. Ogilvie was in his eighty-first year, and for several years of his early life a resident of Campbellford. The property now known as the Armouries was the family residence. He was a member of one of the early classes in the Faculty of Medicine at the University of Toronto and practised almost entirely in the United States. In later years he retired from the medical profession and entered the lumber business. In financial circles he was widely known.

Dr. Ogilvie is survived by three daughters: Mrs. Vrooman, Detroit, Mich.; Mrs. Stanbury, Superior, Wis., and Mrs. Ogilvie Dowsley, Toronto, Ont. He is also survived by one brother, Col. G. H. Ogilvie, Sergeant-at-Arms in the Toronto Houses of Parliament.

The pall-bearers were Fred Dinwoodie, Harry Free, Richard McKelvie, Frank Bonnycastle, William Clarke and J. D. Cumming.

happened was when the engine stalled, while he was backing up, and he heard Mrs. Moher scream. He said it was purely an accident. He gave his age as 18 and produced his chauffeur's permit.

Dr. J. C. Smith visited the home and he told the jury he found the head of the girl badly crushed and it was quite obvious that the wheel of the truck had passed over it. He said death must have been instantaneous.

The jury was J. A. Porter, D. H. Webster, Harry Armstrong, George Charlton, G. L. Emsley, Frank Nolan, T. C. Young, Charles Waldon, John Sabatino, and E. R. Tate, foreman.

LIGHTNING BOLT KILLS YOUNG GIRL

Dorothy Kennedy, 15, Struck While Playing in Father's Barn Near Toronto.

TORONTO, Aug. 4.—While playing in a barn on her father's farm, Dorothy Maude Kennedy, aged 15 years, was instantly killed when struck by lightning at about 4.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The scene of the fatality was her father's barn, about 1½ miles north of the post office at Dixie. The victim was the daughter of John R. Kennedy, Clerk of Toronto Township, and a niece of Brig.-Gen. Thomas L. Kennedy, M.P.P. for Peel.

At the time of the bolt, Miss Kennedy was on a ladder in the barn. She was accompanied at the time by two other children, who were horrified when they saw their playmate fall from the ladder, a distance of 18 feet, in a flash of lightning.

The bolt evidently passed right through the girl. Death was instantaneous, but strange to say, no damage to the barn was visible. The girl attended St. Mildred's College in Toronto. She was the eldest of seven children.

Shirring Makes an Attractive Self Trimming

Charmingly simple is this smart frock. The skirt is shirred and joined to the bodice having shirring at each shoulder, and the long sleeves extend into the neck and are gathered at the lower edge to narrow wrist-bands. Contrasting material is used for the bias facing, and a long panel extends the full length of the front. NO. 1596 is for Misses and Small Women and is in sizes 16, 18 and 20 years. Size 18 (36 bust) requires 3½ yards 39-inch, or 2⅝ yards 54-inch material, and ¼ yard 39-inch contrasting.

Home sewing brings nice clothes within the reach of all, and to follow the mode is delightful when it can be done so easily and economically, by following the styles pictured in our new Fashion Book. A chart accompanying each pattern shows the material as it appears when cut out. Every detail is explained so that the inexperienced sewer can make without difficulty an attractive dress. Price of the book 10 cents the copy.

DEPUTATION FOR WRAPPED BREAD

Toronto Hygiene Club Seek Sanitary Wrapped Bread From Bakers.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 4.—A deputation from the Toronto Social Hygiene Club, headed by Mrs. A. M. Heustis, appeared before the Toronto Board of Health to ask that wrapped bread be made compulsory in the city. "There is a deplorable lack of education on this point," said Mrs. Heustis. Mrs. McGregor, for the Local Council of Women, voiced a strong protest against the present lack of wrappings. "Only five per cent of the bread distributed in Toronto is wrapped; in other cities 95 per cent. of the bread is wrapped," she said.

An alderman pointed out that the small dealers had protested that such a regulation would put them out of business. He said that a certain baking company had machines for wrapping but had no call for wrapped bread. "But in other cities these aren't out of business," replied Mrs. McGregor.

Dr. Hastings, M.O.H. stated that for many years the department of health had been endeavoring to educate the public. Several actions had been instituted against drivers who had violated the regulation that the gloves were to be used for no other purpose than the delivery of bread. Some had driven a horse while they wore white gloves.

In many cities wrapped bread was used almost exclusively, he stated without any definite regulation. This had come from public demand. He did not feel that there need be any additional charge for this service.

"I don't like to see in the public press that the habits of the people of the city are so lax that they have to be forced by law to be clean," Dr. Hastings said.

SILVER SPOONS STOLEN

Sixty-six Spoons Taken After Garden Party.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Aug. 4.—Sixty-six silver-plated spoons were stolen from thehome of a resident of Point Grey, following a garden party at the residence.

Soap was taxed $140 per ton in England in the time or Queen Anne.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

SHE stands on the springboard, lifts her arms above her head, teeters on her toes, rises in the air, and plunges beautifully and gracefully into the water. Coming to the surface, she shakes the water from her face, tosses back her short hair, and swims as naturally and easily as a young porpoise.

She is a typical girl of 1928—active, agile, with clear skin, healthy, strong muscles and a surplus of spirits. You can see her any day at any of the bathing beaches in Peterborough, or at any of the summer resorts near the city.

Compare her to the girl of 1888. This girl donned long blue flannel bloomers, extending to her ankles, and over that she pulled on a flannel nightshirt that fell below her knees. The nightshirt was belted, and when the girl played at swimming it ballooned out at the back. It never occurred to her really to swim. Her special stunt was lacing into eighteen inches, making crazy quilts and paper flowers, and fainting whenever the fainting was good . . . What a life!

Nowadays, outdoor life is fashionable. Athletics are as good for women as for men, and all the world knows it. In Peterborough there are as many girls patronizing the bathing beaches as there are men, and at the summer resorts girls who sit on the sand and look pretty are objects of pity. Of all the outdoor sports swimming is the most fun, and it is by far the one that is most beneficial to the nerves and the health.

Peterborough girls are very fortunate in having the Y.W.C.A. pool in which to learn the art under skilful guidance, and very foolish is the girl who fails to take advantage of the classes in swimming and lifesaving that form a regular part of the Association's service.

Swimming is one exercise that calls for vigorous action on the part of muscles that are not ordinarily active, and which spares those that are continually in use. There is a special pull on the muscles that extend from the shoulder blades to the trunk and which make for erect carriage.

For the desk worker, swimming is a blessing. The work demanded by the respiratory muscles will increase the chest capacity. Even the extensors of the fingers and the hands are strengthened, and this means that the hands will not look old and wrinkled before their time.

A city doctor told me the other day that the best hours for swimming are between eleven in the morning and four in the afternoon. It is not advisable to go in bathing when fatigued or within an hour after a meal.

Another point which nearly all swimmers know, but which some neglect, is to plunge into the water quickly, head first. There is then less chance for a chill. After swimming, have a vigorous rub-down.

What a nice world it would be if everyone observed the Golden Rule! If, instead of trying to make everyone else do what we think they should do, we were a little more tolerant, how pleasant it would be!

I have a letter taking me to task for "condoning" smoking among girls. The theory is "I don't want to smoke; therefore you must not smoke." Is that right?

My correspondent says: "Seeing girls smoke just makes me sick," but a couple of nights ago I saw two girls smoking and I wasn't a bit nauseated. "I always think that a girl who smokes can't be very good," the letter continues. That is perfectly absurd, my dear, and demonstrates once again my pet aversion—the mixing of manners and morals. Smoking is no more an indication of low moral standards than over-eating.

I know lots of women who smoke but would never think of cheating at bridge, or getting intoxicated and going on wild parties, or stealing a piece of bric-a-brac from a house where they were visiting, or "lifting" an article from a store counter. On the other hand there are women who do all of these things but would not smoke "because of the look of it."

Let's dissociate morals and manners in our minds. Frown upon smoking, if you will, because you don't think it's the thing for a girl to do; but don't pronounce the girl bad who does smoke. Condemn smoking because of its menace to health, if any, but don't consider it a symptom of moral degeneracy.

And you girls who do smoke, step a little carefully in your new-found freedom. It is always easy, you know, to mistake liberty for license, and to go that small step farther which will make you forever sorry.

Mrs. R. T. sends a hint which is well worth adopting. "In order to keep the bath room tidy and the bath mat aired and dry, crochet two rings with thread the color of the mat and sew them to two corners of the mat. Hang it by these on hooks screwed into the back of the bathroom door." Thank you Mrs. R. T.

And Mrs. G. R. of Lakefield, offers a solution for overcrowding of the oven that many housewives will find valuable when preparing "company" dinners. "I have a half brick handy," she says, "to stand on end in the oven. On it I can bake an additional dish."

We all of us have experienced trouble with cane chair seats sagging, and Mrs. R. D. W. suggests as a remedy rubbing the top and under side with hot soap suds, then allowing the seat to dry in the open air.

MARION'S MAIL

DEAR MARION:

Your reply to "Good Girl" certainly deserves applause. Letters like that usually make little or no impression on me but hers gave me a feeling of helpless rage. It was so smug.

She starts off by saying she is sick of hearing and reading about all this smoking and drinking. It's too bad that the possibility of others beside herself were tired of the subject, did not occur to her before she wrote her own views for publication.

She seems to be under the impression that her love of outdoor sports is a sort of virtue. But isn't she just a bit muddled. It is the qualities such as loyalty and a sense of fair play, encouraged by games and sports that are considered virtues.

As for 'loyalty,' Good Girl certainly has little or none to her own sex and her sense of fair play (if she had any) would prevent her from condemning so easily and so extensively.

I wish "Good Girl" would ask some of those numerous "nice young men" that she says she knows, about how many "nice young girls" they know. I think they would know one or two (?) don't you? I think "Good Girl" what makes your letter so infuriating is that it was not written with any idea of trying to give other girls a helping hand with some good advice, but with the sole purpose of advertising your own righteousness.

Sincerely yours,
BLUE EYES."

Thank you for the applause, "Blue Eyes." Indeed, you are quite right when you say that it is the good qualities engendered by sports that count—not just the sports themselves. Evidently most of my corresponedents agree that indulging in sports has not helped "Good Girl" to obtain a right perspective, and, as you say, her letter was "infuriating." I think, though, that she has been properly squashed, don't you?

"Dear Marion:

We were more than glad to see our letter in Saturday's issue of The Examiner. Our pen names may be frivolous, but we certainly are not. Tillie does not try to steal Bubbles' man every time. We are dearly in love with each other. We greatly appreciate your answer about smoking, as we have not changed our opinion about it in the least. We wonde r if "Good Girl" read the letters intended for her, or has she merely written giving her opinion and does not want to see anyone, but her own viewpoint? We would certainly love an invitation to that party that is to be given in her honour. We wonder if there is any chance of stealing that Wonderful Boy Friend. Well we had better close, for now, will write again soon, as we greatly appreciate this corner conducted by Marion.

Yours,
"TILLIE and BUBBLES."

I haven't heard from "Good Girl" about that party, "Tillie and Bubbles." I'm disappointed, because I thought it was a really splendid idea to show her how good a party could be without the things to which she objected. Maybe she will yet accept—and I hope that I, too, get an invitation.

"Dear Marion:

I am a girl of 14. Do you think I am too young to go with a boy? They have often asked me to go for rides, but I have always refused.
BLONDY."

I think you are rather young to have sweethearts, but you are not too young to have boy friends. My suggestion is that you treat the boys like brothers and have good times with them, but don't "go with" them until you are two or three years older. I have replied privately to your other request.

Dear Marion:

I am a young married woman, and I have run into a difficulty which I hope you can solve for me. I do not believe in drinking liquor of any kind, but I find so often that ladies at whose homes I visit have wine, etc., which they offer guests. Is this supposed to be 'the thing,' and is it usual? I mean, because these people do it, should I do so too?
Worried."

I would say not, "Worried." In the first place, custom should not force you to do anything against the dictates of your own conscience. And secondly, I don't think it is yet considered good taste in Peterborough for women to offer their guests liquor. Home-made, or native wine is in a different class, probably, and is not usually considered "liquor." Perhaps you have not made this distinction. It seems to be the thing, nowadays, for the man of the house to have beverages to offer his visitors—I heard one man lament the fact that so many offer him liquor which he does not wish to drink but does not feel he can refuse without giving offence.

Puzzled: Your letter is not suitable for reproduction in this column. Try again.

W. I. :I thought it better to answer your inquiry in a private letter. Let me know how your case turns out.

Boots: You are absolutely right. Keep it up.

Judy Shea: Thanks for the poem. It is beautiful, and I promise to publish it sometime soon.

LITTLE SONGS OF LOVE

STARLETS FOR YOU

My little brown pony
Rides very high,
Over the treetops
Into the sky.
He nibbles the stars,
Of the moon takes a bite,
And sleeps in the clouds
When it is night.

Some day I shall go
A-riding with him
High in the sky
Till the trees look dim.
We'll play there together
(As often we do)
And I'll bring home an armful
Of starlets for you.
—Ruth Owen.

No. 15.

There are certain qualities that are inextricably associated with both sexes. When we say we like a man to be manly and a woman to be womanly there is more to that bromidic remark than meets the eye at first glance. A man's good qualities might be summed up as courage, strength and steadfastness. None would ever think of describing a very attractive woman as one who was courageous, strong and steadfast. To a man, the really attractive woman would be the sort who presented a foil to all these nice qualities in him and whose contra disposition allowed him to exercise them to the fullest. So you would get the attractive woman for him in one who was just a little bit afraid of many things, who was not robust, either in body or character and who was inclined to be fickle. To the man described above, she would be admirable and a perfect completion to his nature, giving it a fine chance to utilize all its best characteristics. That explains why a very amiable man will often marry a shrewish girl.

A Tip or Two

If we have a siege of continuous damp weather, it is well to air the linens occasionally so they will not mildew.

WHAT A VALUE THIS IS

LOOK as far as you like! The more comparisons you make, the surer you will be that no car on the market even approaches this new Oldsmobile in value.

Its voguish new bodies by Fisher, the distinctive creations of artist-engineers, express youth and smartness in every line. Fresh, sparkling colors enhance their beauty. Rich upholsteries, panellings and appointments carry out this fine-car styling to the last detail.

A great new 55-h.p. engine develops power for every need, speed for every desire—and gives you all the advantages of brilliant high-compression performance without using special fuel. Finger-tip steering provides exceptional handling ease in traffic and in parking.

And no other car, at Oldsmobile's price, offers so many fine-car features. Oldsmobile comes completely equipped, as a fine car should be—four Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers, vertical radiator shutters, fuel pump, controlled cooling, a rubber-silenced chassis and silenced interior, rubber-core clutch, full automatic spark, gasoline gauge and temperature gauge on dash, and rubber-cushioned bumpers front and rear.

Come in soon. Know this car and know its value. A half-hour at the wheel will demonstrate convincingly why more and more thousands are choosing this new Oldsmobile.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE WEEKLY COLUMN

GARDEN HILL

On January 10, 1903, the Garden Hill branch of the Women's Institute was organized, following an address by Miss Miller of Guelph, the minutes as recorded by Mrs. John Mulligan, secretary, being:

"Supplementary meeting was held at Garden Hill, when the delegate, Miss Miller, was asked to speak on Women's Institutes, after which the Garden Hill ladies resolved to hold a meeting once a month at the home of the members; the first meeting to be held at Mrs. S. Kelly's, on the first Thursday in February. They had asked a grant of $5.00 from the Hope Council, but did not receive it. There were fifteen ladies present. The members enjoyed the address on butter making.

In 1902, on January 11, a meeting had been held in Dr. Beatty's home at Garden Hill, with twenty-one ladies present, when Miss Laura Linton of Guelph, gave the ladies a good lesson on cooking—Tomato bisque, creamed eggs, creamed salmon, etc, being demonstrated. The secretary gave a short sketch of the work that has been done by the East Durham Women's Institute since its organization in March, 1901. Three blank sheets were left for some of the ladies present to make an effort to secure at least twenty-five members for a branch at this centre, which should entitle them to all the privileges given at other places of meeting.

"It was a very cold day.. There will be a branch at this centre. Twenty-eight were in attendance; they enjoyed the lesson, and many of them desired more cooking lessons. Many wealthy farmers live at this centre."

For some time after the organization of the East Durham Women's Institute at Millbrook in March, 1901, and its extension from here to other points in the district, the visit of the official delegate occurred in winter, usually in January, instead of June, which is now the general practice.

The change was made necessary because of the fact that bad weather and bad roads lessened the attendance frequently, and made travelling difficult. Repeated the secretary, Mrs. John Mulligan, has in her minutes:

"Very stormy day; small attendance; storm filled the roads so that they were almost impassable; our sleigh-load nearly upset several times."

AT MOUNT PLEASANT

The girls who attended the coaching classes conducted on Monday and Tuesday, July 30 to 31, by Miss Edith Hopkins, representative of the Women's Institute branch of the Department of Agriculture, included the following from Mount Pleasant: the Misses Laurine and Grace Best, Helen McLean, Dorothy Morden, Emma Fee, Myrtle Hooton, Kathleen Sisson, Mabel Eggleston, Sadie Allen. These classes were held in the Community Hall at Cavan, and are designed to train the girls in the judging classes for the Judging Competition to be held in Millbrook on August 9. When they compete in judging:

Nutrition—(a) Family Menus; (b), School Lunches.

Country Girl's Wardrobe.

The wardrobe included undergarments, hoisiery and shoes of suitable colors and durable quality. Dresses should be mainly along the same line of color and of a color becoming to the wearer. If a color placed near the face shows yellow around the mouth, nose or eyes, it is unbecoming.

Dresses should be suitable to the occasion when worn both in the material and design. Suits are not profitable in the country. They can really be worn so little. She stressed care in house dresses and dresses suitable to wear to church, and disapproved very much of too little clothing.

In planning a kitchen it should have two windows, one north and one either east or west; there should not be more than four doors; stove, pantry, sink, cellar should be placed as close together as possible.

Everything should be arranged to save steps.

There should be the ordinary wood or coal stove for winter use, and a coal oil, gas or electric stove for hot weather. A dumb waiter should belong to every kitchen. All surfaces should be plain and the colors cheerful.

The living room should face the south. It should be suitable to a farm house, such a room as may be used. It should be attractive, restful and cheerful. The colors and furniture should harmonize as far as possible. Avoid placing furniture cornerways. Keep the musical parts together; the books together, and do not have all sorts of things scattered around.

In arranging and furnishing any room, its size, shape, exposure, and the use to which it is to be put must be considered.

In planning menus and lunches the food value of each article should be considered; also the balance for the day; and for the individual; suitability to the season and to farm resources and attractiveness.

In preparing lunches, the container must be considered; a closed container spoils the flavor; a tin pail should be ventilated. Separate kinds of food should be wrapped in waxed paper. Tea or coffee have no place in a school lunch.

LAKEFIELD

A Stranger's Day is to be a feature of the September Woman's Institute meeting and will be a step in the right direction in givng a welcome to newcomers and introducing them to some of their fellow citizens. Lakefield has had a reputation for being rather slow in accepting newcomers and if this had been true, the Institute will help in turning over a new leaf and giving the "stranger within our gates" a cordial welcome.

Another feature which will be of interest will be the report of the historical research committee, which is at work on the rather large task of making an authentic history of Lakefield and the vicinity. Interesting and surprising revelations are expected.

How many know, for instance, that Lakefield was first known as Nelson in honor of the first family to settle here?

Is it a matter of general knowledge that years before the war, when the Kaiser of Germany proposed an exchange of professors with American universities as a means toward promoting better international relations, Harvard sent a Canadian professor which displeased the Kaiser greatly. That gentleman was Professor Schofield, a former Lakefield boy?

There are interesting chapters in Lakefield's history which will make interesting reading.

And there is a rich collection of anecdotes of those early days when Lakefield was noted for its lumbering activities and its rare collection of "remittance men." Among the facts are being gathered some of these anecdotes as a sort of lighter touch to the collection of facts.

AT WARSAW

While the Women's Institute was primarily organized for the direct benefit of the home, and through the home, the country, there are side issues which follow, necessarily.

Two we will consider to-day. One is that the women who belong to, take an interest in and work in the Institute's must and do become broader-minded. As there is no restriction regarding class nor creed, nationality, color, political party, nor anything else (except deliberately criminal and even that is not mentioned, as such would never wish to belong), so long as the would-be member is a woman of fifteen years or over, there must be gatherings in which women could meet in no other way. Even if some of the women never speak, there is the atmosphere of their thought, and members get to see more sides than their own. They learn that much depends upon circumstances and environment, and get out of the rut of their own narrow circle, see things better for themselves, and their dear ones, see, perhaps where they can, through the Institute, or better still, quietly, unknown to any but the God who sees all, help some others to a better mode of life.

We are not all cast in the same mould; it would be rather unpleasant if we were; we cannot all see or think alike. By seeing something better in others we may improve; by seeing faults in others we may take warning and improve. This phase of Institute results is very noticeable in many places, previously made up of cliques.

Institutes also have developed latent talent. Many a woman who would willingly work in her own home, and talk too, looked aghast if asked to speak in meeting. With the Institute's idea of kindly help and no unkind criticism, many such have been induced to tell perhaps some little thing in which many know they excel. They find it is not such a terrible ordeal, and do more, and these very women are apt to be ones with just as good ideas as any one else, and they give much help.

Sometimes a paper is given by some one, who thinks she has done very badly, but in it are many hints very helpful to others, —in one case quite recently in Warsaw a paper on gardening was given. It was excellent, so much so that another expert gardener noted the paper, and sent it to another branch, where it was printed in full by the town paper and very many considered it well worth while. The lady herself was astonished. Another, when she started to speak or read always cried, but she braved it out, and now, without any difficulty takes her part in any thing that comes up, where she should, be it church ladies' Aid, missionary gatherings or Institute.

All are better for these side issues.

AT CAVAN

The Women's Institute is a real benefit to its members.

When the regular printed programs are followed and different members appointed to take charge of the programs for the different meetings, it divides the work around among the ladies, each one taking a share of the responsibility.

Many persons prepare and read excellent papers on the subjects assigned, who before joining the Institute, would not think of letting their voice be heard in public. Even the most timid can answer the roll call by giving a tested recipe, a humourous story, or a favourite quotation.

The topics discussed are appropriate to the season, and much benefit is derived from discussions on difficulties met with in the farm routine work. Recipes are exchanged, and new ideas given on the best way of preserving and pickling, etc.

Almost every person excels in some particular line, and in a group of thirty or forty women there is much useful help obtained and given along the various lines involved in the art of home-making.

Aside from the material benefit, the opportunity of mingling with neighbors and friends in the social hour, which is always enjoyed during and after the lunch, is a very pleasant occasion and allows all to go home feeling rested and with new ideas to think over.

It promotes community sociability, as ladies from all churches belong to the Institute.

Any rural locality having no Institute, would be wise to apply to the District President, Mrs. T. A. Skitch, Bailieboro, or Mrs. J. R. Eakins, Millbrook, District Secretary, to assist in the organization of one.

MOTHER'S DAY

In the old dark days,
In the cruel Civil War,
A little white-haired mother,
Gave this message o'er and o'er.

Refrain:
Then write to your Mother at home;
Tell her that though you may roam,
You still keep in memory the Mother who cares,
You'll strive to remember her prayers.

(2)
To the boys in the Blue,
To the boys in the Grey—
This little white-haired Mother,
Made the plea from day to day.
—Then write to your Mother.

(3)
When the cruel war was o'er,
Still the message was the same,
The little white-haired Mother
Carried on her work again.
—Then write to your Mother.

(4)
So a Mother's Day was started
For the boys now far away;
Boys and girls now get the message,
Write to Mother, now, to-day.
—Then write to your Mother.

(5)
Mother lives and Mother loves you,
Mother cares, and she forgives,
Mother's memory will guard you,
Mother surely understands.
—Then write to your Mother.

—NELLY BLY.

LITTLE GIRL'S ONE-PIECE PETTICOAT-SLIP

THE measurements as indicated would be suitable for a girl of seven or eight, but it is best to get the idea of the diagram carefully in mind and then to cut from measurements.

One yard and twenty-two inches of twenty-five-inch material was employed for the garment as indicated and this was folded on a lengthwise fold from A to a. A to B measures just half the distance, or 20 inches. Cut across from B to E 2¾ inches, then straight down, from E to D and E to d. Both of these distances are 2¾ inches. D to C, and d to c are 2¾ inches. This gives an opening for the head five and a half inches square. Measure across from E to F 2½ inches and then cut straight down to G and g. The distance from F to G and F to g is 6½ inches. From G to H and from g to h measures three inches. Lay a yard stick from H to K and from h to k and draw a straight line. This is the under arm seam of the petticoat. From K to J, and from k to j should measure about an inch and a half. Curve off the line J to A and j to a as indicated. This may be done after the underarm seam has been taken and the garment is tried on.

Allowance should be made at all edges for small French seams or narrow hems. Try the garment on and take a small dart along E to F to conform to the shoulder slope. Then make a French underarm seam, joining the two HKs to the two hks.

Make a narrow hem along the square C-D-E-d-c for the head and another hem along the arm holes H-G-F-g-h. Sew narrow lace along these opening or finish by crocheting a narrow edge with linen thread. A good-sized hem may be taken along the lower edge if you want to allow for letting down—or you may take a narrow hem and finish with edging or crochetting.

You will see that the back and front of this garment are precisely alike. Some petticoat patterns make a slight difference in back and front, but it is much simpler to make back and front alike. As the garment is quite roomy under the arms a difference is really not necessary.

It is a good plan to have two small safety pins or pretty baby pins to fasten the slip at the shoulder tops to the undergarment.

In adapting this pattern to any child you should first decide on the length of the material needed. This is done by doubling the measurement from shoulders to lower edge of hem of frock of desired length. For a very small child you will need somewhat less than twelve inches from A to K. Then having marked the center of the material make the square for the head—smaller in case of a smaller child. Then the material may be slipped over the child's head and you can easily see how wide you will want the shoulder straps and how large you should make the oblong openings for the arms. The dart adjustment at the shoulders should be varied to suit the degree of the shoulder slope of the individual child.

GREEN PEA SOUP

Here is a good recipe for Green Pea Soup. Try it.

One quart green peas, two cups milk, one tablespoon butter, one tablespoon flour, one-half teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, one teaspoon onion juice, one egg.

Wash peas thoroughly and shell. Put pods on to cook in cold water to cover, and bring to the boiling point. Simmer for 15 minutes. Drain and use the water to cook the peas in. Cook peas until tender. Rub through a colander and add milk. Melt butter, stir in flour and slowly add pea puree and milk. Season with salt, papper and onion juice, and bring to the boiling point. Stir constantly. When mixture boils remove from fire and stir in beaten egg. Serve at once.

Week after week, for more than fifteen years, Miss Matilda M. Tracy, a St. Paul school teacher, has never failed to have her class rank 100 per cent in school banking. With classes averaging 35 to 40 pupils, this means that none of the 1,200 pupils under her charge has failed to lay aside a small sum each week.

The Weatherman

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

THE very fact that a child doesn't realize his limitations is a great factor in his development. We sometimes marvel at the frank egotism of children, and yet it is a great asset, for if a child realized how little he knows, how inferior and dependent he is, he would become so very discouraged that he never could carry on. Let him boast a bit, let him exalt his powers without being severe. Then help him turn his childish boasting of himself into determination of purpose backed by self confidence and to distinguish this from the selfish, vain egotism which in older folk is detestable.

PETER says when he's big that he's going to be a motor-man,
Jackie June much prefers to go hunting with a caravan,
But I, when I'm grown, why I'm going to be the weather-man
And decide what the weather ought to be.

Every day folks will read in the paper in the weather line
If the snow is on its way, if 'twill rain, or if the sun will shine
And perhaps, just for fun, I'll make winter in the summertime
And folks can order what they'd like to have from me.

If they want to catch fish they can say, "Please make a cloudy sky."
If they start out for camp then I'll make the weather nice and dry.
So each one can get just the kind he likes and here is why
'Cause I'll fix it just the place he is, you see!

ENTERTAINING GUESTS

A Series Giving Hints on Arranging Parties.
By LAURA.

THE AUTO DANCE

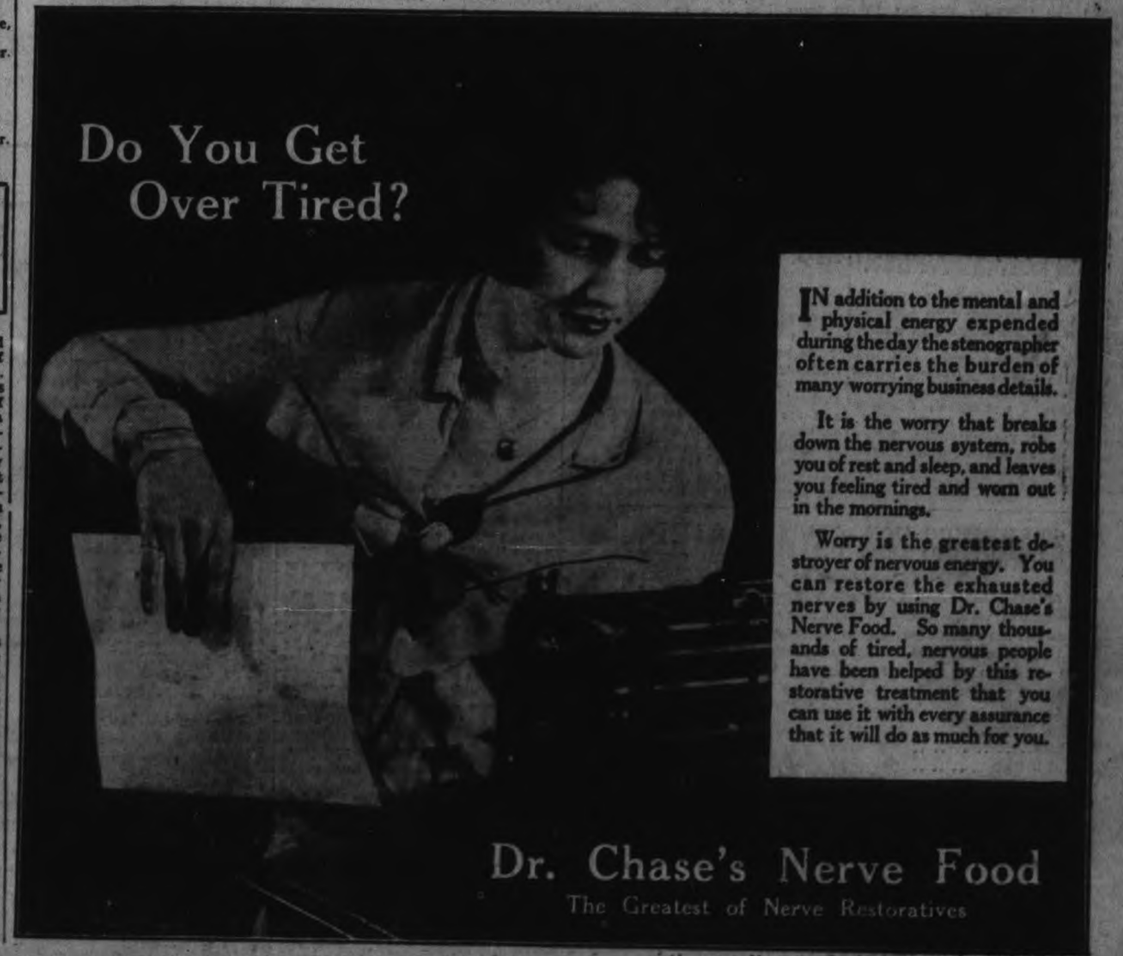
The very name of this party spelled mystery, and it proved to be one of the most successful given this season. The invitations were little blue books made simply by folding a piece of blue cardboard in half. Inside was a map starting from a certain prominent spot in town with printed directions to go ten yards north, turn by the Library, then go straight on past a church, and so on until, the hostess' gate was reached. The large lawn which was thickly padded with grass, was cut short to make an ideal dance floor. It was lighted with the headlights of a big touring car at one end and a small coupe at the other end. A three-piece orchestra sat in the big car and used the horn long and often to emphasize jazz.

Every single one of the dances was a lark. For the first one, little license tags were passed around, small cardboard slips with numbers on them and cords with which to tie them to one's arm. Of course there were two of each, and each girl danced with the boy whose license number was the same as hers.

Then there was one dance with the boys as "cranks" and the girls as "self-starters." The boys had to stand still and the girls danced around them until the music stopped, when everybody stood still and each boy could take the girl nearest him and dance with her until the music stopped again. This was great fun as there was one boy too many, so someone always got left.

For another dance one of the orchestra blew up a paper bag and exploded it when it was least expected. It really did sound like a blow-out. So naturally everyone stopped dancing. Deflated top balloons on long strings were passed around to the company, and everyone could blow until the music started. When the next "blow-out" came, the dancers finished blowing up their balloons, which then rose in the air, turning the dance into a very pretty one, with the girls in the light dresses and the different colored balloons bobbing around.

For the joy-ride dance the music played faster and faster, everyone falling into the time until the dance was one mad whirl. Then a whistle blew and a traffic cop appeared on the scene, stopping everyone and handed them a little pocket calendar, saying he was giving them "thirty days," at which everybody said "Fine," and was hissed off the floor. The refreshments were served in the garage on little tables, the place being arranged to look like the usual tea-house which one sees on the highways, which has a sign hanging outside, "By-the-Way Tea-House."



KNIGHTS LOSE CLOSE DECISION TO DeLAVAL

VICTORS PLAY GOOD BALL TO WIN 6-5

Game Featured By Much Wild Heaving On Part of Players.

ON WET DIAMOND.

Knights Unable To Put Across the Tieing Run in Seventh.

In a seven innings battle on a slippery diamond the De Laval last night trimmed the Knights of Columbus by the close score of 6 to 5 at Confederation Square before a small but enthusiastic crowd of fans.

The game was marked by many overthrows, probably due to the wet condition of the park, although aside from this feature the battle was remarkably close, as the score indicates; the Knights being able to work their "scare" right up until the end of the seventh, when their hopes of a win crumpled with the bat Lew Lebarr was using, making him an easy out, to retire the side, leaving his brother Fred stranded on third base with the tying run.

In the first innings "Scotty" Galbraith, the De Laval second sacker, amused himself by placing three long foul drives on the base of the new monument, but eventually drew a pass.

Both Carruthers and Darling, the pitchers, worked hard and were kept continually on their toes owing to the bunting tactics which were used by both teams with considerable success. Carruthers for the De Laval, struck out four and walked two, while Darling for the K. of C. struck out three and walked two also.

Carruthers slammed a long drive over first base on to Murray street for a home run in the fourth, while Teddy Lebarr was able to stretch his two bagger into a circuit clout because of overthrows. Jake Hall was robbed of a three base hit in the first when Ward froze to third base.

Ken Miller, in left field for the De Laval, gathered in four long flies, playing an errorless game.

Line-up:

K. of C—Logan, c.; E. Lebarr, 1b.; Darling, p.; L. Lebarr, l.f.; Clancy, s.s.; Ranger, 3b.; Bennett, m.f.; Murphy, 2b.; E. Wolff, r.f.

TWO GAMES NEXT WEEK

Will Be No Game On Civic Holiday in Campbellford League.

PLAY-OFFS SOON.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 4.—Although the executive has not yet met for a formal discussion of the play-off schedule and selection of umpires for the game. The representatives of the teams who will be the first to play have agreed to meet on Tuesday evening at 6:15. This will be the first game and will be between the Outlaws and St. Andrews. The clerks, being at the top of the league, draw a bye for the first game and will meet the winner of the first series as soon as it has been completed. As far as is yet known, there will be two games next week, Tuesday and Thursday, the regular Monday night game will not be played on account of Civic Holiday.

Due to a certain amount of arguing and disagreement with umpires' decisions in some of the later games, several of the usual umpires have stated finally that they will not attempt to handle the games unless the players are given to understand that the Umpire's decisions and orders are final on the field. Members of the executive, interviewed on this matter, express various degrees of surprise that such a move should be necessary.

NEW PERFUME IN PASTE FORM

Solid perfumes to replace liquid scents have appeared in this country following their recent introduction in Paris. Intended for travelers in particular, they are in paste form and are applied to hair, neck, or clothing. Ordinarily paste obtained by boiling flowers in fat is distilled to make perfume, says Popular Science Monthly, but the new scents are simply undistilled paste.

VIEWS ON SPORT

There will be no scheduled games in the City Softball League to-night or on Monday (Civic Holiday).

Failure to put across the tieing run in the seventh frame lost last night's softball fixture for the Knights, the De Laval crew winning by a 6—5 count. Both of the pitchers worked hard and were kept continually on their toes by the bunting tactics used by the two teams.

• • • •

Wild heaving on the part of the players seemed to be the feature of the fixture; nevertheless the play was close enough as the score would indicate. The wet condition of the diamond can probably account for the many overthrows.

• • • •

With eleven more games to be played, the City Softball League is nearing the play-off series. The De Laval have a big lead in the standings, which was further strengthened by last night's victory over the Knights. It is expected that the play-offs will be staged about the last week in August. The winners may then enter a series with teams from the different softball centres in the surrounding district.

Johnny Risko, Cleveland heavyweight, through his manager, Danny Dunn, has filed formal claim for the heavyweight championship title recently vacated by Gene Tunney.

The Peterborough Cricket Club has been going great guns all season, and expect to hang another onto their list when they play their return game with St. Edmund's C. C. in Toronto, on Monday.

CANADIAN GIRLS SET NEW MARK

Win Semi-Final Relay Heat In 49 2-5 Seconds To-day.

MEN WIN THEIR HEAT.

AMSTERDAM, August 4 (By W. H. Ingram, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent). — Both the Canadian men's and women's 400 metres relay teams were successful in their final Olympic trials to-day, the girls setting up a new world's record in their heat. The finals of both events will be run to-morrow.

The men's team, John Fitzpatrick, Ralph Adams and George Hester, of Hamilton, and Percy Williams, Vancouver, 100 and 200 metre sprint champion, won their trial, with Britain second and Italy third. The time was 42 1-5 seconds.

The Canadian girls' mark was 49 2-5 seconds. The runners in order were: Fanny Rosenfeld, Ethel Smith, Florence Bell, and Myrtle Cook, all of Toronto. The American girls equalled the world's record in trimming the Germans in the second heat in 49 4-5 seconds.

Williams, by a burst of speed, nipped the British negro, J. E. London, at the tape on the men's trials, and gave the victory to the Canadian team.

LEADERS LOSE; GAP UNCHANGED

Yankees and Athletics Both Beaten in Yesterday's Games.

SENATORS WIN.

NEW YORK, August 4. — With their eyes fastened upon a scoreboard which heralded the defeat of the Athletics in Cleveland, the Yankees tried to pick up a game on their pursuers, but failed even to score in the third and rubber game of the series at St. Louis yesterday afternoon. The Browns won by 8 to 0. The fourth Yankee shut-out of the season ran the champions' string of consecutive runless innings to 21 and left them with a lead of four and one-half games over the Mackmen.

Sammy Gray held the Yanks to six scattered hits and prevented Babe Ruth from getting a hit as the home team pounded Waite Hoyt, Stanley Coveleskie, and Myles Thomas.

A wild seventh inning, during which two Detroit pitchers walked five batters in succession and then allowed three singles for a total of six runs, gave Washington the final game of the series 9 to 3 at Detroit. After retiring the first two batters in the seventh, Billings issued three passes and was replaced by Vangilder, who walked in two runs and permitted three singles before retiring the side.

Cleveland put a temporary stop to Philadelphia's chase after the league-leading Yanks by taking the third and final game of the series. The Mackmen hopped on Joe Shaute for a three-run lead in the first, but Rube Walberg was unable to hold it, the Indians pounding him for two in the first and six in the third.

Connie Mack used 18 players, including five pinch batters and three pitchers in a vain effort to stop the Tribe.

Ed. Morris of the Boston Red Sox scored a win over Tommy Thomas of the Chicago White Sox when Boston won the last of a five-game series 3 to 1 at Chicago.

Chicago outhit Boston 7 to 6. Thomas struck out six batters, while Morris fanned four. The White Sox pitcher gave five bases on balls, one one more than his rival. Both pitchers saw nine runners left on bases.

JOE WRIGHT BEATEN!

Canadan Rower Loses To Hungarian By Three Lengths.

SLOTEN, Holland, August 4 (Canadian Press).—Joe Wright, Jr., of Toronto, diamond sculls winner, was beaten in a singles trial of the Olympic rowing contests to-day by Straka, a Hungarian. The Canadian rower's defeat by three lengths over the 2,000 metres course came as a startling upset.

Ivory is given a silverlike finish that actually is composed of tiny silver grains, by placing it in a dilute silver nitrate solution, and then in a solution of common salt until it turns deep yellow. Next the ivory is dipped in water, and exposed in the sun until it blackens. On rubbing, the black surface changes to a brilliant silver.—Popular Science Monthly.

CANADIANS TAKE LEAD

St. Lawrence Club Leading Barnegat Bay Yacht Racing Association.

FOUR-RACE SERIES.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 4.—(Canadian Press).—By taking first and second places in the only race sailed yesterday the Royal St. Lawrence Yacht Club crews took a commanding position at the start of the four-race series with the Barnegat Bay Yacht Racing Association, of New Jersey. The races will be continued today. Alex Shearwood piloted Walter M. Stewart's Naulakah first over the line, and was followed by the second Montreal crew, with George Hanna at the helm of of the Zohra. In the wake of the two local crews came the visitors, Ferdie Schoettle finishing third with the Mademoiselle and skipper Harden being last with the Beaver.

Weather conditions were poor yesterday. There was rain and none too good sailing wind. To add to the difficulties the Zohra was found to be in need of patching and there was from one cause or another, a delay of two hours before the first race was started. The upshot was that only one event was sailed, instead of the morning and afternoon race as scheduled. To make up the program three races will be sailed to-day.

There was little doubt as to the winner of yesterday's test once the yachts had rounded the first buoy on the first of two trips around the triangular course off Pointe Clair. The Naulakah, acting beautifully in the light wind, was first around the buoys and from then on kept adding to her lead steadily until the finish.

The real competition in the race developed into a battle between George Hanna's Royal St. Lawrence crew aboard the Zohra and Ferdie Schoettle's visiting quartette aboard the scow-shaped Mademoiselle for second buoy on the first round. Here the Montreal crew were a trifle slow in handling their head sails and it looked as if Schoettle would gain an advantage. But on the run down completing the first round the Zohra acted well before the wind, working onto a safe lead in second place over the Mademoiselle, but unable to overtake the fleet Naulakah on the last round. The Mademoiselle finished ahead of the Beaver, piloted by Harden, the visiting crew failing to get the most out of the trim little Beaver.

The crews will switch yachts today with each race, so that there will be no advantage in boats in the four-race series, each crew sailing once in each of the four sloops. The event concludes at the end of August when the Royal St. Lawrence crews will sail a four-race series off Seaside Park, N.J., using yachts of the Barnegat Bay Association.

The times in races:

Yacht	Crew	Time
Naulakah	A. Shearwood	2.24.12
Zohra	Geo. Hanna	2.30.54
Mademoiselle	F. Schoettle	2.33.25
Beaver	Hal Harden	2.50.35

FOURTEEN GIRLS ENTER CONTEST

Mount Pleasant W. I. Has Good Representation For Judging Competition.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Aug. 4 (Examiner Correspondence).—The Mount Pleasant Branch of Women's Institute was entertained by Mrs. Harry Bland at her home on Wednesday afternoon, Aug. 1.

There was a splendid attendance of fifteen members and nine visitors, despite the fact that this particular season of the year is unusually busy.

Thirteen members responded to the roll-call, which was "Pickle recipes." The secretary, Mrs. Morden, reported for the committee which was appointed to investigate the condition of the hall, giving the necessary improvements, with the cost of each. It was agreed that the committee engage a mason to build a chimney and also buy shingles for the roof of the hall.

After a lengthy discussion on different plans of raising sufficient money to make the necessary repairs, it was moved by Mrs. Morden, seconded by Mrs. Rutherford, that a committee be appointed to take a free-will offering.

Moved by Mrs. G. Shield and seconded by Mrs. Ira Lowe, that Mrs. Rutherford, Mrs. Morden and Mrs. Jamieson be said committee.

Mrs. Garnet Shield, Mrs. Norman Fee and Mrs. Ira Lowe were appointed as a committee to choose a play and make the necessary arrangements for same.

Mrs. Ira Lowe reported fourteen names of girls to enter the household science juding competition, had been sent to Mr. Kellough, the agricultural representative. Only nine of these girls attended the coaching classes held at Cavan, July 30 to 31, all of whom are expected to enter the judging competition in Millbrook on August 9.

A letter was read by the secretary from the secretary of Cavan Women's Institute, extending an invitation to the Mount Pleasant branch to attend the Cavan Women's Institute meeting and take full charge of the meeting to be held at the home of Mrs. Greighton Carr on Thursday, August 17. Moved by Mrs. Norman Fee and seconded by Mrs. Ira Lowe, that we accept this kind invitation, and the necessary arrangements regarding the conveyance of the members to Cavan were made.

A letter was read from the Department of Agriculture, inviting any who attended the Canadian National Exhibition to visit the Women's Institute tent, which has been planned by the Federated Women's Institute of the province, also the Women's Institutes of Ontario, Quebec and Alberta, will be represented in the Women's Building.

Regarding the "deed" of the hall, the secretary asked where this might be kept. It was agreed that the secretary take charge of same.

Mrs. Henry Lowes and Mrs. Hubert charge of the program for the meeting.

A recitation was well given by Mrs. Norman Fee, entitled "A Voice from a Far Country," with the solo part "Home, Sweet Home," by Juan Shield, accompanied by Mrs. Shield at the piano.

Miss Finley gave an interesting paper on the history of "Toronto University."

An excellent paper was given by Mrs. Henry Lowes entitled "Sunlight and Health," and the "Eternal Sun."

In conclusion the members joined in singing two verses of that old familiar song "Home, Sweet Home."

A social half hour was enjoyed while the hostess, assisted by the lunch committee, Mrs. John Handley and Mrs. Gertrude McLean, served dainty refreshments.

Those present included Mrs. Joshua Eggleston, Mrs. Howse, Mrs. Garnet Shield and Juan; Mrs. Rosenburg, Mrs. George Jamieson, Mrs. T. C. Morden, Mrs. Hubert Gardiner, Mrs. Thomas Graham, Mrs. A. Brown, Mrs. Norman Fee, Mrs. Edgar Best and friend; Mrs. Hannah Rutherford, Mrs. Gertrude McLean, Miss Lena Finley, Mrs. John Handley, Mrs. Henry Lowes, Mrs. Hiram Best, Ella and Grace Best, Mrs. Ira Lowe and Mrs. Bland.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Melville Jones on September 5, with Mrs. A. Brown and Mrs. Harry Bland responsible for the program, and Mrs. George Jamieson and Mrs. Rosenburg will assist the hostess with the lunch.

Inside Sportin' Dope—By a Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

Old pitchers must be like old soldiers, Mac. They never die. Last Sat. when Mister Hardill was A.W.O.L., the venerable Misters Heckman and Harrison simply stepped out there and showed how games is won, and the result is, Mister Sporting Editor, the boys is back in the hunt, and they can still make it closer than the next second going down the stretch. They was only 9 of the lads out there Sat., and if anybody broke a leg the game was over, but, fortunately, the underpinnings held out for the whole 16 innings and we grabbed off a coupla games that was needed worse than the parks need some seats with backs on them.

The boys is showing a refreshing tendency of bunching their clouts, and if you got any head for figgers—I mean the mathematical kind—it shouldn't take you long to dope out the fact that in their last 3 games they has scored 30 runs, which must be a record for any Peterborough sr. team for the last 10 years. 10 runs a game is a nice average any way you look at it, and if the gang can keep anything like that clip for the balance of the schedule they'll land in there for the play-offs with Belleville yet.

Sat. gave the Peterborough fans a chance to see all of Mister Bob Elliott's pitchers, except Mister Leal, and he spent a busy but unprofitable afternoon on the coaching line. Mister Ralph and Mister Shea did the honors in the 1st game, with Mister Jack as usual coming in in his favorite role as the undertaker. Mister Wood, the local product, pitched the second affair, and he looked nice—for 2 frames. And he mighta looked nice for a while longer if Mister Collins' mind hadda acted quicker when he had a double play in his hands. Now you give Mister Collins a half of a roast chicken in his hands and he'll know what to do with it right off of the reel. No slow thinker in the Eating League is the Deloro catcher, but roast chicken and double plays is 2 different birds, and Mister Collins played this 1 wrong. The double killing was there—for a moment—and if it had been pulled off they would of been no runs scored, for Mister Harrison's strike-out would of been the 3rd man down. Instead the Petes went out and picked themselves 4 runs, enough to win the ball game. That's the way ball games go, folks, and yet some bird will try to tell you they ain't no such think as brakes.

Well, Mac, I guess this kid, Mister Percy Williams, of B. C., didn't do nothing but make a joke outa whole lotta American sport writers. Them birds couldn't see nothing but Uncle Sam in the 100 and 200 methers, and reading between the lines in the papers from over the border, you could see that the boys naturally expected to see the lads from the U. S. A. run 1, 2, 3, 4. The school boy from out near the salmon belt, however, made them look like they was tied up. The Yanks'll get a lotta points the way they score, and with so many of them over there, but the 1st prizes they'll get in the track events anyway won't take up a whole lotta room on the Roosevelt when she sails for home.

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

GIANTS WIN BY LATE RALLY

Lindsrom Hits Homer With One On and Two Out in Ninth.

CUBS WIN AT BROOKLYN.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—The Giants pulled another game out of the fire with late rallies here yesterday, a home run by Fred Lindstrom, with two out in the ninth, and Ott on base, giving them their second straight victory over the Reds, 7 to 5, the same score as the one by which the visitors were defeated Thursday.

The Giants trailed by four runs when they went to bat against Adolpho Luque in the eighth, but Pank Hogan's homer capped a four-run rally, giving them an edge. The Reds tied it in the ninth on doubles by Picinich and Ford, setting the stage for Lindstrom's homer.

The Cubs made it two straight over the Robins at Brooklyn when they drove Jim Elliott and Koupal out of the box under a seven-run barrage in the third to win finally by 8 to 5. Hartnett started the assault in the third with a home run, while Beck collected four hits in four trips to the plate.

Eight pitchers were used, five by Brooklyn. Nehf wavered in the fifth and gave way to Bush, who in turn departed in favor of Percy Lee Jones. Nehf was the winning pitcher.

Bissonette, the Brooklyn slugger, had a great day at bat, with two triples, two singles and pass in five trips to the plate.

Sherdel held Boston to five hits and registered his fourteenth victory in 19 starts. The score was 5 to 1. The Cardinal batters hit hard and opportunely and gave Sherdel tight support. Barnes, pitching for Boston, left the game after five innings in a state of semi-collapse because of the extreme heat.

Pittsburgh had another easy afternoon with the Phillies yesterday, banging the tailenders around by a score of 14 to 6. Pie Traynor led the assault on three Phillie pitchers with three singles and two doubles that figured in the scoring of six runs. John Schulte of the losers, and Fred Brickell, Pirate outfielder, each hit a home run.

IN POLICE COURT

Elmer Liddell was found guilty yesterday afternoon of driving a car while intoxicated and was given one month in the common jail. it being his second offence.

Liddell's car and a light car from Toronto collided last Saturday night on Armour road, with the result that one of the strangers was cut about the face. Teh police investigated the accident, and placed Liddell under arrest. On Monday morning he pleaded not guilty, and was remanded until yesterday for trial. J. A. O'Brien conducted his case.

The defence claimed that Liddell was not intoxicated while driving the car, but after the accident and before the police arrived he had gone into his home on Armour road and taken a drink of liquor and a bottle of beer.

Earl McKisup pleaded guilty to reckless driving and was fined $25.00 and costs.

John Broomhead pleaded guilty to a charge of vagrancy and was given three days in the common jail.

Leonard Minicola pleaded not guilty to stealing a mirror and an accelerator feed, the property of Hood and Cummings and was remanded until Friday. Five hundred dollars bail was furnished.

Two girls from Toronto, both married, were arrested last night with two men and charged with vagrancy. They pleaded guilty and were ordered to leave the city.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

"In Honor Bound"

Estelle Taylor, who in real life is Mrs. Jack Dempsey, is the main feminine actress in "Honor Bound." She can hardly be called the heroine, as she does a very unlikeable part in the role of Evlyn Mortimer, wife of the owner of the Alamosa Mine around which the action is laid.

George O'Brien is the hero, who has an affair with Evelyn when she is married the first time, and whose husband is killed by an accidental charge from his own gun, when the latter follows his wife to John Ogletree's apartment. Then Ogletree is blamed for the killing and sent to the penitentiary. He is transferred later to the coal mines at Mrs Mortimer's request and ther is made her chauffeur. Arousing the jealousy of her husband and refusing to play up to her demands, he is disciplined by the warden. His half-crazy pal old Gideon, sets the prison on fire and then Mortimer locks Ogletree within the blazing building.

Later, a very dramatic ending is given thep icture when Ogletree returns

The picture has an unusual setting in the coal mine and the convict labour which works it, while Eestelle Taylor makes a very wonderful type of vampish lady.

There is a funny comedy and some very interesting short reels that include colored pictures of mountain climbing.

This is the final program of the Capitol Theatre, which is being closed until September 3rd for renovations and re-decoration

ROADS MINISTERS HEAD ASSOCIATION

Lieutenant-Governor of Saskatchewan Invited To Open Regina Convention.

MONTREAL, Aug. 4.—Hon. Henry W. Newland, Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Saskatchewan, has been invited to deliver the address of welcome at the opening session of the fifteenth annual convention of the Canadian Good Roads Association, to be held at the Hotel Saskatchewan, Regina, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, September 25, 26 and 27, next. In making this announcement here yesterday, coupled with the further statement that invitations to attend the convention and address the opening session had been sent to all the Provincial Premiers. George A. McNamee, secretary-treasurer of the association, said that these invitations were by no means the formal courtesies usually extended to distinguished Canadian citizens with little expectation that they would be accepted, as was evidenced by the fact that several of the conventions of past years had been honored with the presence at one time of no less than five of the Prime Ministers of the nine Provinces.

Representation of a majority of the Provinces by their respective Ministers of Highways is assumed as a matter of course, as all but two are office-holders or directors of the association. Hon. P. C. Black, Minister of Highways for Nova Scotia, is president; Hon. G. S. Henry, Minister of Highways for Ontario, is honorary president, and the honorary past presidents are Hon. J. L. Perron, Minister of Highways for Quebec; Hon. P. J. Veniot, Postmaster-General of Canada and ex-Premier of New Brunswick, and Hon. W. R. Clubb, Minister of Highways for Manitoba. Hon. O. L. McPherson, Minister of Highways for Alberta, is first vice-president, and Hon. W. H. Sutherland, ex-Minister of Highways for British Columbia, is second vice-president. Hon. John Oliver, the late Premier of British Columbia, was first vice-president of the association at the time of his death in 1927, and would have been elevated to the presidency at the Niagara Falls convention in September last had not death intervened. Hon. D. A. Stewart, Minister of Highways for New Brunswick, is one of the fifteen directors, and included among the others are deputy ministers of highways and chief highway engineers, municipal officials, officers of motor organizations and provincial good roads bodies, and high officials of the two great Canadian railway systems. The thoroughly representative and Dominion-wide character of the association evidenced by its roll of officers and directors is futher emphasized by the fact that with this year's gathering in Regina every Province in Canada, with the exception of Prince Edward Island, will have been the scene of an annual convention of the association.

That the Canadian Good Roads Association from its inception has adhered scrupulously to its original policy of being non-partizan and of serving only the public interest as concerned with highway problems is best proven by the fact that the Provincial Cabinet Ministers named as officers, and their predecessors, have worked in the fullest harmony to promote the success of the association's activities, regardless of their political allegiance to Liberal, Conservative or Progressive parties The annual conventions serve as a clearing house for theory, practice and experience in highway engineering and financing, traffic regulation, motor taxation and other phases of the making and use of roads. Experts and laymen in lectures and discussions bring out the various aspects of common or sectional problems, and those upon which final judgment cannot be passed, or regarding which further information is desirable, are referred to committees which continue to function throughout the year and report their findings at the next convention. The result is that each participant in the business-like sessions of the convention carries away a fund of technical and practical knowledge of which the public at large gets the benefit in better road methods and more effective traffic legislation.

Copies of the tentative programme for the Regina convention and information regarding railway rates, hotel accommodation, etc., will be sent if a request is addressed to George A. McNamee, secretary-treasurer, C. G. R. A., New Birks Building, Montreal.

Charlemagne Wins Montcalm Purse

MONTREAL, Que, Aug. 4. — (Canadian Press)—Charlemagne, three-year-old son of Gay Crusader—Princess Stirling, and carrying the well known silks of Walter J. Salmon, of New York, today won the Montcalm Purse, the feature event of the second day of the Montreal Jockey Club's summer meeting at Blue Bonnets. The winner was an outsider in the wagering and paid $55.00 for very two dollar winning ticket.

The event was the fifth on the program and was over a distance of a mile. Six horses accepted the issue with Mint Grass from the C. L. Whiting stable being the public choice. Promoter went to the top right after the break but was soon displaced by Mint Grass with the winner running third. The Salmon Colorbearer took command at the three-quarters and drew out into a commanding lead but had to be put to punishment to stall off Mint Grass, who came on again to cop second place. The Freshman secured the third portion of the purse.

SWIM PROFITS GREATLY FROM PAST EXPERIENCE

Arrangements For 1928 Marathon To Be Based On Experience of Last Year.

RECORD CROWD EXPECTED.

Hundreds of Spectators Will See Practically Whole of the Grind.

TORONTO, August 4.—(Canadian Press).—More than a quarter of a million people are expected to attend each of the Wrigley marathon swims at the Canadian National Exhibition on August 29 and September 5. Exhibition officials, preparing for the races which will decide the world's professional swimming championship, are making arrangements for a crowd of 500,000 on the two days.

In 1927, the paid attendance to the Exhibition on the day of the swim was 220,000. This year the mass of people viewing the marathons is expected to be even larger. Changes in the rules governing the contests have been introduced with the comfort of the crowds in mind. Last year the course stretched two miles out in the lake which make the competitors invisible to the watchers on shore after they had passed out beyond the sea wall.

The distance has been shortened for this year's races to 10 miles for the first event, in which only women will compete,and 15 miles for the title event in which all men and the five best women will be entered. While the exact course has not been finally laid out it will be much smaller than the seven mile triangle of past year with the result that the swimmers wil be almost constantly in view from the mile and a half sea wall and sloping lawns behind. which provide a natural grandstand for thousands upon thousands of spectators.

Every swimmer in the race will be accompanied by a boat placarded with the entrant's number in figures two or three feet high. These can easily be read from shore and the competitor's identity known at once.

In addition, a battery of loud speakers in the park, will be used to give a running account of the race as it progresses and these can be heard clearly for almost a quarter of a mile. This feature, it is understood, will be handled as it was last year when an announcer on the press boat broadcast the story of the swim through a short-wave transmitting set. This was picked up by a receiver on shore and sent out through the loud speakers and a number of radio stations.

Between 600 and 1,000 officials will be required to handle the races including policemen, medical attendants and those in direct charge. At every turn in the course a crew of scorers will be stationed to mark the time of each swimmer as he passes. With each entrant is an official observer who has power to disqualify his competitor for any infraction of the rules. In the boat, too, is an oarsman and the swimmer's manager or coach. Observers will not be assigned to their boats until a few minutes before the races start and will be changed two or three times during the day, each one fyling a written report as he comes ashore.

A few days before the races, all athletes will be examined by a squad of doctors and each competitor must present his medical certificate before he will be allowed to take his position at the starting point.

As in 1927 the swimmers will start from a line of barges anchored between the shore and the sea wall and then race the full length of Exhibition Park in direct view of the thousands in the crowds.

Last year. 299 entrants took to the water. Some, however, were more optimistic than able and two of them shouted for help before 500 yards of the 21-mile grind had been competed. It will be the endeavor of the Exhibition officials to eliminate this type of entrant as far as is compatible with fairness. A large Canadian entry list is sought but the main idea will be to cut the total number and make the battle as close as possible.

Already upwards of 200 swimmers are on the entry lists, which closes on August 18. They represent 22 nationalities. There is, this year, an unusually heavy representation from Quebec and Northern Ontario as well as Australia.

A purse of $15,000 is to be distributed to competitors in the women's race, $10,000 going to the winner and the remainder being split between the next four to finish the 10-mile stretch.

These five women prize winners, along with the men, start a week later in the 15-mile grind. Here the first place award is $25,000 with $10,000 being divided between the five finishing behind the leader.

PADDLERS HOLD ANNUAL MEET

WAR CANOE RACE LAST.

LACHINE, Que., Aug. 4 (Canadian Press).—The cream of Eastern Canada's paddlers, representing racing canoe clubs in the districts of Toronto, Ottawa, Sudbury, and Montreal were gathered here to-day for the 26th annual regatta of the Canadian Canoe Association, which is being held on the championship course of the Lachine club.

Three final events and the preliminary heats of war canoe races were held this morning, with all the other finals being scheduled for this afternoon. The mile war canoe race, the feature event of the program, will conclude the afternoon sport. The morning finals included the Junior Singles, the Junior Tandem, and the Intermediate Singles.

Canada began the twentieth century with the same number as the U.S. began the nineteenth.

ANOTHER FINN BEATS NURMI

Toivo Loukola Wins 3000 Metre Steeplechase Finals.

RITOLA QUITS.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 4 (Canadian Press).—Finland added another to its list of Olympic running victories today, when Toivo Loukola won the 3,000 metre steeplechase championship with Paavo Nurmi second. Willie Ritola quit.

It was the second beating in two days for Nurmi, who previously had not been defeated in an Olympic final since 1920. Yesterday Ritola beat him for the 5,000 metre championship.

FACES MURDER CHARGE.

Philadelphia Man Accused of Slaying Girl For Whom He Left His Wife.

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Aug. 4 (Canadin Press).—Russell St. Clair Beetzel, one time man of affairs in Philadelphia, was held by police to-day, charged with the murder of Barbara Mauger, 19-year-old Philadelphia girl, whose body was found yesterday in a remote spot in the hills above Hollywood. She had been dead more than a month and the body was torn by wild animals, but physicians ascertained that she was about to become a mother and that she had been shot through the head.

It was possible, they said, that the bullet had not killed her instantly and that she had lived three days after being shot. Beitzel has a wife and two children in Philadelphia, from where he came to Hollywood with Miss Mauger.

The Aviator

Absolute dependability is aviation's first law and that is why I use dependable Champion Spark Plugs.

Champion is the better spark plug because it has an exclusive silli-manite insulator specially treated to withstand the much higher temperatures of the modern high-compression engine. Also a new patented solid copper gasket-seal that remains absolutely gas-tight under high compression. Special analysis electrodes which assure a fixed spark-gap under all driving conditions.

NEW UTILITY TRUCK
—another Sensational Chevrolet Value
4 Speeds Forward • 4 Wheel Brakes

NOW Chevrolet presents the New Utility Truck—a low-priced haulage unit embodying every feature of advanced engineering developed through years of experience in commercial car-building and proved by exhaustive testing on the General Motors proving ground! Typical of the progressive design embodied in this sensational new truck are a four-speed forward transmission, powerful non-locking four-wheel brakes, full ball-bearing steering mechanism, front shock absorber springs, air-bound seat cushions and channel front bumper. In addition, it offers all those basic features which have been so largely instrumental in Chevrolet's tremendous success as the world's largest builder of trucks—rugged rear axle with one-piece banjo-type housing . . semi-elliptic springs set parallel to the load . . completely enclosed valve-in-head motor with air cleaner, oil filter and positive action vane type oil pump . . thermostatic control of water circulation . . low loading height . . generous road clearance and countless other features of comparable importance.

Visit your Chevrolet dealer and get a trial-load demonstration of this remarkable new truck! It has been developed to meet the modern conditions of business transportation and body types are available for every type of business.

FINANCIAL NEWS

Ticker Talk
By H.O.
(Unofficial Opinions on the Markets

MONTREAL, Aug. 4.—Who can guess the market aright to-day and what will be the money-maker? The competition is open.

My guess, based, I will admit, on information coming to me from privileged sources, is that Lyall, which was the victim of a disaster impossible to foresee, will be the stock which will show the largest gains at the end of the day.

Lyall suffered severely yesterday because of frightened selling caused by reports of the Welland Canal disaster, many people imagining that this regrettable event would bring big financial losses on the company.

From a source I can depend on I am told that the actual material loss will be $30,000, which will not worry Lyall at all, especially as there is a likelihood of it being absorbed by the Government. The loss of life is what worries the company, but there also the financial loss is covered by the Workingmen's Compensation Act.

It was calculated for me by a market expert that instead of reacting 12 points yesterday, Lyall ought to have eased a quarter of a point on the news, if financial loss was the criterion.

While there are likely to be heavy offerings as a result of margin calls this morning these will in all likelihood be absorbed by an inside group which knows the value of the stock, and which, I understand, has placed large buying orders which will prevent further reaction, and will probably result in a recovery sharp enough to encourage buying for a further advance.

The remainder of the market was quite apparently suffering from the money stringency even Brazilian sinking to 52, a low on the movement.

Noranda continues to be a sterling performer and is causing more gratification to its holders every day. Many people who thought it would slip under $50 were badly fooled as they watched the stock rise again to $59.

West Dome Lake is running into encouraging ore on the 1,250 foot level, and one piece over 18 feet wide recently encountered was dazzling, to say the least.

Maritime Provinces.—Cutting of an excellent hay crop is well advanced. Potato plants look exceptionally promising. An apple crop of excellent quality is sizing well, but it is expected the yield will be somewhat less than last year, and the smallest for the last ten years. Pasturage is very good.

Mining Briefs
A Special Service to The Examiner

TORONTO, Aug. 3—A report from Rouyn this morning was to the effect that Amulet, in diamond drilling on their north showing about one mile to the north of the shaft, and at a depth of about 90 feet, cut into six feet of high grade ore. This is said to be a new find and indicative of another separate ore body. The report continues that other holes in the same area showed plenty of ore evidence and that the find is considered as of real importance to Amulet. It was also stated that the drill was still in ore.

Sinking of a new shaft on the Cline Mines property is now underway, it is reported. The new working, which is going to a depth of 500 feet, is now said to be down to the first level at 100 feet, where station cutting is now underway. In addition to this shaft there are two others on the property. On of these is down 160 feet and the other 215 feet. A new vein is said to have been located recently on the eastern portion of the property, which, it is claimed, shows low gold values over a width of 30 feet. Diamond drilling of this and other surface fractures has been arranged for in addition to other surface work. The company is privately financed by New York interests

The shaft at Tashota Gold Mines, according to a report received today, is being continued to a depth of 200 feet where the main working level will be established. Crosscutting on the 100-foot level has encountered a pay-streak, the report continues, which according to the Managing director, R. W. Norrington, showed between 5 and 6 feet of $20 ore The crosscut at 100 feet was reported in ore at the end of June. It is anticipated that the shaft will be down to 200 feet and both south and north breaks will be under development by September 15th.

The Financial News Bureau is informed that operations have been temporarily suspended at the Blue Quartz Gold Mines in the Painkiller Lake section. It is understood that financing of further development has been satisfactorarily arranged in the old country and a fresh start is to be made soon.

The shaft at the Pandora Gold Limited is now down 75 feet. It is reported that for the first 50 feet, where the vein dipped out of the shaft, the width of the vein varied between one and four feet. At 58 feet, it is claimed that another vein came into the workings from the north. When the shaft is completed south to cut two veins which show south to cut two veins which slow on the surface, will be started. It is stated that $23,000 has been spent on the property to date, $22,000 remains in the treasury, while half-a-million shares of stock have been underwritten to net the company $162,000.

It is reported that the Greene-Stabell Mines are crosscutting on the 450 and 600-foot levels with two machines which are running two shafts a day. The work is being done towards a vein which has been opened on surface for a distance of 1,000; feet where it dips into low ground. At 300 feet, some 400 feet of drifting was done on the vein and it was found to have an average width of 8 feet with values about the same as on the surface. Operations are now being carried on on a satisfactory basis E. W. Todd, former government geologist, is to make a report on the property shortly.

Uneasiness Over Credit Fails To Hold Trading

NEW YORK, Aug. 4 (Canadian Press).—The major speculative activity in to-day's brief session of the stock market was again on the up side. Gains of one to four points were spread over a wide list, with Independent Motors, Chemical, Food, and Mercantile shares giving the best demonstrations of group strength.

Uneasiness over the credit situation was reflected in the reduced volume of trading, although the market did not appear to be disturbed by the new clearing house regulations intended to curtail the volume of loans on security collateral. Reports of further improvement in the steel industry and an increase in bank clearings, together with expectations of new motor car production records and increased sales in the last half, helped to maintain bullish enthusiasm.

Chrysler again was the leader in the motor group, rising more than three points to 86½ on top of a six-point gain yesterday. Pierce Arrow Preferred advanced four points. Timken Roller Bearing, Packard and American Bosch Magneto climbed two to three points.

Good demand also was noticed for Coty, National Distillers, Union Carbide, Mathieson Alkali, Kroger Stores and Montgomery Ward.

Wheat and Corn Drop As Weather Improves

CHICAGO, Aug. 4 (Canadian Press).—Both in wheat and corn today, new low price records for the season supplanted others which had been established hardly twenty-four hours previous. Extra auspicious weather in the spring wheat territory and also in the corn belt was the main bearish factor. Opening ½ to one cent off, wheat recovered somewhat but then weakened again. Corn started 1-8 to 11-8 cent down, and later underwent a material further sag. Oats held relatively firm. Provisions were easy.

Opening prices were: Wheat, September, 116 7-8; December, 121 5-8. Corn, September 96½; December, 76. Oats, September 38¾; December, 42.

Trade Report.

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 4.—(Canadian Press.)—The weekly trade report of the Canadian Credit Men's Trust Association Limited for week ending August 4th, 1928, is as follows:

Halifax—Wholesale and retail trade reports indicate an increasing volume. Recent weather conditions have been exceptionally good. Coal mines, woolen mills, biscuit and candy factories are fully employed. Building is brisk. Haying has commenced and a good crop is expected.

St. John—A normal condition is reported by the wholesale trade. Retail trade satisfactory. Collections good.

Montreal—A normal volume is reported by wholesale grocers; dry goods show slight improvement. Boots and shoes maintain fair volume. Clothing very fair. Hardware is in good demand. Retail trade generally reports a busy week. Collections rather slow.

Toronto—Wholesalers report trade satisfactory. Retail trade good. Collections satisfactory.

Winnipeg—The volume of business transacted by wholesalers generally continues very satisfactory. Retail trade brisk. Collections slow. Building and construction work very brisk and permits issued to date are far in excess of last year and a very optimistic feeling is prevalent throughout.

Regina—A good volume is reported by dealers in wholesale groceries; boots and shoes and hardware; dry goods very good; retail trade fair to good. Collections rather slow. A record number of visitors attended the Provincial Fair. Attendance records have been broken for all previous years. Hotels have been hard pressed to accommodate the guests. Retailers and caterers report increased business from this source.

Saskatoon— Wholesalers generally report business very satisfactory. Retail trade improving considerably. Collections rather slow.

Calgary—Wholesale and manufacturing lines extremely busy. Retail satisfactory with country merchants buying heavier than usual in anticipation of record fall and winter business.

Building supply trades going at full capacity. Activity in local oil field going full steam ahead, where production continues to show steady increase. Real estate prices appear to be gradually stiffening. Particularly for house property which seems to be in fair demand. Collections from country merchants slowing up as a result of great extension of credit to farmers.

Edmonton—Wholesalers report considerable increase in fall placing orders over last year. Retail trade satisfactory. Collections fair. The favorable harvesting conditions a record crop is anticipated.

Vancouver — Manufacturing continues fairly good. Wholesale hardware and groceries good. All other lines just fair. Collections fair. The construction and building are progressing very favorably as well as lumbering and mining. So far to date tourist traffic has been about the same as last year, but it is anticipated this will pick up with buyers' week and the Fair.

Exchanges Closed
TORONTO, Aug. 4 (Canadian Press).—The Toronto Stock Exchange and the Standard Mining Exchange were closed to-day and will re-open on Tuesday, August 7, Monday being Civic Holiday.

FRESH RESULTS AT SHERRITT-GORDON.

Lateral work from the east shaft on the Sherritt-Gordon is ino ore and the Northern Miner says results are quite equal to official expectations. The plan followed is to drive along the footwall of the ore body in both directions, then crosscut at 100 foot intervals across the body. Crosscutting a both levels on the east shaft was still in ore at last word from the mine, so apparently it has very good width. At the west shaft several hundred feet of crosscutting is still to be done before the ore zone is reached.

Favorable developments at the west end of the property on the older claims, and also on the new claims recently acquired, is proving the necessity of another shaft. This is still some distance away, and no definite thought has been given to it.

Sherritt-Gordon's plans are concentrated on one aim, and that is the deevlopment of "tonnage in sight." Undoubtedly the fact that C.N.R. officials within three or four months must consider the idea of extending a railway line to the property is one motivating factor behind the ore development program.

START WORK AT RAND-ORE MINES.

Thirty men are to start active development on the Rand-Ore Mines, Ltd holdings at Narrow Lake, which comprise approximately 30 acres adjoining the Dunkin on the east. Mr. William Mortridge, Mr. W. Williams, mining engineer, together with one of the directors of the Rand-Ore Mines Ltd., have visited the property.

A program of work was laid out for the erection of suitable camp buildings and further to explore what is conceded to be the extension of the Dunkin vein, and also prepare for either shaft-sinking or diamond drilling. The work done on Rand-Ore Mines Ltd. last year revealed several well-defined veins carrying commercial values.

C. V. Gallagher, Ontario and surveyor, is surveying the mine claims owned by the Rand-Ore Mines Ltd., which lie three-quarters of a mile west of the Jackson-Manion Mines Ltd., and work will be started on these properties within a short time.

DEPARTMENT OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS, CANADA.
TRENT CANAL.
Concrete Dam at Lock 25.
Notice to Contractors.

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned and marked "Tender for Concrete Dam at Lock 25, Trent Canal," will be received at this office until 12 o'clock Noon (standard time), Tuesday, August 28, 1928.

Plans, specifications, and form of contract to be entered into can be seen on or after the date of this notice at the office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the office of the Superintending Engineer, Trent Canal, Peterborough, Ont.

Copies of plans and specifications may be obtained from the Department on the payment of the sum of twenty-five dollars. To bona fide tenderers this amount will be refunded upon the return of the above in good condition.

An accepted bank cheque, on a chartered bank of Canada, for the sum of $5,000.00, made payable to the order of the Department of Railways and Canals, must accompany each tender. Bonds of the Dominion of Canada, or Canadian National Railway Bonds, guaranteed by the Dominion of Canada, may be used in lieu of or in conjunction with such accepted cheque. In any case, the sum so deposited will be forfeited, if the party tendering declines to enter into contract for the work at the rates stated in the offer submitted.

The cheque or bonds or cheques and bonds thus sent in will be returned to the respective Contractors whose tenders are not accepted.

The cheque or bonds, or the cheque and bonds, of the successful tenderer will be held as security or part security for the fulfilment of the contract into which he enters.

The lowest, or any tender, not necessarily accepted.

By order,
J. W. PUGSLEY,
Secretary.

Bees Attack Team Chasing Men Away

LUCKNOW, Aug. 4.—Thomas Congram, East Wawanosh farmer, and his son, Wilfred had an exciting time when a swarm of bees attacked a team of horses attached to a load of hay. The two men at once unhitched the horses, thinking they might get away before any damage was done, but in vain. They became frantic with the sting of the angry bees and in a short time became insensible, their bodies being literally covered with the swarming bees.

Mr. Congram and his son were forced to flee from the scene and protect themselves in a pond close by.

Veterinary surgeons were summoned from Blyth and Belgrave, who did everything to ease the suffering of the dumb animals, which are in a pitiful condition, their bodies being badly swollen.

As if enough trouble had not fallen already, the Congram house was struck by lightning during an electric storm that swept these parts of Ontario on Thursday night. The bolt hit one of the chimneys, smashing it to pieces, but fortunately did not set fire to the building.

EXPERT HERE

F. H. Seeley, of Chicago and Philadelphia, nationally famous expert, will himself personally be at the Empress Hotel and will remain in Peterborough this Monday only, August 6th, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mr. Seeley says:

"The Spermatic Shield will not only retain any case of rupture perfectly, but contracts the opening in 10 days on the average case. Being a vast advancement over all former methods—exemplifying instantaneous effects immediately appreciable and withstanding any strain or position no matter the size or location. Large or difficult cases, or incisional ruptures (following operations) specially solicited. This instrument received the only award in England and in Spain, producing results without surgery, injections, medical treatments or prescriptions, with distinguished personal patrons of all nations." "His method has always been most satisfactory."—Late Dr. Edward Shippen, former Medical Director, U.S. Navy.

"This instrument is the same as supplied to Surg. Genls. Bureau, U.S. Naval Hospital.—Penn. R.R., Etc., Etc.

He will be glad to demonstrate without charge or fit them if desired. Business demands prevents stopping at any other place in this section.

N.B.—Every statement in this notice has been verified before the Federal State Courts.—F. H. SEELEY.

CAUTION—All cases should be cautioned against the use of any elastic or web truss with understraps, as same rest where the lump is and not where the opening is, often resulting in strangulation. Home Office, 117 N. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. 3d-30-988

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

BELL BUSINESS HAS INCREASED

More Than 300 New 'Phones Every Year For Five Years.

GAIN IS GENERAL.

The last five years has seen a large growth in the telephones of Peterborough, according to W. C. Beamer, manager for the Bell Telephone Company in Peterborough. In 1923 Peterborough had only 3,417 telephones and to-day it has 5,417 phones, which is an increase of 1,706 telephones or 300 a year.

According to the latest reports there were 29,378,430 telephones in the world. Of these 8,080,642, or 27 per cent were in Europe and 17,746,168 or 60 per cent. were in the United States, and the remaining 13 per cent in other countries. There is a total increase of 1,594,467 over last year.

In Canada the average of 12.6 telephones per 100 population is an increase over 1926 and is second only to the United States, whose ratio was 15.3. New Zealand up to March 31, 1927, had 9.5, followed by Denmark with 9.2, then Sweden 7.4, Australia with 6.7, Hawaii 6.5, and Norway 6.3, while Germany only has .09 a hundred, and Great Britain and North Ireland only .07.

In 1928 telephones in Ontario and Quebec will reach the 700,000 mark. The growth over the 48 years of the service which has reached Peterborough and grown over the rate of 300 telephones a year in the city is interesting.

After the telephone was invented in 1880 it was 26 years, or 1906, before the 100,000 mark was reached. The next 100,000 was reached in the next seven years, to 1918, the next in three years, to 1921, another 100,000 in three years, to 1924. Then the growth takes another jump, the increase from 500,000 to 600,000 was achieved in 2 years, 1924-26, and then to 700,000 in less than two years.

Independent telephone companies not associated with the Bell Company but which connect with the Bell for service have increased in Ontario from 54,942 to 134,000 in Ontario and Quebec.

VACATION SCHOOL HELD AT NORWOOD

Successful Course of Religious Instruction Given Children.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in Norwood concluded July 27, a session of three weeks, five days per week, of religious instruction to young folks between the ages of four and fourteen. The attendance on the opening day was 19, and this gradually increased until the closing day, when the attendance was 32.

A prominent feature of the School was the memorization by the young people of Scripture passages and an English translation of the earliest known Christian hymns, written by Clement of Alexandria (c200 A.D.).

The three teachers of the school were Misses J. Clydesdale, T. Robson and L. McCalpin, who are skilled in both secular and religious education work, and who also have the additional advantage of insight into the fact that religious education requires not only educational skill but also spiritual equipment and discipline. Miss Lottie Slater acted as pianist, and Miss Lottie Rogers was registrar. The minister of the Church, the Rev. H. S. Philpott, B.D., who has had a special post-graduate course in religious education, acted as principal. The authorities of the Church are very pleased with both the attendance and the work done, and intend to repeat the work next summer with an enlarged program.

BABE VINCENT AGAIN PLAYS

Peterborough Girl To Play in Belleville on the Holiday.

ADDED ATTRACTION.

"Babe" Vincent, Peterborough girl of softball fame, is slated to pitch the Beavers of Belleville to victory over the Chevrolet ladies of Oshawa, in Belleville on the holiday. The teams have already played in Belleville this season and are out for sweet revenge. The Daily Intelligencer of Belleville states: "As an added attraction "Babe" Vincent of Peterborough will pitch one of the games for the Beavers in an effort to stop the Oshawa crew."

The Beavers of Belleville are one of the snappiest dressed teams, and one of the most popular in the province, and have always drawn favorable comment on each appearance.

DISPLAY FLAGS FOR WELCOME

John Comstock Desires Flags To Be Displayed in the City.

Vice-President John Comstock of the Ontario Funeral Service Association, which holds its annual convention in the armouries here next week, through The Examiner, requested the merchants to put their flags out as a sign of welcome to the visiting delegates on the first day of the convention, Tuesday, August 7th.

Present indications are that the gathering of undertakers and funeral directors will be one of the largest in the history of the association, and already many manufacturers of funeral and undertaking equipment have brought their special displays to the armouries to be on exhibition during the convention.

OBITUARY

SAMUEL H. BEST.

The late Samuel Henry Best, whose death was announced in yesterday's paper, was born in the Township of Emily on September 18, 1841, and lived there until 1883, when he came to Peterborough, where he has since resided.

Although of advanced age, he had the use of all his faculties, and enjoyed good health until last March, when he suffered a stroke. Early in July he was able to go to his summer cottage at Stoney Lake, a place very dear to him, and where he has spent a part of each summer for the past forty years.

He was quiet and unassuming in his manner, and led a most consistent and exemplary life. From the time he came to Peterborough he was a faithful and devoted member of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church until the time of the Union, when he transferred his membership to St. Andrew's United Church.

He leaves to mourn his loss his wife and three daughters: Miss Louise and Miss Ethel, and Mrs. (Prof.) John R. Watts of Kingston, and one grandson, George S. Watts.

Interment takes place from his late residence, 469 Stewart Street, on Sunday, August 5th, at 2.30 p.m., to the Mount Pleasant Presbyterian Cemetery.

MACDONALD SAYS LABOR WILL RULE

cause I don't believe in them."

"Would you, Mr. MacDonald, abolish the House of Lords if you were Premier again?"

"Not because of any logical deduction from certain principles. Again I say that we are practical men. But if the Lords attempt to come to life again, I would abolish the Chamber, make no mistake about that. A second chamber can function profitably, but only with limited powers. Such powers must in no sense be equal constitutionally to these of the Commons. The members of a second chamber should carry on by right of their own intrinsic ability."

"But what assurance, Mr. MacDonald, can there be of ability, so long as hereditary right prevails?"

"None, absolutely none. Hereditary legislators are a joke. Yet I would not make the Chamber elective. I would grant a certain number of life peerages but I would be careful of my men."

"In what way, Mr. MacDonald?"

And then came something of astounding intelligence from the ex-Premier's lips.

"This way," he began. "Just the other day the London Times, in an editorial, was discussing a possible peerage for the retiring Archbishop of Canterbury, and the Times said that in a very acute way, Ramsay MacDonald had appointed peers, selecting men who either were not married or who had no male issue. And the Times was right. I added nothing to the hereditary peerage; my men were all bachelors, or childless, or the fathers only of girls."

Many Welcome Him.

When Mr. MacDonald landed from the Empress of France earlier in the day the ship was besieged with admirers and welcomers, great and small. The Lieut.-Governor and the Prime Minister were present as were two or three representatives of labor organizations. Liberal leaders, too, joined in the welcome to the tired but genial traveller.

"I am so tired," said Mr. Macdonald, who, I should say, looked far from robust. "I am suffering rheumatism in both my arms and I dread the publicity that evidently awaits me."

The foremost of Mr. MacDonald's greetings was undoubtedly Senator Dandurand. 'I wish to speak with you," I overheard him say to the ex-Premier, 'about matters of immigration. The general feeling here, and uppermost, is one of fear lest the old country shall send us the kind of unemployed people who are"— and before he could get any further, Mr. MacDonald broke in with 'who are likely to remain unemployed."

Mr. MacDonald and his three daughters, shy, rosy-cheeked, wistfully curious, proud of their distinguised father, were immediately whisked off in a motor car to St. Anne de Beaupre. To-day comes dinner with the Canadian Club. Sunday for all of Ramsay MacDonald's strict Scotch upbringing, is to be devoted to a trip to Montreal in a special car accompanied by Senator Dandurand and other notables.

RAILWAY CAN'T PAY WORKMEN

London Street Car System Defers Pay Day Until Tuesday.

SHORT OF FUNDS.

LONDON Ont., August 4. Special. —The London street railway company deferred their regular payment of wages from to-day until Tuesday, because of shortage of funds.

The reason given out by Manager Leonard Tait was that revenues had materially shrunk and that there were not sufficient funds on hand to meet the pay sheet. He stated that the employees would be paid in full on Tuesday without fail

This is the first occurrence of this kind for several years The general manager refused this morning to make public the figures of the falling revenues He would not give out either the deficit or an estimate of the percentage of decrease.

The railway employees are paid twice a month and the present pay falls due on Sunday, August 5.

Whenever the date falls on a Sunday it has been the practice to pay on the preceding Friday. Notices were posted in the barns saying that the pay would this time be deferred until Tuesday because of shortage of funds.

The official attitude of the street railway men's union has not been expressed.

The semi-monthly pay sheet
The semi-monthly pay sheet amounts to about $10,000

Funeral Directors Open Convention

Association Meets At Armouries Here In Annual Session

Fine Exhibits of Funeral Supplies, Vehicles, Furniture, Etc., Occupy Drill Hall and Attract Much Favorable Comment.

DELEGATES FROM ALL OVER ONTARIO MEET HERE UNDER PRESIDENT MUNDELL

Full Program of Discussion and Entertainment Arranged — John Comstock of Peterborough First Vice-President, Opens Exhibit.

With the Armouries housing what seems virtually to be one grand display of all that is modern and interesting to the progressive funeral director or undertaker, and with members and guests increasing in number as the hours went by, the annual convention of the Ontario Funeral Service Association opened to-day in that building. Colored streamers, cheerfully decorated booths, and a happy company of workers and delegates remove all touches of the gravity which one might expect to encounter at a convention of morticians.

There is every indication of a most satisfactory convention, with consequent benefits to those attending, and therefore conducive to an even better public service. "Our aim: The best service possible to the funeral purchasing public" is the quotation on the official directory and program, and there appears to be no possibility of that aim being lost sight of.

Three-Day Convention.

During to-day, Wednesday, and Thursday, the city will be honored with the presence of the convention delegates, who have scheduled morning, afternoon, and evening sessions for those days, in the scope of which every problem and advanced ideas will be advanced.

The officers responsible to a large degree for the encouraging start of the convention are:

President—J. A. Mundell, Orillia.

Firse Vice-President — John Comstock of Peterborough.

Second Vice-President — Harry Phillips, Sarnia.

Third Vice-President — Morley Bedford, Toronto.

Executive Secretary— R. A. Breckenridge, Owen Sound.

Treasurer—R. Milsom, Chatsworth.

Director—Preston Thompson, of Aurora.

Past Presidents were: W. A. Britton (1921-1922), A. A. Jackson (1922-1923), F. W. Matthews (1923-1924), N. J. Griffith (1924-1925), J. A. Robinson (1925-1926), George W. Morse (1926-1927).

President J. A. Mundell.

Following the registration of guests, President J. A. Mundell called the first session to order and in a brief address, expressed his pleasure at the splendid start made. The adoption of minutes of the 1927 convention required but little time, and hte first business of the agenda was encountered—the appointment of committees. The result was as follows:

Resolutions Committee

A. A. Jackson of Sudbury, chairman; G. R. Quirmbrach, Brockville; F. F. Morris, Bowmanville; N. A. Craig, Toronto; A. J. Janisse, Windsor.

Nominating Committee

Chairman: J. A. Robinson, Hamilton; F. W. Matthews, Toronto; N. Boyd, Mitchell; W. A. Britton, Listowel; George Logan, London.

Obituary Committee.

George Grobb, chairman, St. Catharines; J. S. Truscott, Hamilton, James O'Hagan, Toronto.

District Clubs.

W. J. Stewart, Toronto, Chairman, and all district chairmen and secretaries.

Round Table Conference.

At a convention such as this there is perhaps no better medum for the exchange of helpful ideas than a round table conference, and accordingly under the chairmanship of H.

ARGONAUTS WIN QUARTER FINAL

Defeat Polish Crew in Olympic Rowing—Three Nations Left.

FOUR IN SINGLES.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 7. — (Canadian Press.)—The Argonaut eight of Toronto defeated Poland by one length in the quarter finals of the Olympic rowing contest to-day, thereby qualifying for the semi-finals.

The Canadans' time was six minutes, 37 2-5 seconds, and Poland's 6.42 1-5. Poland led until the 1,000 metre point, which is half way, when the Argonauts evened it up. The Canadans then forged half a length ahead at 1,500 metres and finished strong.

Great Britain and the United States each won their quarter final in eighth, Britain defeating Germany and United States, Italy.

As a result of to-day's races only three eights remain in the running for the championship, Canada, Great Britain and the United States.

The four semi-finalists in the single sculls are, Mayers, United States, Bob Pearce, Australian, Collett, England, and Gunther, Holland.

Boxer Successful.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 7.—By W. H. Ingram, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent.)— Ray Smillie, Toronto, won from Fraberger, Austria, in the welterweight class, at the opening of the Olympic boxing tournament today.

Ault in Semi-Fianls.

Garnet Ault, of Ottawa, qualified for the semi-finals of the Olympic 400 metre free style swimming by defeating Heinrich, Germany, to-day. The semi-finals will take place on Thursday.

Walter Spence, Brooklyn, qaulified for the fianls of the men's 200 metre swimming race, finishing second to Sturuta, Japan. The latter was forced to set a new Olympic record of 2.49 to beat the Canadian.

The Canadian lacrosse team from New Westminster defeated the British team to-day by the score of nine to five. This result completes the scheduled series, and Canada, Britain and the United States, the only three entrants, have each lost a game and won one.

Canada lost to the United States 6 to 3, and Britain won from the United States 7 to 6, in the two previous matches.

Tacks Scattered on East City Road

Over two pounds of roofing tacks, any of which would have pierced the thickest automobile tire, were picked up on Driscoll Terrace this morning by city workmen. The tacks weer found scattered all over the street. It is not known how they came there it is thought that some building contractor while driving over in East City this morning lost the tacks from his truck.

OLD AGE PENSIONS DELAYED

LEGION OPENS CONVENTION IN KINGSTON HALL

Memorial Window to Heroes of Great War Let Light In On Meetings.

COMMITTEE NAMED.

Dignity of Union Jack Should Be Upheld, Declares One of Early Speakers.

KINGSTON, Ont., August 7 (Special to The Examiner). — One of the finest memorials in Canada to the soldiers who fell in the Great War is the chamber in which the Canadian Legion convention opened to-day. It is the Memorial Hall, vivid with recollections of the mighty struggle and picturesque with its historical pictures commemorating in illuminated glass the stirring battles fought and won by Britain and her overseas Dominions. Ex-Mayor Hugh C. Nickle, in dramatic language, recalled the history of the City Hall, and told the story of the twelve stained windows, gifts of citizens and corporations, and each one typifying some war event.

The City Buildings were built in 1843, and were the largest in Canada at that date. The corner-stone was laid by Sir Charles Theophilus Metcalfe, Governor-General of British North America. The building was undertaken by the Common Council of Kingston for the public accommodation and ornament of the city.

After "God Save the King" was sung, Principal R. Bruce Taylor made a sympathetic and appealing prayer, then General Gunn asked the local Legion president, Charles Hicks, to introduce those who were to speak welcoming words. These were Mayor W. H. Craig, Brig.-Gen. Ross, and Col. T. A. Kidd, M.P.P., a dozen other Kingstonians representing the military, the service clubs, the U.S. Consul, and the Ladies' Auxiliary heartily and happily welcomed the visiting comrades. At eleven o'clock General Gunn delivered his annual address.

Takes His Own Life Because Missed Boat

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 7 (Canadian Press).—Because he missed his boat to Europe and because a heart disease was worrying him, Busto Siobo, aged 46, hanged himself in the bathroom of his boarding house on St. Urbain street, and was found dead Saturday. Acting Coroner Hebert disposed of the case as suicide at the inquest yesterday.

Siobo was speaking to another roomer Saturday afternoon and said his heart was worrying him. He also spoke dejectedly of missing his boat home to Central Europe. An early riser found him hanging from a cloth rope attached to a nail on the door frame. The man's feet were on the floor and his knees were bent. Death was due to strangulation.

Lightning Melts Supports of Shade; Does no Damage to Wires in House

Lightning plays some queer pranks. Saturday's storm displayed one of its unusual tactics. All was peace and quietness in an East City home as is possible during a thunderstorm, when all of a sudden there was a terrific crash of thunder and a vivid flash of lightning, and a light shade fell to the floor.

The light shade was held in place by metal supports. The lightning in some queer fashion had entered the house and run up the metal supports of the fixture, and melted them, which caused the shade to fall. The lights in the lamp, which were burning, went out, and stayed out for a time, but were found to be all right. No one suffered any shock from the bolt.

NEW PRIMATE WILL BE CHOSEN BY BISHOPS ON SEPTEMBER 22

Will Succeed Archbishop of Rupert's Land, Who Resigned On Saturday.

DUE TO ILL HEALTH.

Three Prelates Eligible For Position, With Archbishop of Halifax Senior.

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 7 (Special to The Examiner).—The vacancy created by the announced resignation of Archbishop Matheson as Anglican Primate of all Canada will be filled by the House of Bishops at their meeting in Hamilton, September 22. Archbishop Worrell of Nova Scotia is the senior metropolitan, but the appointment of Primate is not always accorded by seniority, although there are but three prelates of the Church of England in Canada who are eligible for elections. These are Archbishop C. L. Worrell, Archbishop David Williams of Huron, and Archbishop DePencier of New Westminster.

While no member of the clergy can tell who will be the choice, it is the opinion of church leaders here it will be either the Archbishop of Nova Scotia or of Huron. Archbishop Matheson could not be seen to-day and none of the other church officials who called at Bishopscourt during the way would discuss the matter at length.

The resignation of the venerable primate is due to ill health and a desire to seek a little leisure. He will retain the Archbishopric of Rupert's Land. The resignation came almost concurrent with the death of an esteemed colleague and fellow pioneer of the Western church, Rev. Conway Edward Nobbs, who died in Winnipeg on Saturday night at the age of 82 years. He had labored with Archbishop Matheson in many of the now flourishing cities of the West when they were but frontier mission stations.

GIRL INJURED BY FIRE ESCAPE

Hazel Wilson Hit On Head While Leaving Regent Theatre.

CONDITION SERIOUS.

Hazel Wilson, of 279 Thomas street daughter of Lieutenant Robert Wilson, a former member of the Peterborough Fire Department had a narrow escape from death last night and to-day is lying in a semi-conscious condition as the result of being struck on the head by the fire escape at the Regent Theatre. Miss Wilson, with her sister, were leaving the theatre by the fire escape door on the west side after the show last night when it is supposed that some one came out on the fire escape above and the heavy ladder dropped, striking her on the head. Dr. J. M. O'Brien was called and administered medical aid to the girl, after which she was removed to her home. The full impact of the blow came upon the back of the skull. The fire escape is of regulation make but as the lane way must be kept open here can be no railing built around its landing. In the rush at night to get out of the theatre hundreds crowd out through the side entrance but is is very seldom that any one attempts to come down by way of the ladder from the balcony.

SURVEY BEGUN GOING SLOWLY IT IS STATED

Not Likely To Be Completed In Time For 1929 Session of Legislature.

INFORMATION LACKING.

Premier Will Return From Europe This Month and Further Action is Expected.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 7 (Special to The Examiner)—Old Age Pensions may be deferred in Ontario for another year. Indications are that the survey ordered by Premier Ferguson will not be complete for the next session of the Legislature, and so the bill may come up on the eve of the next election. Some months ago Premier Ferguson, who is now in Europe, expressed the hope that a bill would be introduced at the next session, but said the survey was imperative before the bill was introduced.

The Prime Minister stated that a survey would be made and the returns completed in the Fall. A bill could then be drafted and brought before the House. W. Ellis of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board, was put in charge of this work.

Questionnaires have been sent to the municipalities over the entire province, asking for date necessary for the formation of an old age pension bill.

It is understood that few districts have made their returns. Little progress is being made, it is said, in connection with the survey. Information regarding the number of persons eligible for help and a pension from the government is difficult to secure in some cases. Some returns have been made, but these are not in sufficient quantity to indicate any final total.

Premier Ferguson will arrive back in Toronto late this month and will likely devote considerable time in connection with this survey. The opinion is expressed, however, that the returns will not be received in time to be of use in the session next February. Mr. Ellis is away for three weeks' holidays, and no information is given out by his office. "That is the Premier's private matter and we have no information to divulge," they state.

THE WEATHER

For the information of those interested I give herewith the daily rainfall for the month of August so far. It will be noticed that the heavy rain of Saturday afternoon, lasting about half an hour, was almost the same total as that of Sunday, which continued with little intermission, throughout the day:

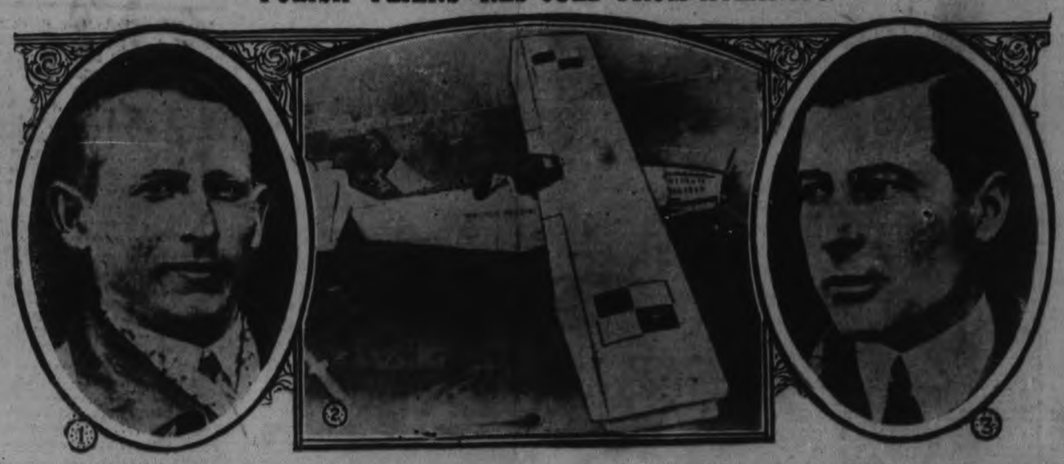
POLISH FLIERS RESCUED FROM ATLANTIC



LISBON, Portugal, Aug 7.—(Canadian Press).—Majors Idzikowski and Kubala, the Polish aviators, were rescued a hundred miles off the northern coast of Portugal Saturday afternoon by the German steamer Sames and landed yesterday morning at Leixoes, the outer port of Oporto, Portugal.

Engine trouble forced the biplane, Marshal Pilsudski to descend near the Samos whose crew effected the rescue of the aviators.

Later advices from Oporto said that both of the aviators were injured when their plane was forced to come down on the sea and that they had been conveyed to the military hospital at Oporto when they were landed from the Samos.

These dispatches also said that the plane had been towed to the port by the Samos although it had been greatly damaged by its forced descent.

Share Equal Honors With Men In Track And Field Section

CANADIAN MEN'S 400 METRE RELAY TEAM DISQUALIFIED

Cliff Bricker, of Galt, Ont., Leads His Native Countrymen in Tenth Place in Gruelling Marathon Which Was Won By a French Moroccan.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 7.—(By W. H. Ingram, Canadian Press staff correspondent)—Canadian girls take equal honors with the men from the Dominion in the track and field section of the Ninth Olympiad, which portion of the program concluded on Sunday after eight days of intense competition.

The girls' 400 metre relay team composed of four Toronto girls—Fanny Rosenfeld, Ethel Smith, Jane Bell and Captain Myrtle Cook—won the 400 metres relay final Sunday in new world's record time of 48 2-5 seconds, with United States second, Germany third, France fourth, Holland fifth, and Italy last.

Miss Ethel Catherwood, resident of Torono for the past year and before that a smiling citizen of Saskatoon, broke the world's record to win the woman's running high jump today with a leap of five feet three inches.

Thus the two world victories of Percy Williams of Vancouver, in the 100 and 200 metre sprints, are balanced by the female contingent's achievements.

Outstanding Triumph

The day was an outstanding triumph for Canadian girlhood, for the two events captured by the Dominion girls yesterday were the only finals of the day for women.

The men's 1,600 metre relay team—W. A. Wilson of Montreal, Phil Edwards of Hamilton, S. B. Clover of Edmonton, and James Ball of Winnipeg—ran a great race but finished third, just snatching this place from the threatening Swedish runners.

The men's 400 metre relay was unfortunate in being disqualified. It was composed of John Fitzpatrick of Hamilton, Ralph Adams of Hamilton, George Hostler of Hamilton and Percy Williams. Hester dropped the baton in handing it to Williams, which was sufficient to disqualify the team. Even if Williams had continued running, which he did not, in the last 100 metres, he would have had a hopeless task in trying to get on even terms with his flying competitors.

The third and last men's event, the gruelling marathon, was won by a French Moroccan, El Quafi, with the leading Canadian, Cliff Bricker of Galt, in tenth place.

So the glory of the last day of the track and field games, so far as Canada was concerned, went to the girls.

Ethel Catherwood, the "most photographed girl at the Olympic games," statuesque beauty, was jubilant after her feat. She was lifted to the shoulders of Canadians, athletes and spectators alike, and smilingly received the plaudits of the huge crowd. She waved her arms to the cheering watchers and smiled again as the Canadian flag soared to the top of the main Olympic pole in token of her victory. It was the second ascension of the day, the flag having been sent to the top by the relay team earlier.

Miss Catherwood's victory was received with possibly more enthusiasm than any other Canadian win except that of Percy Williams in the 100 metres last Monday, for she had placed no less than 17th in the qualifying events in the morning.

FLOWER SHOW AUGUST 16-17

Competition in Three Groups Arranged By Horticultural Society.

FRED HALL'S ROSES.

The Horticultural Society's annual competition in gladioli, roses and sweet peas will be held on Friday and Saturday, August 17 and 18. Prizes are offered for three classes of "glads" as follows: Individual spikes according to color, white, red, pink, yellow, blue, blotched and smoky; six varieties, three spikes of each; collections of three spikes, of the same or different colors. This latter class is probably intended especially for the small grower, and there are many gardens in the city that should easily yield three show spikes of the same or different colors. In the individual spikes group one spike is required of each designated color.

The six varieties of three spikes each should bring out the best of the mid-August bloom.

In roses the competition is for the best six blooms, either hybrid, teas or perpetuals; and there are two classes for sweet peas: (a) best bouquet, including foliage, and (b) the best six varieties of six stems each.

All entries are to be in the hands of the society by Thursday evening, August 16. Other details will be announced in a few days. The prizes will not be cash, but will be valuable to gardeners. Members of the society are contributing the prizes, and their personal interest deserves the active support of the many flower lovers in the city who can easily be represented in one or more of the groups of this exhibition.

Mr. Fred. Hall, Romaine street, picked two beautiful specimens of gladioli on the holiday. One was King George, crimson with cream throat, and the suggestion of purple edging, and the other was Thomas Edison, a glorious salmon.

Incidentally, Mr. Hall has had a showing of roses this summer that have richly rewarded the attention he gave them. Two of the bushes are significant for the amount of wood they have developed in two years, and this success was attained by careful wintering.

One of the varieties is a Hugh Dickson, dark crimson, and the other Frau Karl Druschki, the old reliable white, of pefect form, but unscented. Each bush has borne about one hundred blooms, due to the fact that last year's wood was saved from the frost.

Mr. Hall bound the branches together with a thick cord, in the manner adopted by growers for shipment, then laid each bush down in a trench, taking care not to damage the wood, and finally covered them with earth to a depth of eighteen inches. He had also stripped off the foliage, particularly as a means of discouraging black spot, and his effort was productive this year of a wonderful display.

COLLAPSES FROM HUNGER IN FRONT OF RESTAURANT

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—(Canadian Press)—A man collapsed of hunger at 42nd street and Broadway last night while standing in front of a restaurant window watching a girl toss pancakes. Several persons offered to pay for a meal, but an ambulance doctor advised that he be removed to a hospital for treatment.

Races Are Keenly Contested At Crow Lake Regatta

INTERESTING PROGRAM OF LAND AND WATER SPORTS STAGED AT BOOSTER PARK

Women's Memorial League Reach Over Half of Objective For Clock.

BAND CONCERT HELD.

Clever Display of Canoemanship Given By R. Bloomfield of Toronto.

With their objective of $1,385 over half reached for the placing of a clock in the newly planned community building and war memorial tower, the Women's Memorial League of Marmora scored heavily on Monday (Civic Holiday), when the Crowe Lake regatta, under their auspices, was put on and most successfully carried out without a drop of rain to mar the proceedings. Booster park, located a couple of miles from Marmora village, presented a beautiful holiday scene as the land and water sports were run off to the accompaniment of the Marmora band which, during afternoon and evening presented most creditable selections, with generous encores. Their enlivening effect around the grounds was enjoyed by all present.

The ladies of the League proved themselves energetic indeed for what with being instrumental in carrying on the enthusiasm for a regatta from former years and other places, they had a number of booths on the grounds where one might even buy his supper if he felt like it.

Gracing the gathering with their presence were many men in municipal and Provincial acclaim, among them Reeve G. B. Airhart, of Marmora, the Rev. C. E. Clark of Christ church, Belleville; the Rev. W. Morton, the Hon. R. Cook, M.P.P. for Hastings, while the officials were: A. V. Yates, starter; Reg. Blomfield, D. E. Bell, F. S. Pearce and F. R. Wells, judges.

When it comes to putting up a smart brand of softball, the two Trent Valley League girls' teams which met in the curtain raiser of the land sports at 1.30 in the afternoon, could not have been improved upon. The Marmora girls, playing nearer to home, and backed by a goodly share of the verbal support of a large crowd of spectators, stacked up against the Deloro girls and were successful in lugging away the weighty end of a 7-1 count. Nevertheless, they had to play their best brand of ball to turn the trick because, but for two innings when the opposition was counting three in each, the Deloro girls were fighting

Moved by E. Brown, seconded by Herman Blodgett, that this Council adjourn, to meet on Saturday, August 25, at 2 o'clock p.m.

RAIN DELAYS ROAD WORK

All Outdoor Work and Sports Suspended Owing to Weather.

AT CAMPBELLFORD.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, August 7.—This week the activities in general of the outside work as well as the various outdoor sports have been seriously interrupted by rain. Every effort has been made by the paving men to have the Brighton road connecting link completed for the week end. The local tennis club had a scheduled tournament to play and the concrete gang was making good progress toward completing the business section of Front Street North. Then the rain came with only a few minutes warning and all outdoor activities were suspended without further notice. The rain came down in sheets and the high wind which accompanied it did considerable damage in a lesser degree in many section of the town.

Recently during an electric storm the transformer in front of Bennett's furniture store was burned by lightning. People standing in the shelter of the store doorways were more than a little startled. Saturday afternoon the wind blew two wires with poor insulation together. The result was that there was a blinding flash and a shower of sparks and one wire dropped to the wet pavement. The sign in front of T. Lavell's store was out of business as the result.

The tennis team from the Belleville Argyle had already arrived to meet the local tennis club in a tournament fixture of the Central Ontario Lawn Tennis Association. All the players were assembled at the club house when the storm broke and not one of the events were played. It is expected that the match will be played here Saturday. On Wednesday afternoon Cobourg is expected to send a team here in the same league.

At the present time, Campbellford players are standing well up in the league. They have won twenty-five of the thirty-five events in which they have played. They still have three tournaments till the end of the schedule, home and home games with Belleville-Argyle and one match with Cobourg to be played here.

Lone Country School House Is Scene of Double Tragedy

SASKATOON, Sask., August 7 (Canadian Press). — Witnessed only by a four-year-old child, who heard the shots and returned to bed, thinking they were fireworks, a double tragedy occurred in the school house at Mikado, Sask., on Saturday which cost the lives of Norman McLeod, teacher, aged 40, and his sister-in-law, Annie Fylamka, 21. The girl shot the man with a .25 calibre revolver, and then turnd the weapon on herself dying instantly.

An inquest was opened by Coroner J. G. Warren, of Canora, and it was decided that McLeod was shot in his bed and that he staggered out, only to receive the other two bullets. No motive has been found.

McLeod, a returned soldier, was married and had three children. His wife was in Canora Hospital at the time of the tragedy, having given birth to a son but six days ago. The man came to the Mikado district from Nova Scotia six years ago, and was well liked.

Lieut.-Commander Beatty Sentenced to be Dismissed from His Ship by the Court

LONDON, August 7 (Canadian Press Cable). — A naval court-martial held at Portsmouth on Saturday found the charge proved against Lieut.-Commander T. R. Beatty of giving a wrong course for the British cruiser Dauntless, which grounded when entering Halifax Harbor on July 2. After fifteen minutes of deliberation, the Court sentenced Beatty to be dismissed from his ship and severely reprimanded.

The prosecution alleged the accused officer had failed to take reasonable care in checking his chart considering the weather conditions for entering Halifax Harbor and in not keeping the usual track laid down or alternatively in not informing Captain MacPherson that the course being followed would take the ship towards Thrum Cap shoal.

Lieut.-Commander Beatty admitted his error in giving his course, but contended the mishap was caused by his scrupulous care in trying to identify a buoy. The Thrum Cap shoal, he said, was incorrectly charted, which caused the ship's grounding.

The Dauntless was refloated and taken to Dartmouth for drydocking and repairs.

DEPUTY VISITS REBEKAH LODGE

Sister M. Sexsmith Makes Official Call on Millbrook Ladies.

ENJOYABLE EVENING.

MILLBROOK, Aug. 7 (Examiner Correspondence).—The first official visit of Sister M. Sexsmith, District-Deputy President of the Rebekah Lodges of this district, to Golden Sheaf Rebekah Lodge, No. 176, took place at the regular meeting last week, with a large attendance, and a very interesting session held.

The Noble Grand, Sister Rhea Thorne, was in the chair, and at the conclusion of the regular lodge session the District-Deputy addressed the gathering, giving some kindly criticism, as well as praise, for the manner in which the ritual and business routine had been carried out, together with many interesting items of information concerning the duties and responsibilities of both officers and members.

Tables for the supper hour, when a delightful social time was spent, were laid in the lodge room, the committee in charge looking after the serving of the guests.

Music and other entertainment, filled out the time happily, and it was felt by all that pleasure and profit had been harmoniously combined in the evening's program.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. P. I. Bentley and Mr. and Mrs. H. Brooks of Oshawa are enjoying a motor trip this week, crossing into the States at Niagara and intending to travel in the Adirondacks, and return by way of Montreal while on their vacation outing.

Mrs. Sexsmith of Havelock, who paid an official visit to the local Rebekah lodge recently in her capacity as District-Deputy President for Peterborough district, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Fallis, and Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Armstrong while here.

Among those from Millbrook who motored to Cobourg and attended the funeral of the late Mrs. John McMillan, superintendent of the House of Refuge for some years, were: Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Fallis; Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Fallis; Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Fallis; Mr. and Mrs. A. J. and Mr. Reg. T. Fallis; Mr. Levergne Fallis; Mr. and Mrs. A. J. and Mr. Leonard Henderson; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hamilton; Mr. and Mrs. James McMillan; Mrs. George Fallis; Mrs. Ingram; Mr. Davidson; Mr. and Mrs. Austin Sutton; H. A. Elson; W. J. E. Gillott, J. Gray; Mr. and Mrs. Milton Fallis, and others.

HORSE CUT BY GLASS

Team Belonging To H. A. Fallis of Millbrook Injured in Runaway.

BREAK GLASS WINDOWS.

MILLBROOK, Aug. 7.—(Examiner Correspondence).—A team of horses belonging to H. A. Fallis, while standing at Attwool and Sheppard's mill on Saturday, about two-thirty p.m. became frightened in some manner, and ran away. Dragging the wagon behind them, they ran along the road east of the town hall and down King street which is still torn up in the centre owing to laying of the drain; forced on the pavement between the telephone pole and P. I. Bentley's store, the plate glass window of the latter was shattered through being struck by the tongue of the wagon. The fact that the horses stumbled and fell checked their further progress, one of them being badly cut, not only by the glass, but through being trampled by the other animal as it attempted to rise and regain its feet. They were easily caught after this and allowed themselves to be led quietly away.

Less than two weeks ago Mr. Fallis' driver ran away throwing the buggy against P. Stinson's car which was parked on Tupper street by the side of the Hydro Shop, and bending the rear fender badly.

Aubrey Fallis was driving the team on Saturday, but was in the mill when the runaway occurred.

Church Service

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed at the morning worship of the United Church on Sunday, the pastor, Rev. W. W. Jones being assisted by Rev. Joseph Wilks with the impressive service.

Rev. Mr. Jones chose as his text, "For God commendeth His love toward us in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us," (Romans 5:8), unfolding his theme as he develops the thue meaning of the cross for Christ and for us.

The male quartette, Messrs. H. W. Johnston, W. H. Coombe, M. McDowell, and V. C. Lambert, sang an appropriate selection, "Wonderful name of Jesus." The elders who assisted with the elements during the sacrament were: Joshua Whitfield; H. W. Johnston; F. P. Stinson; J. A. Brown; W. E. Ball; T. H. Aiken. There were a large number of communicants

The quarterly official board meeting will be held at the church on Tuesday evening of this week.

BRITISH FLIERS REACH SHORE

Courtney Tells Graphic Story of Forced Landing in Atlantic.

WOULD TRY AGAIN.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7 (Canadian Press).—Captain Frank T. Courtney, E. B. Hosmer of Montreal, and the two men with whom they cheated death after their seaplane "Whale" had crashed aflame in mid-ocean, reached New York yesterday on the liner which picked them off the floating wreck of their aircraft.

It was a nonchalant crew which stepped off the city tub Macom at the Battery, shook hands with Mayor Walker at City Hall, and drove up Broadway through hurrying crowds to the hotel where they will stay while they remain here.

Captain Courtney did the talking for his companions, while the Macom steamed from Quarantine to the Battery, and it was a graphic story he told of the forced landing, the hours of drifting, the fire in the engine room of the plane, and the final rescue by the liner Minnewaska.

"We were up 1,500 feet when the fire broke out," he said, "and it took us only thirty seconds to drop to the water, while Fred Pierce, the mechanic stopped the gasoline feed cocks. We veered over thirty degrees and came down smack on the incline of an ocean swell with the aid

BARRIE ADVISES RHODES SCHOLARS

"All You Are To Be Already Lies Inside You," He Declares.

LONDON, Aug. 7 (Canadian Press).—"The beginning of all you are to be already lies inside you—a little speck that is to grow, while you are asleep, while you are awake, and that in the fullness of time, according to whether you control it or it controls you, is to be the making of you, or to destroy you."

Saying he had been asked to bear in mind the Rhodes scholars whose three years here and in Europe generally had come, or were coming, to an end, he singled out from among them a fictitious "William K. Brown."

"Now that the stage direction is, alas, Exit William K. Brown—that fascinating fellow, yourself (your interest in whom passes the love of woman)—what is to happen to you next?" he asked.

"Chapter one. 'I depart from Oxford determined to make public duty my highest aim.' Brave. But how? Chapter the last. The result in my case.'

"Namely? Ah, Mr. Brown, how we wish we could guide you through the paper hoop; but we know as little as yourselves what is being spun for you.

"'Nobody has ever had to put on mourning because of me.' A proud summing up for the best you can if after reflecting you can claim it. But you will find you can't. You ask the speck. You will do things—have probably already done them—shabby, ignoble things, dear Mr. Brown—that will mean mourning, for at least those who love you—or would, if you were found out.

"I am not saying this to damp you, but rather as a comfort in case you have been reading the sort of biographies in which the hero is without a flaw. It may have given you a sinking to feel that you can never be like him.

"But you may be like him, and in many cases it will be a mighty good thing for you to be as like him as you can.

"On my soul, Brown, I believe you would be wiser, if it does not incommode you too much, to stop short of greatness. 'Chapter 18 I reach the summit.' No, they sometimes fall off. To be very able is safer.

"The one place where the immortals are never seen is at the top table.

"One hopes that you are leaving Oxford feeling, as the old saying is, that red blood boils in your veins, that you hear a thousand nightingales, and could eat all the elephants in Hindustan and pick your teeth with the spire of Strasburg Cathedral. That's the spirit.

"If to despise us helps you in your enthusiasms, then, gentlemen, continue. Far worse than your scorning us beyond reason would be your not having a cheery belief that you can do better."

MACHINE GUNNERS DEFEAT RED ARMY

Peterborough Menaced Over Holiday Weekend

Number Three Machine Gun Company under Major Dodds and Captain Dewart Goes Through Annual Maneuvers East of Trent Canal.

INDIRECT FIRING EXCELLENTLY CARRIED OUT BRINGS PRAISE FROM VISITING OFFICERS

Enemy Succeeds in Establishing Trench Line and Strong Points But Is Held on Rifle Range Hill By Four Guns of Local Unit.

WITH THE BLUE ARMY, August 7. — The reds have been beaten back from Peterborough. Attacking a small party of the blue army with overwhelming force, the reds struck early yesterday afternoon astride the ridge south of Norwood Road, three miles from Peterborough. Artillery, cavalry, infantry, and machine guns were used, and only quick dispositions by the Officer Commanding the rear guard, Major H. Dodds, enabled the main body of the blue army to disengage and consolidate a line on the east bank of the Trent Canal.

It was all part of the maneuvers of the ePterborough Machine Gun Unit, which is Number Three Company of the Fourth Battalion Canadian Machine Gun Corps. The maneuvers were designed to display the training received by the men during this past training season, and as an example of good machine gun work the scheme was near perfection. Many citizens were on hand to witness the firing and the evolutions, and the visiting officers expressed their approval of the splendid manner in which the retirement was carried out.

When the battle opened at 1.30 with the meeting of red and blue force advance guards it was found necessary by the blue force to retire on the main body and there consolidate pending an opportunity to attack in force. The retirement is the most difficult of military movements, and the drawing up of a scheme embodying a retirement is side-stepped by many staff officers. For this reason the achievement of Major Dodds, who prepared the scheme, and his officers who carried it out, is noteworthy.

Sacrifice Guns.

There are four guns in the Peterborough unit, each capable of firing 250 rounds a minute. Two of these, under Lieutenant S. Ward, were withdrawn 800 yards, while the remaining two, under Lieutenant James Turnbull, remained in a fortified cellar on top of the ridge to cover the retirement. The cellar is the building shown in the orchard on the map. Then, leaving Lieutenant J. R. Heron up forward as scout and observing officer to report the movements and activities of the enemy, these two guns retired to take up positions with Lieut. Ward's section. By this time the red force was pouring a withering fire into the strong point, and it was but a matter of minutes until an advance had been made to just right of the orchard, along the crest of a little ridge there, where construction of a trench was immediately started.

Meantime, the remainder of the rear guard of the blue force had retired along Norwood road westerly, and was considering the high ground east of the canal.

Defensive Tactics.

About two o'clock, Captain John A. Dewart, M.C., Officer Commanding the four machine guns in the rear guard, reported to the O.C. rear guard that scouts informed him the enemy was concentrating in the valley bordering the creek shown towards the top of the map. He opened fire on this concentration, directed by the observing officer who had a clear view of all the valley. All of the three targets fired on were out of sight of the officers and gunners who were doing the firing. The guns were on a little hill 40 feet high, and the first target was at 50 feet, the second at 60 feet and the third at 100 feet high. But in between the guns and the first two targets there was a hill 100 feet high, while the strong point in the orchard was hidden by bushes and trees.

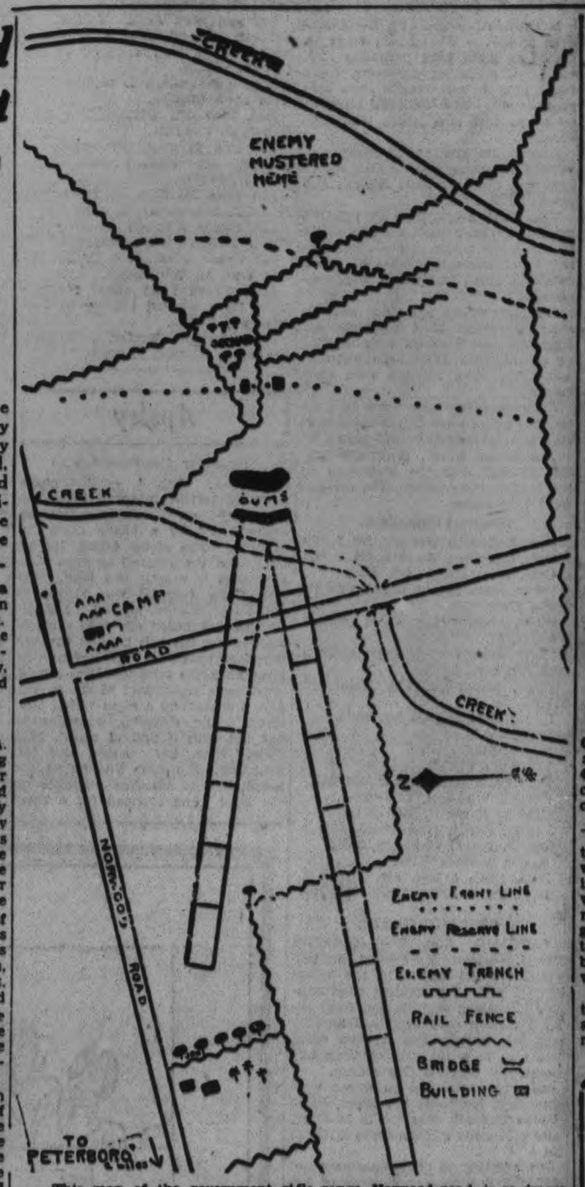
Excellent firing was done. On Captain Dewart's map estimation of the range and direction, one of the guns swept the enemy troops in the valley with the first burst, and the observing officer quickly brought the remaining guns to bear, with good results. Then the range was shortened and a switch made to engage the working party busily engaged in constructing what was evidently intended to be the support or reserve line. The paper which represented the trench was so riddled with bullet holes as to seriously discourage anyone who contemplated going up against machine gun fire needlessly. And then the observing officer kept his head down while the guns opened up on the cellar in the orchard, far enough away to be fairly safe, but close enough to bring back reminders of times when he had been on the receiving end in France. It was not healthy for the enemy unfortunate enough to be in that cellar or anywhere in the orchard.

Out of Action.

Then, with the enemy halted on this line and the remainder of the rear guard in position ready to take up the defensive, the machine guns which had done so good work were taken out of action. Carried by the gunners for fifty yards or so, they were packed on horses and taken to the Norwood road at the caretaker's house, shown at the bottom of the map, where they were loaded on a limbered wagon and taken out under the direction of Lieutenant H. Devey. Specially equipped saddlery and harness is used to transport the guns and equipment must be packed just right.

Throughout the maneuvers good work was done by the signallers, who manned field lines through an exchange to points of vantage where they were on guard to prevent unwary persons from walking or driving into the danger zone. There were eight points from which communication could be obtained with guns, camp or target butts, and in the event of the wires being cut by bullets the signallers were equipped with flags for visual signalling.

It was the most pretentious scheme the local unit has yet put on, and all ranks share in the credit of making a wonderful show.



This map of the government rifle range, Norwood road, is re-drawn from the original by Q.M.S.I. T. Thomas, of the Royal Canadian Regiment. The firing points are shown sloping toward the road from the butts, and other places mentioned in the story of the sham battle can be easily identified.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 8, 1928

Many strongly benefic planetary influences rule today, according to astrology. Adverse aspects are subordinate but marked.

Business conditions should gradually develop unprecedented prosperity in certain lines as the autumn approaches. This is a good day for beginning new enterprises.

Aviation is to open many avenues of interest to commerce, since it eliminates delays, but it will have a lasting effect upon the mental outlook of dwellers on the Earth, the seers declare.

In the rising generation a new race is developing and it is to achieve supreme wonders, according to astrology.

Inasmuch as extremes form a balance what appears to be a rule of vice and crime measures opposite attainments of superb value to man.

What appears to be growing degeneracy is really evidence that good is soon to prevail and to eliminate evil, astrologers declare.

Women are well directed today in business as well as domestic affairs. They should be calm and reasonable under this sway.

This is a fortunate wedding day that presages lasting love, but fortune may be inclined to be fickle.

One of the characteristics of the coming social season will be revealed in the number of marriage in which women of wealth wed poor men.

Theatres and those who are employed in them should benefit today which is especially favorable to stage folk.

Many changes in motion picture production and management, so long foretold, will be evident in the winter. New stars will replace those who have achieved fame in the silent drama.

According to ancient lore this is an auspicious rule for the hiring of maid servants or other women employes.

Persons whose birthdate it is probably will have good luck in their financial affairs all through the coming year. They may have trouble with a lawyer or an associate in business, but they should triumph over difficulties.

Children born on this day probably will have fine talents that can be applied to business as well as the arts. These subjects of Leo may be a bit stubborn, but they possess power to win whatever they desire.

Stomach Trouble

People who have never had Stomach Trouble seem to think it nothing serious. They say, "Oh it's just a touch of Indigestion." But you can't get rid of serious Stomach Trouble that easily. It is a very, very serious condition and causes an enormous amount of suffering. Mr. Alex. Krenbrenk, of Dundurn, Sask., knows this very well. "For the past year," he writes, "my stomach has caused me a great deal of trouble. Constant indigestion made me feel as if there was a lump of lead right in the pit of my stomach, and cramps just about doubled me up. I lost weight and my nerves were all on edge. I felt tired all the time and had not the strength to do a decent day's work."

"One of my friends told me to try Tanlac and I want to say that it was just what I needed. I am now on my third bottle and feel my old healthy, vigorous self again. My appetite is fine and I digest my meals without the slightest trace of indigestion—the heavy lump and cramps are gone for good—and I sleep fine. Tanlac did me so much good that it is a pleasure to recommend it." Tanlac is Nature's roots, herbs and barks, blended into one big, bracing tonic. It costs less than 2c a dose—and your money refunded if it does not give perfect satisfaction. Get a bottle at your druggist's today.

CANCER COST A BILLION

Last year cancer caused a loss of $800,000,000! That is aproximately what 300,000 workmen would lose if they were out of jobs for a year.

This estimate in Popular Science Monthly comes from Dr. Louis I. Dublin, statistician of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. And he predicts that the loss will be even greater for the present year.

Of the total $800,000,000 loss, Dr. Dublin says, $680,000,000 represents the money value of persons who died from the disease. This is equal to one-tenth of the value of all the iron and steel manufactured in the United States. The remaining $120,000,000 was the amount spent in caring for the victims.

TRAFFIC OFFICER'S CYCLE IS WRECKED

Car Crashes Into It As It Stands On Road—Officer Escapes.

Traffic Officer Hugh Wilson had a narrow escape from serious injury when the motorcycle on which he was sitting was stuck by a large sedan car driven by T. W. Williamson and owned by Herb Stinson, about two miles down the Highway on Saturday night shortly after nine o'clock.

Officer Wilson had stopped Mrs. M. Grandy, who was driving from Peterborough without a light on her buggy, and Mrs. Grady was explaining to him that the light she had at present did not work, when the sedan, 258-136, crashed into his machine, hurling him from the motorcycle, which crashed into the left rear wheel of the buggy, and then into the far bank of the ditch, where it was badly damaged.

There were four men in the car, who were immediately placed under arrest. Upon investigation there was found to be liquor in the car and the men were brought into the police station by Officer Wilson, who rode into the city with them in their car.

Williamson appeared before Justice of the Peace S. R. Armstrong yesterday morning in police court, charged with reckless driving and was remanded until next Monday.

One of the other men was charged with having liquor in other than a residence, and was also remanded.

Chief Constable Newhall asked about the numerous motor accidents this morning, said that in a great many cases the driver who is proceeding slowly taking up the centre of the road is as contributory to the cause of the accident as the speed artist who pulls out and meets another car head on.

The "International Globe Roller," which is virtually a house on wheels, is travelling through Canada upon what its operator, Dr. George Miller, a Philadelphia veterinarian, intends to be a 250,000-mile tour of most of the principal countries of the world. The motor caravan started on July 4 with a trip to Washington, D.C., and Dr. Miller now plans to head through the Canadian west and on to Alaska. From there he expects to follow the Pacific coast route into South America. In the illustration Dr. Miller is seen with his wife in one picture while in the other they and their three mechanics are standing in front of the "Roller" which contains two bedrooms, with stationary double beds, a well-equipped kitchen, electric lighting, a radio set, etc.

A CANADIAN HOOK-UP.

The announcement of a continent-wide hook-up of Canadian broadcasting stations with CKOW as the Eastern key unit will be gladly received by Canadian radio fans.

The linking up of these stations, which becomes effective in September, should ensure Canadian programs of a high-class and guarantee leading Canadian musicians and artists a worth-while audience.

If, in addition, it means more time on the air for Canada's super station, local listeners-in will be all the more satisfied.

CKOW, although limited in its hours, has been a life-saver on many nights when the reception of other stations was impossible, and if the new policy will ensure more broadcasting from the "Cheerio" station there will be much applause from Peterborough set-owners.

CRIME PICTURES.

Recently a moving picture shown in Peterborough depicted with almost startling realism features of the gang warfare that is being waged in some American cities.

There seems to be a deluge of such pictures to an extent that brings up grave doubt as to the effect of so many crime films upon the minds of youth.

When the chairwoman of Chicago's Board of Motion Picture Censors complains of the multiplicity of pictures of this type it is time for everybody else to take some notice of the problem.

Many of the leading screen actors and actresses have been devoting themselves of late to crime pictures, and while the purpose of the films is supposedly to make crime abhorrent, the manner in which the scenes are portrayed is not always well calculated to have that effect.

The popularity of these pictures is perhaps explained by the noticeable tendency among film producers to imitate the success of others.

Let one war picture score and a dozen follow; a successful crook play means a deluge.

Pictures dealing with clean sentiment and clean adventure seem to be a necessity; we have had far too much crime and an over-dose of sordid passion.

AFTER THE HOLIDAY.

As usual, as many Peterborough people as possible spent their Civic Holiday out of their home city.

The exodus on this occasion is perhaps natural; Civic Holiday is one of the last holidays of the summer season, and it comes at a time when river and lake resorts have their greatest lure.

Yet there is something almost amusing in the idea that the day set apart as a civic holiday sees fewer Peterborough citizens at home than on any other day in the year.

Perhaps now that the holiday is over it might be well to think a little bit about our city, to take stock as it were of our advantages, and to reaffirm our belief that we are residents of a place in which life is decidedly well worth while.

From what some of us saw elsewhere yesterday it might be easy for us to realize that the home city is the best city after all, that here we have most of the advantages of large centres with few of the drawbacks, that we have many attractions that many of our neighboring municipalities lack.

We desert Peterborough on Civic Holiday, it is true, but the majority of our citizens are glad to get back—and quite content to stay in what they have reason to believe is one of the best cities in this favored land in which to live.

A WARNING TO PARENTS.

General Draper, Toronto's chief constable, through the medium of an article in Carry On, a veterans' organ, has been giving some advice to parents which The Examiner believes can be read as profitably in Peterborough as in Toronto.

"In what particular has the home failed?" the chief asks. "I would say in relaxation of parental discipline and in the neglect of general supervision over the rising generation. The so-called emancipation of women from the 'bondage of the home' has been followed by a corresponding emancipation of the children from the control and discipline of the parents, and is one of the most potent factors in the growth of those conditions from which youthful delinquency and crime develop. This body of conditions, this criminal matrix (if I may use such a term) is fostered, if not actually created, by the indifference, the lassitude, the neglect—or whatever you might call it—the failure by parents fully to perform their duties. The consequence is that the young of to-day are allowed to be poisoned in heart and mind by filthy, suggestive, vicious literature, so easily obtainable and widely discussed on all hands; by moving pictures, many of which teach everything but virtue, and demonstrate in detail how the worst crimes can be committed; and by frequenting with idle, loose company in dangerous pleasure resorts. Undoubtedly society is much to blame for not suppressing such literature and pictures and resorts; but, nevertheless, the parents, being bound by their duty, are primarily to blame for the condition of the young ones."

It is not necessary to go out of Peterborough to find corroboration for all that he has written.

There are conditions in our own community that should cause parents to keep a much closer control of their boys and girls of the teen age than many of them seem to be doing.

The Examiner has no desire to be sensational, yet there is evidence on every hand that is plain to all who keep their eyes and ears open that affords justification for believing that much is going on that parents have no suspicion of, much that is dangerous, much that strikes at the moral status of the community, much that calls for warning.

General Draper puts the blame squarely upon "the emancipation of the children from the control and discipline of the parents," and declares that the latter are primarily to blame for the condition of the young ones.

Peterborough parents, in the light of this indictment, would do well to check up their own families.

THE REVOLT OF YOUTH.

A young Harvard orator, Mr. Barrett Williams, has taken up the cudgels for the younger generation against attacks relating to bobbed hair, cigarettes, short skirts, fast cars, late hours, youthful independence, lack of respect for parents, lack of interest in the serious things of life, indifference and cynicism. The orator makes a counter-attack on the Victorians:

"In the long Victorian epoch there was a moral suppression which, after many absurdities and more hypocrisies to its credit, gave birth to the wasp-waist, the trailing skirt, and Anthony Comstock. A morality based on prudery and kept alive by the stern self-righteousness of the inhibited, served, however, one useful purpose. It brought about a reaction. All these faiths and dogmas were traditional. They were accepted blindly, uncomprehendingly, by each generation in its turn, largely because no questioning was permitted. The father crammed the son with his own prejudices, and said proudly: 'How like his father!' Cant and more cant was the rule of the Victorian era. The spirit of criticism was at its lowest ebb, hunted into dark caverns by intolerance. The blundering and self-satisfied course, in its very self-complacency, often fostered rottenness within. Society seemed blind to fault; it did not distinguish the chaff from the grain it garnered. Its very tradition made it sluggish."

This attack, like most others of the kind, suffers from exaggeration and failure to discriminate. Can it be said that a generation which adored Charles Dickens was one of "cant and more cant," or that the spirit of criticism was at its lowest ebb in the days of Matthew Arnold, Ruskin and Carlyle? No doubt there was hypocrisy and there was cant and there was a certain stiffness of manners which to the present generation seems amusing. But there was also discontent, zeal for reform, sympathy with the poor, and a strong spirit of inquiry. That the age was not lacking in a sense of humor was shown by the immense popularity of the plays of Gilbert and Sullivan, and of the works of Bret Harte and Mark Twain, widely read in Great Britain as well as in the United States.

Mr. Williams says that the last generation "stumbled serenely into a futile and ruinous war." The war can hardly be laid at the door of the Victorians. It did not break out until thirteen years after the death of the Queen. Her reign on the whole was peaceful. Toward its close the Imperial idea gained ground, but Gladstone, one of the foremost of Victorian statesmen, was a resolute advocate of peace. It is hardly fair to hold the Victorians responsible for the tangled skein of European complications out of which the war arose.

But Mr. Williams is quite justified in upholding the right of the present generation to depart from the Victorian tradition and to move onward. The young men of 1914-18 paid a terrible price for blunders and crimes that were none of their making. No matter where the responsibility may be placed, they were not to blame, yet on them the scourge was laid. It is not surprising that some of the most scathing denunciations of war have come from men who fought and suffered in that terrible conflict. A revolt of youth is to that extent justified. But as the evil of war is discussed, and remedies proposed, this generation ought to be not less but more serious than its predecessors, and determined to prevent a recurrence of that catastrophe. It will not do merely to replace absurdities of the Victorian age with new fads and follies. Science in the physical field has profoundly changed our modes of living. We are in a period of transition as remarkable as the industrial revolution of a century ago, and a new philosophy of life must be framed to meet the new conditions.—London Advertiser.

The Question Box

F.M.H. Q.—Will you kindly give me a short outline of Houdini's life, mentioning his religion and his real name.

A.—Harry Houdini (1874-1926), magician, was noted for his extraordinary feats, among which were his escape from a Siberian prison van near Moscow in 1903; from United States mail sacks; from iron cages, paper bags, padded cells, burglarproof safes; from a large hot water boiler into which he had been riveted in Toledo, and from packing boxes into which he had been placed, handcuffed, and the box nailed and weighted with iron and thrown into New York harbor. In recent years he had devoted his attention to the exposure of "fake mediums." His latest and one of his most convicing feats, however, was the exposure of a fakir named Rahman Bey, who claimed supernatural powers that enabled him to remain for an hour under water, in a trance. Houdini was soldered into a galvanized airtight coffin, and this was lowered to the bottom of a hotel swimming pool. In this coffin Houdini lay for an hour and a half without any more air than the amount which he had sealed into the coffin with him. When the test was over he was exhausted, but he had beaten the fakir's best time by half an hour. He explained that the trick was to take short breaths and not to be frightened. After an operation for appendicitis, Harry Houdini died in Detroit, Mich., on October 31, 1926.

A.—The present population of Montreal proper is about 850,000; of Greater Montreal about 1,000,000.

G.P.S. Q.—Please give some information about the French Foreign Legion.

A.—The French Foreign Legion was a French corps in which, previous to 1919, Alsatians and Lorrainers who were born under German rule could enlist voluntarily. It also included men of other nationalities who had French sympathies, or desired a life of adventure. In peace time it garrisons a French colony. In recruiting for the Legion the authorities are not particular as to age or character. The Legion consists of two regiments of four battalions. Their headquarters are in Algiers, and they are officered chiefly by Frenchmen. Connected with the Legion are certain battalions known as the Zephyrs, which are disciplinary units, the conscripts, drafted into them as a punishment, serving in the unhealthiest French colonies. The Legion distinguished itself in France during the Great War. In August 1920 it was announced that the Legion was to be reinforced by the addition of a regiment of cavalry and of artillery and an engineers' battalion; its scope also was to be considerably widened.

GOD'S MINUTE.

Whatsoever ye shall ask in My name, that will I do.—John 14:13.

Thou, O God, art our Father. We are the children of eternal love. Help us, we pray Thee, to live our lives in Thy sight. Let nothing unworthy claim our hearts, and may we find in Thy will our peace.

We pray that Thy likeness may be formed in us, and that our lives may abound in the love and peace and joy of Thy Holy Spirit. Help us to love Thee with a pure heart fervently, and to love those who love Thee and are loved by Thee.

Bless, we pray Thee, all for whom we should pray. We name their names in the silence of our hearts. Pity the ungrateful, the wayward, the wanderer. Comfort the lonely and the desolate. Let Thy peace rule in our hearts and in our home. Whom have we in heaven but Thee, and there is none upon the earth that we desire but Thee.

When we stumble, may Thy strength support us, Thy wisdom lead us, Thy love redeem us. Open our hearts to receive Thee, the Divine Guest, into the home of our souls, and may we hold fellowship with Thee as we walk the path of life. We ask all in Jesus' name. Amen.

A Thought

LOVE OF HOME.

There is an old saying that charity begins at home. Sometimes people laugh at it because you get some niggardly person who is asked to help a cause and who shrugs his shoulders and says he is unable to because charity begins at home. That is selfishness acting under the mask of a perfectly true proverb. What is really means is this. We all of us have to begin with faith in and love for our own home and those who belong to us. "If ye love not the brethren whom ye have seen"—that is the foundation on which everything is built. Then the love of home, the sympathy with those who live at home, the work for those at home, can be carried on in ever-widening circles until you embrace the whole universe. The truest patriotism is that which is grounded in the love of home. There is a real danger if you try neglecting that elementary duty, if you think it sounds grander and bigger to embrace the love of humanity first. You are very apt to fall into exactly the same mistake that Mrs. Jellaby fell into, and we do not want a nation of Jellabys.—Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, M.P.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 7.—(Canadian Press). — The export trade in Canadian grain here yesterday continued of a limited character, there being little or no demand from foreign buyers. The domestic trade in oats was fair and prices were unchanged.

A moderate amount of business was worked in spring and winter wheat grades of flour for local account and prices ruled firm.

The trade in all lines of millfeed continued active and the undertone to the market was steady. The demand for standard grades of rolled oats was quiet, but values were unchanged.

A feature of the egg trade was the stronger feeling that developed for fresh firsts and values were marked up one cent per dozen. The demand was good. The receipts were 1,395 cases.

Little business was done in butter, but prices were firmly maintained. The receipts were 985 packages.

The cheese trade continued extremely dull, but the undertone to the market was strong. The receipts were 6,324 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Aug. 7. — (Canadian Press). — New all-around bottom prices for the season in the wheat market yesterday resulted from rapidly increasing supplies and from extra favorable crop reports. December and March deliveries of corn dropped also to a lower price than any heretofore touched this season.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, ¾c to 1c net lower, being ⅞c to 2⅛c off, oats ½c to 1c down, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 2c.

In addition to announcement of 8,620,000 bushels enlargement of the United States wheat visible supply, word was received yesterday that the Canadian wheat harvest is expected to be general within a week, and that conditions are ideal for a half billion bushel crop in the Canadian Prairie Provinces. Unusually suspicious conditions for spring wheat south of the Canadian boundary were also reported, and predictions were freely made that a dollar a bushel level would be reached by the wheat market this year. The United States wheat visible supply is now 62,316,000 bushels, against 45,547,000 bushels a year ago.

A development yesterday specially disconcerting to Chicago traders friendly to higher prices for wheat was news that Kansas City was selling wheat for shipment to this city. Meanwhile, yesterday wheat receipts in Chicago, 539 cars, were the largest of the season to date, and Kansas City stocks showed an increase of more than 4,500,000 bushels for the week.

On the other hand, vessels were loading 560,000 bushels of wheat out of Chicago elevators yesterday for shipment to eastern points. Moderate export demand, too, was in evidence with some call for number 2 hard by way of Montreal, and also by way of the Gulf of Mexico.

Weakness of corn was due to liquidating sales of September holdings and to optimistic crop advices. September quotations went to about 10c under the outside figures of last week. An interesting feature was that the settlement price on defaults in July corn was fixed yesterday at $1.20 a bushel, including penalty. Oats reflected the weakness of wheat and corn.

Upturns in the value of hogs gave firmness to the provision market.

Apsley

(Examiner Correspondence.)

APSLEY, Aug. 4. — A thunder storm of terrific intensity broke over Apsley on Thursday afternoon, accompanied by a heavy downpour of rain. The storm lasted for an hour, and the rainfall in that time amounted to exactly one inch. The Red Cross hospital was struck in two places at once, part of the chimney being knocked off, with some of the roofing, the bolt passing through the floor near the stove. With the same flash the telephone was struck, wrecking a small part of the verandah, and starting a blaze which Miss Byers, the dietitian, courageously put out with a pail of water. Miss Ethel Byers, her sister, and Mr. Johnston, who were visiting at the hospital, were knocked prostrate on the floor and stunned for a short time. Reports of trees being struck in the vicinity have also been received.

HIGHER STANDARDS IN POULTRY STATION

Farm Flocks Used Now Must Be of Very High Class.

Radical changes have been made in the qualifications for a poultry breeding station. The standards have changed in the hope of raising a supply of eggs and chicks of a quality that can be as nearly guaranteed as possible.

For a good many years the Department of Agriculture has had poultry breeding stations all over the province with several in each county. Under this established system a fairly good farm flock would constitute a poultry breeding station. These stations were largely in the hands of the local representatives and the department of Agriculture at Guelph. The management of the flock had to be along modern lines with approved methods and the breeding had to be of the very best.

Each year in the summer time the whole flock was culled by a representative from the college and only the best hens of growth, health, size and egg type were allowed to remain in the flock. All these were branded with the official band supplied by the college.

The flock was supplied with sufficient cockerels of college breeding. This system was carried on in the same place year after year and these breeding stations were a source of eggs for school fairs and chicks and cockerels for the neighborhood. The changing trend in poultry has resulted in that there are now hundreds of flocks with poultry as good as the breeding station. Even if these stations have done wonders in the past they have served their purpose because people now can get first class stock nearly any place.

The department feel that the time has come when this kind of work is no longer necessary and starting next year there will be no more eggs or chicks for distribution in school fairs. From now on the new system will develop flocks of only extremely high quality. Flocks which will ultimately be able to supply eggs and chicks of a quality which can be as nearly guaranteed as possible. The money spent in the older type of breeding station will be used in the higher type.

The flocks under this new system may be set of any standard breeds and varieties of poultry especially selected and inspected and which may serve as a source of supply of breeding stocks. These flocks shall be inspected at various intervals by fully qualified inspectors. The flock owner must keep such records as may be required and shall at all times give the fullest co-operation in carrying out the work. There must be evidence of special care in regard to cleanliness and the general health and quality of the stock. The general conditions must be good and in addition it must be shown that the flock yields a high grade of eggs for hatching and market purposes and to also serve as a source of inspiration for others.

The rules and regulations governing these new breeding stations are:

1—Applications must be made on the supplied forms to the Poultry Department at O.A.C., Guelph.

2—The applications must be in on time.

3—No breeder shall be eligible to make entry unless he or she has had at least three years' experience with poultry.

4—No applications shall be considered which consists of fewer than fifty mature females.

5—All standard breeds and varieties are eligible.

6—Where more than one breed or variety is kept by the breeder, satisfactory provision must be made to keep each separate during the breeding season.

7—All birds entered, which pass the inspection, must be banded with official bands. Birds bearing record of performance of registration shall qualify.

Where a breeder keeps more than one breed or variety, each breed or variety must be kept separate for record purpose.

8—The parties expressly agree that there are no oral or other agreements, understandings or conditions between them in addition to those herein set forth and that agreements to these rules and regulations represent the intent of both parties.

10—In case any breeder entered under this project should for any reason whatever have his flock disqualified, the department through its inspectors shall remove all official bands from birds in such disqualified flocks.

11—A breeder shall keep yearlings or other hens separated from pullets for record and breeding purposes at least until the close of the breeding season.

the direction of the Poultry Department by qualified men who are college graduates appointed by and under thed irection of the Poultry Department, O.A.C. The inspections shall be unannounced and made at least four times a year. The birds, houses, yards and records shall be available to the inspector on all inspection visits. The flocks may be culled at any time by the inspector who will remove official bands if necessary and otherwise mark such culled birds for identification. All birds so culled must be disposed of within two weeks from date of being culled. In case a breeder fails to comply with the rules laid down or fails to carry out the instructions of the inspectors, his flocks shall be disqualified and his entry cancelled. All male birds used in breeding pens must be passed by the inspector.

The disease, and sanitary regulations are important. The poultry building or buildings and premises must at all times be kept in a clean and sanitary condition. In case of an outbreak or infection or contageous disease among the birds of an entrant's flock, the flock may be subject to a quarantine for a period of one month or as much longer as deemed advisable by the department. The birds may be subject to such tests for disease as may from time to time be considered advisable by the department, the breeder to bear the expense of the test.

Records are also stressed. Records of feed, production, mortality, sales of poultry, eggs both for sale and hatching are to be kept on forms supplied by the department. If a breeder after notification fails to send in records regularly, such failure may be considered a just cause for cancellation of his entry.

J. B. Nelson, local Agriciture Representative, told The Examiner that there are alread many applicants for the new poultry standard, from the county.

WORLD-WIDE POPULARITY ON SUMMER MORNINGS!

GRAPE-NUTS is a favorite the whole world round. It's so light, so crisp, so cool, so temptingly delicious—and it's ready to eat from the package.

Grape-Nuts is sold in more parts of the world than any other breakfast food. Its supreme deliciousness has been a favorite of two generations from childhood upwards, despite the coming and going of almost numberless other breakfast foods.

Grape-Nuts has earned this year-in, year-out popularity by its wonderful flavor, and its unique health qualities. It is almost instantly digested. And because it is made from whole wheat and malted barley, Grape-Nuts gives your body these five essential elements of nutrition: dextrins, maltose and other carbohydrates for energy; iron to enrich the blood; phosphorus for teeth and bone; protein for muscle and body-building; and the important vitamin-B.

Enjoy this glorious summer food in your home. Four teaspoonfuls, costing less than one cent, is a sufficient helping. Serve with milk or cream. Your grocer sells it.

CHAPTER XXXIV

GAUNT PROPOSES

"Do you care for me so little, Jennifer?" demanded Gaunt.

She swayed in his grasp.

"I love you with my whole heart and soul," Gaunt said. "I would give my life for you."

"Then please go away." She found the words with infinite difficulty. "Please go away before somebody comes and finds you here. If you care for me at all . . ."

"Is that all you have to say to me?"

"Yes."

He released her so roughly that she almost fell.

"You are thinking of that fellow Chesney," he accused her.

"He loves me, and I am going to marry him," Jennifer answered.

Gaunt laughed.

"You don't say that you love him. You do not dare to tell me that lie, Jennifer."

She forced her eyes to meet his.

"He has been kinder to me than anyone I have ever known. He will make me happy."

"He will never be given the chance," Gaunt answered fiercely.

"We are only wasting time arguing," he went on more quietly. "I have made my arrangements. We leave by the night train for Paris . . ."

"To join Lady Edith?" Jennifer cut in mockingly.

"If you don't want to wait to pack things now, we can buy clothes when we get there." He looked at his watch. "We must leave in half an hour's time."

Jennifer laid her hand on the back of a chair to steady herself. Her breath came in little panting gasps, and her lips shook so that she could form no words.

Gaunt crossed the room and switched on the lights, and then for the first time Jennifer saw his face with its haggard lines and feverish eyes, and her anger and resentment against him died away in a rush of pity that seemed to give her a grip of herself once more, for she went slowly forward and laid a hand on his arm. Something seemed to tell her that the only way to manage this man was by telling him the truth.

It was useless to defy him and torture him further. He had reached the limit of his endurance.

"Listen, Nicholas, and I will tell you the truth," she said, and now her voice was very clear and tender. "I do love you. I love you more than anyone in the world, but I will never go away with you. You can say what you like—you can kill me if you like—I shouldn't mind that very much, but I will never go away with you, never!"

"Jennifer!"

He made a quick movement as if to take her in his arms, then he turned abruptly aside, and dropping into a chair, hid his face in his hands.

Jennifer stood silently looking at him, half blinded by tears. She was no longer afraid. She had told him the truth, and she felt as if a great weight had been lifted from her heart, carrying away with it all bitterness and resentment and the desire to hurt him as once he had hurt her.

She went to him and, kneeling down beside him, she put her arms round his bowed shoulders, almost as if she were his mother or a dearly loved sister.

"It's just one of those things that have got to be, Nicholas," she said, and although her voice was broken with tears, yet it was firm and brave. "It's no use blaming ourselves or anyone else. It's just Fate or . . ."

She had been going to add "or the poor scribe," but she remembered that he would not understand. And she thought of the verse from Swinburne which William Winter had repeated to her:

"It may be all my love went wrong;
A scribe's work, writ awry and blurred,
Scrawled after the blind evensong,
Spoilt music and no perfect word."

Well, it was all over now. After tonight the music would be hushed forever; they would never again hear the melody which might have made such perfect harmony throughout the years.

"After all," she went on with a little struggling effort, "we have had some happy times together, and that's more, a great deal more, than many people get. We'll just have to remember the happy days, dear, and forget all the rest."

He caught her hand, raising it to his lips, kissing it in a very madness of despair.

"But I want you, Jennifer, I want you! I can't go on without you, never to see you . . . I've tried . . . I've done my best, but each day it seems to get worse."

With sudden revulsion of feeling he pushed her away, and rising to his feet began pacing the room.

"Why shouldn't we have some happiness? Why should we always consider other people? If you're afraid of the scandal——"

She almost laughed at that. She cared nothing for what people might say.

He came back to her and drew her to her feet, keeping her hands in his.

"If you want me as I want you, you cannot send me away," he challenged her.

She looked away from him desperately, to hide the betrayal which she knew was in her eyes.

"We shouldn't be happy," she faltered. "How could we be?"

"You did not say that a year ago when I followed you to Porth," he insisted mercilessly. "You know you would have let me stay then, Jennifer."

The hot blood beat into her face.

"If I had, we should have been sorry by now. I don't believe in happiness that is reached by treading other people underfoot."

"If you are thinking of Edith, she cares nothing for me."

She turned her sad eyes to his.

"That is not true, Nicholas. She loves you."

"Oh—love!" He flung away from her contemptuously. "Any feeling she has for me is only because she knows I care nothing for her. Edith is like that. If I were on my knees to her, she would laugh in my face."

His eyes pleaded with her.

"Don't send me away, dear—my dear!" he said hoarsely. "Don't send me away, Jennifer."

He put his arms round her, drawing her gently to him, but she laid a hand on his breast, restraining him.

"Don't . . . please . . . don't!' she said breathlessly.

He stood back, his eyes angry, his hands clenched.

"Does all this mean that you intend to marry Chesney?' he asked at last, tensely.

Jennifer wrung her hands.

"You are cruel to me, cruel!" she said, half sobbing. "Am I not to have anything at all? Am I always to be lonely? . . ."

"I will make you the happiest woman in the world."

She shook her head.

"No."

He asked again: "You mean that you will marry Chesney?"

She flung up her head. What was the good of denying it?

If she were to send this man away she knew that she must secure something for herself in a world that had grown so empy.

"Yes," she said.

Gaunt laughed, and his face grew white.

"You say you will marry him, but you still expect me to believe that you love me! Well—I don't believe it! I believe you're just telling me this to get rid of me, that it's just your clever way of thinking you can manage me." He laughed again. "You've made a mistake, Jennifer. I'm not so easy to fool. Do you think you can send me away contented to know that as soon as my back is turned, Chesney will take my place and make love to you?" His voice rose excitedly. "Do you think I shall be satisfied to go back to my life—my hell of a life—and know that you are happy with him? . . . Well, we shall see!"

LYRICS OF LIFE

BY THE GRACE OF GOD

King Henry, "by the grace of God,"
(For so a monarch once believed),
The silken-hosed and satin-shod,
And woolen-warmed and velvet-sleeved,
Once stopped to drink beside a well
(How such things happen who can tell?),
And there a village maiden stood,
And spurned his glance, as maidens would.
King Henry, of the godly sort,
Then sent his lackeys good and true
And had the lady haled to court,
The way that kings were wont to do
And there at once the maid began
To love a certain serving-man.
(Still stands the cottage in the town
Of her who might have worn a crown.)

King Henry learned, as monarch must,
King Henry learned, as all men will,
Whomever else a king may trust,
That Cupid is a rebel still.
He learned another lesson then:
Kings flourish by the grace of men,
While some dear serf may homeward plod
A monarch by the grace of God.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS— by John Hix

UNCLE WIGGILY

To-days Bedtime Story

By HOWARD R. GARIS

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE FUNNY FACES

Not far from Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump bungalow there grew, near a clump of grass, a bunch of pansy flowers. The rabbit gentleman loved all blossoms, but he was especially fond of pansies, for he often said to Nurse Jane and his wife:

"Pansies seem to have such jolly faces in their blossoms."

No doubt you have seen these faces yourselves, and have often wondered about them.

So the pansy face flowers grew near Uncle Wiggily's bungalow and when there was no rain the rabbit gentleman sprinkled them with water. And when the grass grew too close, or the weeds grew too high, Mr. Longears would clear them away so the sunlight and wind could help to make the pansies grow bigger and better.

Thus it was that the rabbit's pansies were the best for miles around and often, after supper, Uncle Wiggily would sit, in the cool of the evening, near his bunch of pansies and look at them.

"You have faces," the rabbit gentleman would say, "but you never talk to me. Why is that?"

The truth was the pansies were too bashful to talk except among themselves. They spoke the language of flowers and, if they wished, they might have talked to Uncle Wiggily. But they choose to keep silent except after dark when they talked one to the other.

One night, when Uncle Wiggily had gone to bed, a blue pansy said to a yellow one:

"Wouldn't it be nice if we could do something for Uncle Wiggily who has done much for us?"

"Indeed it would be lovely, I think," agreed the yellow pansy. "Why can't we?"

"How can queer faced flowers, such as we pansies are, do anything to help a big rabbit like Uncle Wiggily?" asked a golden brown pansy.

"It doesn't seem as if we ever could," went on a purple pansy. "I know Uncle Wiggily has been most kind to us—giving us water to drink when we are thirsty, and keeping the tall, ugly weeds from choking us. So it seems as if we might do something for him. But what can we do?"

That was just the trouble—the pansies wanted to be kind but, poor simple flowers that they were, they did not know what to do. Until one day, all of a sudden, their chance to do a good turn came and, like the Boy Scouts, they did it.

It happened that the Woozie Wolf had long been seeking a chance to catch Uncle Wiggily. And on this day the Bad Chap had sneaked up close to the hollow stump bungalow where he hid in a clump of grass.

"I'll wait until that rabbit comes out to go adventuring, and then I'll grab him!" growled the Wolf. So he lay there in the grass, waiting hungrily.

Now it was near this same clump of grass that the bunch of pansy flowers, with their smiling faces, grew up tall and strong. And when the blue blossoms saw the Wolf she whispered to her brothers and sisters:

"Now is our chance to do Uncle Wiggily a favor."

"How?" asked the golden brown flower.

"We can make funny faces at the hiding Wolf," said the blue pansy. "Let's make such funny snoots and faces that he will have to laugh. And when he laughs Uncle Wiggily will hear and know that a Bad Chap is hiding, so he will keep away from here."

"Oh, what a jolly thing to do!" said the yellow pansy.

So, one and all the pansies began to make such funny faces, or "snoots" as they are sometimes called that the hiding Wolf at first began to chuckle then began to snicker and then, as one of the pansy boys said later, "he just bust right out laughing!"

"Ha! Ha! Ha!" laughed the Wolf. "What funny faces! Oh, me! Oh, my!" and he laughed harder than ever and sneezed and then Uncle Wiggily knew the bad chap was there so he telephoned for the Police Dog who drove him away.

But if it had not been for the funny pansy faces I don't know what might have happened. But as it was everything came out right.

CONSTRUCTIVE VACATIONING.

Many people take vacations to obtain a rest from their work and then discover that it takes about two months of work following the vacation to rest up from the effects of the vacation.

This is vacation time all over the North American continent. It is a season when the office seems dull and one has visions of the "great open spaces" with green trees, cool breezes and fishing-poles.

Vacations are usually planned with only one object in view and that is to have a good time, with pleasant amusements. Frequently one finds, after resuming his customary daily grind, that he is much worse off than before in health and spirits, with sunburn and tired limbs. But there is no reason why there should be any unpleasant aftereffects of a vacation.

A change from the habits to which one is accustomed during the rest of the year should be productive of marked benefit. Here is a splendid opportunity for us to adopt a healthful regime which will prepare us for the heavy work of the coming winter.

It is advisable during vacation time to put aside all thoughts of worry. This is not as easy to do as to advise, but it is good to amuse yourself with simple pleasure such as swimming, rowing, or perhaps, fishing. The mental worker would do well to become an ardent physical culturist, turning his thoughts to physical development, taking long hikes, measuring the distance each day until he is walking five or ten miles daily. It is a good time to perfect the new swimming strokes you have been so anxious to learn.

Do not labor under the delusion that during vacation time you can stuff your body with "hot dogs" and candies which you do not eat while doing your regular work. Dietetic discretions must be observed if one is to return to his regular work with a new lease on life. If you "feed up" too much at this time you will be months in recovering from the poisons you generated in your system through this foolish gormandizing, and diseases may start which will take a long time to cure, even with careful dieting.

This is the season to eat plentifully of fresh fruit, green vegetables and to cut down on heavy foods, such as starches and meat. Do not try to keep cool with ice-cream. You will find that this food is very rich in heating materials, and will only cool temporarily. Drink plenty of plain water, neither too hot nor too cold, and thus give your eliminative functions a chance to flush out the excessive impurities and wastes.

Seek healthful amusements, but do not spend your time sampling the tempting confections at the corner candy store. If, between your swimming and exercise period, time hangs heavily on you, it is well to rest under the green trees, reading light magazine stories of romance or adventure, but nothing too deep or philosophical.

Rest periods with an occasional short nap will refresh you and make you all the more eager to get back to some healthful exercise, but do not allow yourself to get that "lazy feeling," since physical rest is not as much needed as mental and physical diversion.

You can re-create yourself not so much by idleness and gluttony as by participating in joyful games, and in the observation of the ways, powers and harmonies of nature.

Questions and Answers.

Question—Subscriber asks: "What causes excessive nose bleed in a boy nine years old? Has continued since he was three years old. Never a day goes by without at least one."

Answer: Your child probably has especially sensitive nasal membranes and treatment may be necessary to bring about a firmer tone to these structures. Go to a doctor who uses the localized ultra-violet light treatment. This treatment consists in raying the inside of the nose with actinic light. It is just the same as using concentrated sunlight. If you cannot find a doctor who has this equipment, go to a nose specialist who can give you some remedy you can apply several times daily to toughen the sensitive membranes.

Question—Housekeeper asks: "Will you please print instructions for making the fruit whips given in your weekly menus?"

Answer: The fruit whips may be made of cooked apricots, peaches, apples, prunes, figs, etc., by first mincing the fruit and adding to the whites of well-beaten eggs. Do not add sugar or any other seasoning. For a change, the whip may be placed in the oven and slightly browned on top.

Question—J. M. B. asks: "Can an inherited venereal infection cause insanity in a child? He is a strong, healthy child but acts strange at times and has terrible temper tantrums. His father died from an infection he thought cured in youth."

Answer: It is possible the boy's bad temper could be caused by a hereditary blood disease, but it is better to believe that his tantrums are caused from digestive disturbances as this is usually the case. If you teach him to eat correctly and live with other good habits, you will also have done everything you can to eradicate any inherited tendency.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE VALUE TACT

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.

(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

In the colony of American students in Germany some years ago there appeared a young Russian who was not admitted into polite society anywhere else because of his bluntness and absolute truthfulness on any and all occasions.

The Americans were a cosmopolitan and democratic group so they took in the young Russian. On one occasion he, with the rest of the colony, had been invited to a party at the home of an American student family. The hostess was very much upset because of the odor of kerosene in the house, from a smoky little stove on which she prepared some light refreshments. Every one lied about the odor and tried to make light of it to ease the feelings of the gracious hostess. But when the apology was made to the Russian he blurted out, "O, it stinks like the mischief, but I guess I can stand it."

Tact is the grease that keeps the machinery of society moving along smoothly. It might be likened to the shock absorbers of an automobile. Tact is the greatest asset of a diplomat.

The man of tact knows what to say and what not to say. He avoids offending people.

We admire tact; it makes for good fellowship and proper social contacts. In recommending a man for an important position it is much in his favor if you can truthfully say that he is a man of rare tact. For such a man also possesses good judgment, insight, quick perception, takes in a situation at a glance, maintains his balance and poise under all circumstances.

An ambassador, a salesman, a lawyer, a business man will not get very far without tact. Tact is useful everywhere that one humns life rubs up against another. It is akin to intelligence which meets a new situation and solves it properly the first time.

We admire tact because it is t he "open sesame" to success and personal popularity.

TRIED TO LEASE AIR TO PLANES.

A new idea in money-making—the collection of rent from airplanes passing overhead—recently occurred to Samuel Schwarz, owner of a house at Zehden, Germany, who interpreted literally an old law reading, "The rights of a property owner extend to the space above and the ground beneath his property." He wrote to the Lufthansa, the German commercial flying organization, demanding a settlement.

Unfortunately for his ingenious plan, says Popular Science Monthly, the Lufthansa cited the German air traffic law entitling aircraft to free passage so long as they observed the law.

Hastings

(Examiner Correspondence)

HASTINGS, Aug. 4.—Messrs. Cecil and Clifford Scriver, Trevor Dodd and Stewart Whitred left on Thursday to spend a two weeks' vacation camping at Haliburton.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Runnels, of Orillia, are spending a few days at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. Runnels, Front street.

Mr. Bell, formerly of Kinmount, who has been engaged as principal of the Public School, has taken up residence here.

Messrs. L. Elmhirst and son, Scott, Gordon Johnson, Robert Simpson, John Fleming and George Richardson and family took in the C.P.R. picnic to Orillia on Wednesday report a splendid trip.

Mrs. John Oliver and Mrs. Bert Preston spent Thursday at the home of Mrs. Howard Fife, Asphodel.

Miss Muriel Lynch, of St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough, spent Thursday visiting her father, Mr. William Lynch, Front street.

Mrs. Stewart, of Peterborough, is visiting at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Cruikshank, for a couple of weeks.

Misses Gladys and Audrey Johnston, of Peterborough, are visiting at the home of their aunt, Mrs. Sherwin Scriver, for a couple of weeks.

Mr. J. A. McKone, of Peterborough, was a visitor in town on Thursday.

Mr. Edison Logan, of Toronto, is spending his vacation at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Logan.

GHOST REPORTED AT BEAULIEU

While investigators have been unable to establish contact with the wraithlike figures said to inhabit the ancient abbey of Beaulieu, at least one lady who lives within the ruin is convinced that there are things to see for people with the sight. But the owner of the structure knows nothing of ghostly doings. He was pouring lemonade to guests at a party for his daughter when a reporter called to investigate reports of unusual happenings. Lady Montague, wife of the owner of the abbey is shown in the illustration above (1). (2) is the abbey built centuries ago because a royal dream was interpreted as a warning; (3) is Lord Montague.

U.S. LEGISLATORS INSPECT BOUNDARY

Visit Proposed International Park in Rainy River Country.

DULUTH, Minn., August 7 (Canadian Press).—A remarkable phase of the movement for closer international relations in the Ontario-Minnesota boundary county will be shown next month, when a committee of each House of Congress will visit the region, separately. There will be no public hearings on the proposal to establish an international park comprising the 14,500 square miles of the Rainy Lake watershed, devoted to scientific forestation, the preservation of wild life, and recreation throughout the most wonderful lakeland of America. There is before Congress the Shipstead-Newton bill, which, pending a treaty between Canada and the United States, will, on the Minnesota side, withhold public lands from acquisition, prevent excessive cutting of timber, and prohibit the raising of lake levels.

The Quetico-Superior Council has been formed, with the co-operation of the Izaak Walton League of America and other state and national conservation organizations, to secure a treaty providing for the sympathetic administration of the watershed, for the purposes named. The question of importance of the question, they must was dealt with at committee hearings at Washington last spring.

Both the Senate and House bodies decided that, in view of the great intake the unusual course of personally investigating the situation, and give the public most concerned the opportunity of stating their views. Twelve members of the House of Representatives Committee on Public Lands will arrive here on August 5, and give three days to the work, holding at least two public sessions in the intervals of seeing as much of the boundary waters as possible. Senator Shipstead will conduct the Senate Committee on a five-days' investigation, beginning August 23.

It is understood that the Government of Ontario had been invited to send representatives as that it may ment is developing in Minnesota. It become cognizant of whatever sentiis pointed out here that the initiative in co-operative conservation of the unique hunting, fishing and summering territory which the water boundary bisects was taken by Ontario. In 1909 the Quetico Forest and Game Preserve of a million acres was established by the Government. Ontario's lead was followed by state legislation which set aside 1,400,000 acres adjoining Quetico, and by President Roosevelt who proclaimed that area the Superior National Forest.

The proposal to dedicate the whole of the Rainy Lake watershed to these purposes was first made from Ontario. It is recognized that, by permanent, scientific conservation of the timber resources of the region, and a corresponding development of its recreational values a much larger and more enduring prosperity and population can be assured to trans-Superior than could ever be possible by a swift denudation of the forests, and a destruction of the summer beauties of this picturesque region.

SUBWAY PSYCHOLOGY

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—A serious jam in the subway was averted recently by a station master who was up on his psychology. It seems that a car marked "Flatbush" turned off in a different direction. About 500 weary strap-hangers dashed for the emergency stops and refused to release the train. Police and guards failed to move the mob. Then came the station master. He crawled up on a ledge and waxed eloquent with oratory. The crowd was in the mood for anything but a speech. Before he could warm up to his subject the last of the "brave 500" was headed for the Flatbush platform on the other side of the station, leaving the misdirected train free to proceed.

It is predicted that Canada's gold production by the end of 1928 will be between $44,000,000 and $47,000,000, which would give the Dominion a place in production ahead of the United States and second among all countries of the world.

Canada is second only to the United States in auto production.

VISITING RINKS WIN TROPHIES

J. Bacon, Peterborough, and J. Parker, Cobourg, Lead at Campbellford.

.. 25 RINKS ENTERED. ..

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 7. — All day yesterday the Campbellford Bowling Club's greens and club house were the scene of much activity. The occasion was the annual tournament for men's rinks. The greens were not in first class condition due to the heavy rains that have fallen in thtis district during the past two weeks, but everything was done that could possibly tend to improve their condition. The play throughout was lively and of a high calibre. Lunch was served in the club house by the lady members of the local club. The draw was completed at nine o'clock in the morning and play began at nine-thirty, continuing throughout the day till almost midnight last night. Shortly before eleven damp weather set in again and the "Scotch mist" made bowling conditions far from ideal. Nevertheless the games were played to their full twelve ends with the exception of the finals for the Wiggins trophy when, by mutual agreement, six ends was called a game.

There were twenty-five rinks entered and these represented eight towns and cities, Belleville three rinks; Brantford one rink; Cobourg five rinks; Hastings, one rink; Peterborough, five rinks; Port Hope, one rink; Stirling, two rinks and Warkworth two rinks. Five rinks were entered from the local club to defend the trophies.

The visiting rinks, Peterborough and Cobourg, were the fortunate ones. The Meyers trophy becomes the property of Jack Bacon of Peterorough for the next year and the Wiggins trophy will rest in the Cobourg club house, having been won by Joe Parker. The finals were played between two rinks from that town. The Meyers cup winners were M. Bredin, W. Oke, G. Cairns and J. Bacon skip. As well as the trophy they were presented with auto rugs as individual prizes. The Warkworth rink, who lost out in the finals by the score of 11 to 5, were presented with silver platters. They were A. M. Smaile, W. Topping, Dr. Allan and C. Smith, skip.

The winning rink from Cobourg was skipped by J. Parker and won from Hircock, also of Cobourg, by a score of 10 to 6. To the winners will go the Wiggins trophy, with woollen blankets as individual prizes, while the runners-up carried home lemonade sets. The winners, L. Wilson, H. Worth, M. Booth and J. Parker, skip. The runners-up, R. Higginson, H. Wenn, E. Thompson, E. Hircock, skip.

In the first games for the Meyers trophy eight rinks drew byes and entered the second round.

First round—Stillman, Brantford, defeated Allan of Campbellford, 20-9. Freeman, Peterborough, defeated Parker, Cobourg, 15-9. Haffner, Belleville, defeated Ryan, Port Hope, 13-9; Guillet, Cobourg, defeated Wiggins Campbellford, 16-5. Hopper, Cobourg, defeated Wright, Stirling, 13-5; Dr. Allan, Warkworth, defeated Meyers, Campbellford, 12-6. Johnston Peterborough, defeated Morton, of Stirling, 18-8. Symons, Belleville, defeated Glover, Campbellford, 16-8.

Guillet, Cobourg 14; Haffner, Belleville 8.

Allan, Warkworth, 16; Hopper, Cobourg, 11.

Symons, Belleville, 11; Johnson, Peterborough, 7.

Skitch, Cobourg, 11; Elliott, Peterborough, 5.

Bacon, Peterborough 13; Oke, Port Hope, 10.

Hircock, Cobourg, 13; Wise, Peterborough 6.

Walsh, Belleville, 14; Wilkinson, Campbellford 4.

Allan, Warkworth, 18; Symons, Belleville 6.

Bacon, Peterborough, 12; Skitch Cobourg 5.

Hircock, Cobourg 17; Walsh, Belleville, 3.

Bacon, Peterborough, 12; Hircock, Cobourg 10.

Fifth round, Finals—Bacon, Peterborough, 11; Allan, Warkworth, 6.

Teams playing in the Meyers Cup series were also eligible for the Wiggins Cup, which was played for as a consolation prize. This was the last series to be played, and did not finish till almost midnight when, by mutual consent, the two opposing Cobourg skips agreed that since the hour was late and the weather far from ideal, they would only play six ends. There were some suggestions that the game be taken to Cobourg, but this was not unanimous. In the opinion of the majority, the cup belonger to Campbellford, and should eb played for on the Campbellford greens. The play proceeded.

Elliott (Peterborough) 16, Allan (Campbellford 9.

Parker (Cobourg) 22, Ryan (Port Hope) 7.

Wright (Stirling) 10, Wiggins (Campbellford) 7.

Morton (Stirling) 13, Meyers (Campbellford) 8.

Dodds (Hastings) 12, Glover (Campbellford) 7.

Haffner (Belleville) 16, Stillman Brantford 5.

Hopper (Cobourg) 18, Johnston (Peterborough) 6.

Wise (Peterborough) 9, Wikinson (Campbellford) 5.

Second round:

Parker (Cobourg) 11, Elliott (Peterborough) 7.

Guillet (Cobourg) 12, Wright (Stirling) 8.

Dodds (Hastings) 16, Haffner (Belleville) 9.

Hopper (Cobourg) 10. Wise (Peterborough) 8.

Symons (Belleville) 14, Morton (Stirling) 10.

Skitch (Cobourg) 12, Walsh (Belleville) 7.

Third round:

Hircock (Cobourg) 16, Guillet (Cobourg) 10.

Hopper (Cobourg) 19, Dodds (Hastings) 8.

Symons (Belleville) 11, Skitch (Cobourg) 8.

Parker (Cobourg) 15, Freeman Fourth round:

Hircock (Cobourg) 15, Hopper (Cobourg) 12.

Parker (Cobourg) 14, Symons (Belleville) 5.

Fifth round—Finals:

Parker (Cobourg) 10, Hircock (Cobourg) 6.

Owing to the rainy night and the late hour. this final game was only six ends. All other matches were twelve ends.

OBITUARY

ALBERT NICHOLSON

HAVELOCK, Aug. 7.—The death occurred at Oak Lake on Monday, August 6th, of Albert Nicholson, age 61 years. The funeral will take place on Wednesday afternoon under the auspices of the Havelock Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 435. Service will be held in the United Church at 1 o'clock and interment in Maple Grove Cemetery.

MRS. FRED J. BATSTONE

TORONTO, Aug. 7.—The death occurred yesterday of Bessie Bernice Bernard, wife of Fred J. Batstone, and mother of Harry L. (Red) Batstone and John N. (Jack) Batstone, at the family home, 47 Westminster avenue.

Born at Weston, Ontario, Mrs. Batstone came to Toronto as a child, and lived here ever since.

In addition to her husband and two sons, she is survived by two sisters, Mrs. William Hand, Ann Harbor, Mich., and Mrs. Harry A. Smith, Toronto; and two brothers, Andrew J. Garlin and Thomas L. Garlin, both of Toronto. Funeral services will be held from the family home on Wednesday at 2 p.m., with interment at Parklawn Cemetery.

MRS. WILLIAM BIGELOW.

(Examiner Correspondence)

BETHANY, August 7.—The death occurred on Monday, July 30th, at the family residence of Mrs. William Bigelow, following a stroke on Saturdday. For some months Mrs. Bigelow had been ailing but hopes were held out for her recovery, and when seized with the stroke on Saturday her family and friends awaited anxiously over the week-end to see what the result might be. The end came suddenly without warning and before the family could be called she had passed on. Almost about the same time in the far west a younger brother of the deceased, Rueben Price, passed away from the same cause and so the sad messages from east to west passed each other.

The funeral on Wedneday, August the first, was largely attended by friends and relatives from far and near. There was a short private service in the home for the members of the family and a public service in the United Church of which the family were members.

The service was conducted by a close friend of the family, Rev. James McMullen of Belleville who spoke on the words, "If a man die, shall he live again."

The hymns were all favorites of the late Mrs. Bigelow, ones she had sung all her life about her home and to her children: "Nearer My God to Thee," "Jesus Lover of My Soul" and "Safe in the Arms of Jesus."

Many floral tributes bore mute testimony to the esteem in which the late Mrs. Bigelow was held by all who knew her.

The casket was tenderly carried by six nephews: Clarence Rowan, Morgan Bigelow, Harold Bigelow, Gordon Bigelow, Hilliard Price, and Murray Price.

Interment took place in the family plot in St. Mary's Cemetery.

The sympathy of the whole community is felt for the bereaved family for Mr. Bigelow, his sons, Harry, Frank, Louis, Walter, and one daughter, Mrs. Harold Kincade, for the brothers, Messrs. George, Will, Herbert and Walter Price, and for the only remaining sister, Mrs. William Byers, who is at present in a very delicate state of health following three operations. There has been three deaths in the Price family in a little over four months.

DUMMER COUNCIL ORDERS TILE PLACED

Reeve Hawthorne Will Look After Work On Road At Warsaw.

The regular monthly meeting of the Municipal Council of the Township of Dummer was held in the Town Hall, Warsaw. There were present Reeve James R. Hawthorne and Councillors E. Baptie, J. Drain, R. Tedford and E. N. McDonald.

It was moved by Councillors Drain and McDonald that Councillor Tedford superintend the painting and decorating of the inside of the Town Hall.

Councillors McDonald and Drain moved that Reeve Hawthorne attend to the matter of having tile placed along north Water street at the time the county intends repairing this road.

Many local people intend visiting Niagara on Wednesday, August 8 on the occasion of the annual Bay of Quinte excursion to Port Dalhousie and Niagara. Cobourg is the starting point of the outing and the trip promises to be a most enjoyable one.

An auction sale in the month of August is a rare occurence here and a considerable crowd attended the sale of farm stock and implements held by W. J Crossen. Allan's Mills on Friday afternoon. J. A. Battisby wielded the hammer with an accompaniment played by the worst storm of the season. In spite of thunder and rain, however, the sale was quite successful.

CAR HITS BUGGY; BOY NEAR DEATH

Victor Harris, 17, Receives Serious Injuries Near Cameron Yesterday.

HORSE KILLED.

LINDSAY, August 7.—A serious accident occurred near the village of Cameron, Fenelon Township, about 1.30 o'clock yesterday morning, and Victor Harris, son of Mr. William Harris, who resides about one mile south of the village, is at death's door in the Ross Hospital as a result of injuries received.

It appears that Irvine White and Max Brandon, of Fenelon Falls, were motoring to the Cataract Villege, and while rounding a curve one mile south of Cameron crashed into a horse and buggy driven by young Harris. The horse was frightfully mangled, being practically disembowcled, while the car carried the wreckage of the buggy across a ditch, through a fence and against a tree. Victor Harris, who is seventeen years of age, sustained serious injuries. One eye was torn out, his scalp so badly torn that a portion of the brain protruded and other serious injuries were sustained.

County Crown Attorney Anderson and Provincial Constable Wetherell instituted an investigation yesterday.

of the flare made by our flaming ship."

E. B. Hosmer, millionaire Montreal broker who backed the flight, sat smoking a cigar while Courtney talked.

"I was just sitting there smoking and looking at the moon when the fire broke out," he said. "Then I felt a warm current overhead and all of a sudden it got hot and I knew something was wrong. There were some cans of gasoline in front of me and I ran over to protect them, but it got too hot and I had to go up where Courtney and Hugh Gilmour, the radio man, were. You don't think much at a time like that, and I was just wondering what would happen next."

Crawled Onto Wings

While he was wondering, he said, the ship smacked down on a wave and in a minute all four of the men were out on the wings, looking at each other quizzically and expecting the ship to blow up at any minute..

"But just about then," Courtney went on, "the flames began to sputter and go out. It had been so hot that the metal struts supporting the engine were fused together, but that didn't weaken the ship enough to send the motor out through the bottom.

When they discovered that they were not sinking, Gilmour crawled over to his radio set, hoisted his emergency aerial, and began shooting out his S.O.S.

"So that was all there was to it," Courtney said. "After a while the Minnewaska picked up the signal and although we floated along out of position with the Gulf Stream, she picked us up.

"But if the Minnewaska hadn't come along we would have floated indefinitely. We could have stayed afloat for days in rough weather and weeks in mild weather. That flying boat is unsinkable."

When the party rolled up Broadway for the Mayor's welcome at the City Hall, only about 2,500 persons were there to cheer, for the time of their arrival had not been widely heralded.

Mayor Walker talked with them a few minutes, then extended the city's formal welcome.

"I wouldn't hesitate a minute to try it again," Hosmer told the Mayor, and Courtney, answering a similar question, said, "That's only a matter of financing."

OTONABEE.

(Examiner Correspondence)

OTONABEE, August 4.—Mrs. Herbert Hickey and children of Peterborough, spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Allen Hayes.

Messrs. Austin and John Cranley, of Rochester, N.Y., spent a few days with Mr. and rMs. Allen Hayes.

Master Clarence Styles, of Toronto, is visiting his aunt, Mrs. Patrick Cavanagh visiting his aunt. Mrs. Patrick Cavanagh.

Misses Lillian O'Brien and Lillian O'Toole of Peterborough, spent the week end with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel O'Brien.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Clarkson and son, Arthur, spent two weeks' holidays with Mrs. Clarkson's sister, Mrs. William Devlin.

Several local people have been to the north country picking huckleberries, which are reported to be a good crop.

Rain every couple of days makes haying and harvesting quite a problem. Peas which are a splendid crop are liable to be injured from too much rain. Most of the wheat is cut and barley is being cut. Some fields of oats are assuming a golden hue. Raspberries both wild and cultivated are about finished. Both weer a splendid crop but the season was exaremely short. There is still quite an amount of hay in the fields. The quality of most of the hay will ber ather poor. Corn, roots and garden continue to show splendid growth.

INTERESTING PROGRAM

hard and threatened to break out with a rally that would cut down the enemy lead considerably.

Going to bat first in the game, the Deloro outfit went out in one-two-three order, while for Marmora, the first batter scored, while the following three team mates failed to round the circuit. However, the count was tied up in the first of the second stanza when the second batter up for Deloro landed on the initial station ahead of schedule. Thus the argument went along with neither team seeming at all safe.

The Marmora girls, working hard and steadily, were not slow with the willow and when the final reckoning had come and gone, they had collected three counters in the third and at Hillhead.

Yesterday's game was a good one for the fans, with both pitchers getting in some clever work. The Deoro girls, clad in neat new uniforms, played good ball, but the hustling Marmora girls took advantage of all the breaks their way and in a few minutes the fans were yelling their heads off.

Following the game, which had attracted the attention of practically everyone on the grounds, the girls of the two teams entered in several contests. Miss E. Mantle took the prize for being the best all round player, while the baseball throw was won by Miss M. Flynn. The inter-team race was a fast event, with the members of both teams entering in a hundred yard dash. Miss E. Rice was the winner.

The teams:

Marmora—M. Flynn, c.; E. Rice, r.f.; M. Leonard, 1b.; E. Meehan, 2b.; A. Archer, l.f.; C. Robertson, 3b.; J. Williams, s.s.; J. Thompson, p.; A. O'Connor, c.f.

Deloro—E. Mantle, 2b.; N. Foster, l.f.; R. Mantle, 1b.; E. Brown, c.f.; F. Gaffney, s.s.; M. Gaffney, p.; E. Ethier, 3b.; E. Callery, r.f.; A. Knox.

Umpires — J. Brady and J. McCroden.

The score by innings:

Marmora .. ..133—7
Deloro .. ..001—1

The Regatta proper, which began after the softball game had concluded, was one of the most interesting water field days held in the district for a number of years, attracting as it did, the attention of well over five hundred people, many of whom were contestants in the various events. It was opened with a strikingly clever display of canoemanship by R. Blomfield, of Toronto, but formerly of Marmora, who is now director of Oak Ridge boys' camp on Stoney Lake. Mr. Blomfield, appearing before his audience in a light Lakefield-built canoe, did many stunts, some of them quite practical enough to be useful; some of them merely stunts well worth trying by the man or boy who would become a canoeist. He demonstrated the various strokes, gunwale racing, and a particularly clever rescue of three young lads also of the camp, who had pretended to need help and who soon found their craft high and dry upon the instructor's boat.

Following Mr. Blomfield's demonstration of how to get into and out of a canoe won appreciative applause.

Then followed the swimming and boat races, the results of which were as follows:

Canoe Race, Men's Single—1, Jack Parker, Cleveland.

Canoe Race, Mixed Doubles.—Peggy Parker and Jack Parker.

Girls' Swimming Race.—1, Jean Gladney of Marmora.

Swimming Race, Ladies' Open.—1, Evelyn Rice, Marmora.

Diving Contest, Open.—1, Roy Smith, Marmora.

Sack Race, Open.—Donald Neal, Marmora.

Baby Show

The once very popular event at any holiday gathering—a baby show—again flourished at the regatta on Monday, for with two trained nurses and a doctor examining and judging, some eleven youngsters made their first appearance before the public, and two of them were chosen winners over the others. The "competition" was quite keen, for a healthier and happier lot of youngsters you might never see. The judges were Miss R. Sullivan, R.N., of Marmora; Mrs. G. Watt, of Deloro, and Dr. MacKechenie, while the winners of the two classes, are out.

The first prize-winner in the six months and under event was Keith Ballagh, while the other entries in the same division were Billy McGarvey; Marjorie Maloney, and Fred Hulsman.

In the division where a child might be entered right up to the eighteen month limit, there were seven entries, the winning youngster being Isabel Nayler, while Donald Hawley, Leo Auger, Gwendolyne Lavender, Gwendoline Rundle, Glen Lavender, Samuel Gifford, and Keith Pressick.

As is the case with every gathering worth while, such as this, there must be committees who do the planning and work ahead of time. The committee in charge of parking, comprised G. Forestall, F. Johnston and W. A. Sanderson; the finance committee was composed of E. Dunlay, G. B. Airhart, A. Sweet, R. E. Binter, H. A. Sabine, and W. J. Cottrell. F. W. Rhind was chairman of both these committees, while the sports committee was made up of A. V. Yates, E. C. Prentice, F. R. Wells, O. Shannon, F. S. Pearce, J. P. Marrin.

To the lady officers of the W.M.L. goes a goodly share of the credit, too, for among the most energetic workers on the grounds were the president, Mrs. C. A. Bleeker; Secretary, T. W. Rhind, and Treasurer Mrs. (Dr.) H. Crawford.

SHARE EQUAL WITH MEN

Mildred Wiley of the United States tied for second place and in the jump-off the Dutch girl gained the second-place honor.

The girls' relay team sped madly to beat the world's record they had set up themselves in trials Saturday. Miss Rosenfeld, a notoriously fast breaker, made a false start and was warned, that a second false break would mean disqualification. When the gun was fired, she was cautious in getting away and trailed her competitors. Ethel Smith took the baton at the end of the quarter and ran a fast 100 metres to reach fourth place before handing over to Jane Bell. Miss Bell also ran an excellent race and made no mistake in handing the Baton to Myrtle Cook at the three-quarter mark. Saturday, Miss Cook displayed a wonderful burst of speed to win over the United States girls by two yards.

The Canadian girls finished in excellent condition, and were so exuberant that the cameramen anxious to get their pictures could hardly keep them still. Myrtle in particular, jumped up and down in her joyousness. Miss Cook had been unlucky in her other race, the 100 metres, being disqualified for two false starts, so that the victory was all the sweeter to her.

Deserves Special Credit

Fanny Rosenfeld incidentally deserved special mention. She ran a close second in the women's 100 metres earlier in the week and was fifth in the 800 metres race, running again yesterday to give the girls a fast start in the relay.

The Canadians ran a good race in the 1,600 metre relay, but were up against strong teams. The United States team with Germany second After the Canadians, Sweden was a close fourth.

Wilson got away promptly and was in third place halfway along his 400 metre assignment. He was fourth behind the leader when he handed the baton to Phil Edwards. The dusky runner from British Guiana probably saved third place for the Canadians by the smart race he turned in. He gained to second place at the halfway mark in his 400 metres. The United States and German runners spurted and Germany had the lead at the end of the first 800 metres, with Canada third. Glover took over from Edwards and held his end up well, holding second place for a short time. The German runner again dashed ahead of the Canadian when James Ball took the baton for the last 400 metres and Ball had to turn in fine speed to make up the deficit. He was in fourth place down the stretch and running strongly, and near the tape he put on his now-famous finish spurt to take third place from the Swedish runner.

Apparently poor running by George Hester of Hamilton, the third man in the Canadian 400 metre relay team, was responsible for the elimination of the Canadians in this event. John Fitzpatrick made a false start but finally got away fast, almost beating the gun again, and Adams kept well up, being in fourth place when Hester took over. Hester lost ground badly in his 100 metres and perhaps flurried, dropped the baton as he was handing it to Percy Williams the latter waiting impatiently as he saw himself being handicapped. He picked the baton up and broke away fast but seeing the hopelessness of the race gave up. The matter was settled by the judges, however, who disqualified the Canadians for dropping the baton, which must be carried continually.

There was some feeling after the race that Harry Warren of Vancouver, a Rhodes student at Oxford, should have been given Hester's place on the relay.

In London to-day

The Canadian men are going to London to-day in an effort to gain further honors in the British empire games. The girls will celebrate their victories with a shopping expedition in Paris, where their activities will be limited only by the extent of their purses and the opinion of Alexandrine Gibb, their manager. The girls in any event are anxious to return to Canada as soon as possible. This was made evident in the buzz of conversation at their hotel rooms last evening.

PAUL KINGSTON RAWDON PIONEER

County. Not being satisfied, he came east again, and married Miss Hestery Gay, at Foxboro, in 1835, settling shortly afterward in the 5th concession of Rawdon. At that time the virgin forest had possession as there were only two families in that section, those of Elikah Sarles and James Haggarty, the latter the grandfather of James Haggerty, Hastings County, treasurer.

On this farm, Paul Kingston was born on May 29, 1840. The family consisted of eight children, six boys and two girls. Paul being the eldest of the boys knew something of the toil and hardships his parents had to endure during those pioneer days. As the family grew they separated, settling on adjacent farms which they had acquired through hard work and careful living, but Paul remained on the homestead and on November 30, 1864, he married Miss Harriet Melinda Hagerman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Murchison Hagerman, of the Huntingdon-Rawdon townline, also one of the pioneer families of that time. Their children were Wilmot, Blanche, Albert and Sarah, all of whom are living.

Mr. Kingston always lived near where he was born excepting for ten years in the village of Stirling where Mrs. Kingston died on September 14, 1920. Since that time he had made his home with his children at present he is with his eldest daughter, Mrs. E. Reid, of the 3rd Concession of Rawdon. Mr. Kingston in his day was a very successful farmer, at one time owning and operating 350 acres. Being of a public spirited turn of mind, he was a member of Rawdon Council for more than twenty years, deputy-reeve for several years and reeve for one year. In politics he was a staunch Conservative, but always ready to accord fair play to his opponents.

To vary the monotony of farm life, he joined the Orange Lodge on May, 1857, in Lodge No. 500—Mr. Archibald being the Master at that time, the Lodge holding its meeting in Mr. Justice's home. The Lodge is now located on the eight concession of Rawdon, and meets in a comfortable lodge room. Mr. Kingston was present at the recent celebration of the Battle of the Boyne, in Stirling.

On the day of the interview he was found reading the daily paper and enjoying good health for one of his years. That his declining years be filled with peace and comfort is the sincere wish of his many friends.

Wedding Bells

ACTON—GRAY.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, August 7. — A quiet but very pretty mid-summer wedding took place at twelve o'clock noon, on Saturday, August 4, when Gladys Pearl, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wentworth Gray, became the bride of Lloyd Melville Acton of Detroit, son of the late George Acton and Mrs. Acton of Uxbridge.

The bridal party stood under a white bell centering an arch of hydrangeas intertwined with asparagus fern, the ceremony being performed by Rev. P. C. Howard, assistant clergyman of the parish of Millbrook and Cavan.

The bride was daintily and becomingly gowned in a French dress of pale blue georgette, panelled in French cut-work embroidery; her picture hat was of the same color, and shoes and stockings were also of a matching shade. She wore the groom's gift, a strand of well matched pearls, and her bouquet was of Ophelia roses, with feathery ferns supplying the needed touch of green. The bride and groom were unattended.

The wedding march was played by Miss Lillian Crocker, and the bride's father gave her away. During the signing of the register, which was witnessed by Miss Acton, a sister of the groom, and Mr. Maurice Gray, the bride's brother, Mrs. P. C. Howard sang very sweetly "O Perfect Love."

Following the ceremony a reception was held, Mr. and Mrs. Gray and Mr. and Mrs. Acton receiving with the bridal couple, and immediately afterward a houffet luncheon was served, the girl friends of the bride who assisted being Misses Isabelle Heaslip of Stratford; Maretta Gray, the bride's sister; Lillian Crocker; G. Acton, of Uxbridge; Mrs. Harry Miller of Derlington, Maryland; Miss Lois Richard son of Tweed; and Miss Muriel Smith. The color scheme in the dining room was carried out with pink sweet peas, and pink and white streamers, the wedding cake, in which the bride inserted the knife, centring the attractively-laid table.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Acton left on a wedding trip to Montreal and other points east, the bride travelling in a two-piece dress of sand crepe, with hat to match, and blue top coat, with silver fox fur. On their return they will make a brief visit here and at Uxbridge before going on to their home in Detroit.

The groom's gift to Miss Crocker was a silver bracelet; to Mrs. Howard a necklace of pearls; to Miss Acton a bar pin; and to Mr. M. Gray gold cuff links.

Besides the immediate relatives and the girl friends of the bride already mentioned, the guests included: Mr. and Mrs. Norman Acton of Uxbridge; Mr. and Mrs. James Moffatt, and two children, Allen and Eileen, of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Aiken; Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Aiken; Mr. and Mrs. N. Belch.

A very successful afternoon tea was held on Friday August 3, in aid of St. Paul's Women's Missionary Society, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. Jordan, 815 George street. Owing to the very inclement weather, the tea, which was to have been held on the lawns, was held in the house, but the spirits of the 125 people who were present, were not dampened by the heavy downpour of rain that continued throughout the afternoon. The guests were received by Mrs. Jordan, Mrs. R. Hall, Honorary President of the Society, and Mrs. J. Garbutt in the absence of the President, Mrs. William Allan. The rooms were beautifully decorated with ferns and flowers. Those assisting were Mrs. McCaw, Mrs. T. Gilgour, Mrs. Jackson Mrs. H. Morgan, Mrs. Henry, Mrs. McNabb, Mrs. S. Taylor, Mrs Lybrun, and Miss Jean Smith. An excellent program was given consisting of solos by Miss Eva Humber, Mrs. W. Hohner soloist of Trinity United Church, Mr. A. McKeown and Mr. J. Anderson. Accompanists were Mrs. W. Hohner and Mr. G. F. Liddle

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

MANY families keep household accounts in a definite, systematic way, while others do not take the time or trouble to do this. But whether or not you keep definite accounts of family expenses, there are some financial records that have to be kept and there are a number of records that you should have where you can get at them without any delay.

Nearly every housewife, I think, has some system of keeping notes in a way all her own, perhaps in some sort of code which only she can decipher. Some housewives, I know, keep their notes in little cabinets made especially for the purpose, and these are indeed time-savers. The whole family do not need then, to enuse in a general hunt when some important record has to be found.

If such a cabinet cannot be found, a desk drawer is convenient, or in fact any substantial box with a cover will, of course, answer the purpose.

Many records may be kept on cards arranged in alphabetical order and these may be arranged in the cabinet. On these cards may be kept addresses, medical records of different members of the family—which may be required in filling out school reports, Christmas lists, the household inventory, and many other things.

Huckleberries or blueberries—whichever is the proper name— are very plentiful at this season of the year. Often these may be had for the labor of picking. These berries, when ripe, have a delicious flavor all their own—a somewhat sub-acid flavor.

It has earned a well-deserved place, not only as a stewed fruit, but also in various kinds of baking. Blueberry muffins are a delicious treat and blueberry pancakes taste better than they may sound.

If you are putting away your tea or coffee pot for an indefinite length of time, lay a stick across the top under the cover. This will allow the air to get in and prevent mustiness.

Some housewives have a great deal of trouble in getting cakes to come out of the pan, flat on the top. This may be prevented in having the cake mixture come well up to the corners and sides of the pan, leaving a slight depression in the centre. The cake will then be perfectly flat on top when baked.

The other day I heard two men talking about the easy time the housewife has. "There is nothing in a woman's work which should make her physically exhausted at the end of the day," remarked one. At the same time, I do not believe that many would agree with him.

But as long as some folk think that work is fairly easy for the housewife, you might as well do your best to make it as light as possible.

On the very busiest day for some housewives, they persist in walking four or five blocks to market and back again, sometimes over-loading themselves with heavy parcels, when these could just as well be sent home by the grocer.

During this vacation season, the children would often be glad to run to the store and a great many steps saved for the tired mother.

Doesn't it make one angry to have to pull and tug at bureau drawers, especially in hot weather? To remedy this, rub a little wax on the surface where friction occurs and this will end the trouble.

Shot taffeta is very fashionable for evening frocks, especially in the richer pastel tints, powder blue, jade green, petunia, sweet pea purple and the new shade of rose beige.

Appliques, in several bright colours are used a great deal this season. Contrasting colors make a charming effect for trimming. This is demonstrated in a George street store where a very pretty mauve celanese crepe dress is appliqued in colors of rose, peach and nile green.

Printed silks hold an important position this year. Some designs are small and neat while others are large and flowery. A dainty frock of this material should be included in your vacation wardrobe. They pack easily and always look smart.

hiWle on a visit to a west end home recently, I was shown a tea waggon which is just the thing for a home where space is scarce.

It was made of dark brown wood, with an oval shaped top and a shelf beneath and had rubber tires. One of its attractions was the oval top—no sharp corners to be cleaned.

If you are travelling and are compelled to take along such things as a bottle of hair lotion, do not pack it away until you have made sure that the cork is securely fastened so that the lotion will not leak out.

To do this, take a lighted candle and let the hot wax drop around the cork until a good coating of wax has formed around the cork.

This means that middy blouses are much in vogue—white crepe de chine blouses worn with blue serge or twill or crepe skirts and embroidered with anchors and stars. WHAT DO YOU MEAN—DUMB?

By Jane Osborn.

"So you rather liked Tom Lane, did you? Well, Tom's not bad—but he's something of a nut. He doesn't get far with any of us girls."

Daphne Granger's twenty-year-old hostess, Helen Keys, looked with an expression of mild compassion on her guest as they sat in the living room of the Keys' summer home after the Sunday afternoon tea party when Helen had introduced her guest to the young men and girls with whom she "played round" during the summer. Daphne was twenty—Daphne ought to be a better judge. Now, of all the men she had met the one she mentioned specially was Tom Lane. Just another proof of Daphne's deficiency. Daphne was a dear and rather pretty, but still Daphne really was a little dumb.

Daphne tried to defend herself. "I didn't say that I was crazy about Tom Lane. You asked me which one of the men I liked most, and I just said that I had had a very interesting conversation with Tom Lane. We got to talking about hobbies and he mentioned the fact that he was interested in geology. So he talked about geology—"

Helen went off into a little trill of laughter. "Tom would talk about geology. Meets a pretty girl for the first time—a girl who is willing to talk with him—and he talks about geology. That's really precious. Didn't I say he was a nut?"

"But why shouldn't a man talk about geology—if he's interested in it?"

"Doesn't have to talk about anything, silly—that way. I mean, at a tea party like this a man's just expected to sort of kid and—oh you know—banter—light talk."

Meantime Tom had been driven home in one of his own cars with the Gurley girls, Rodney Moore, Ben and Katherine Kelly and Stella Yates. Wedged in the back seat between Katherine and Stella he was listening in some surprise to comments made about Helen Keys' guest.

"Oh she's pretty enough," babbled Katherine, "and I hear she has quite a bit of money in her own name, and she can dance well and all that. I see what Helen means, though—she is dumb."

"What do you mean, dumb?" asked Tom in surprise.

"Just dumb You know what I mean" Katherine said.

At first Tom's interest in the dumbness of Daphne was quite selfish. Here was a girl that had struck him as entirely charming. She had money, which wasn't anything to him because Tom happened to have enough of that commodity himself. Still it would have weight, he knew, with Ben and Rodney and their confreres. He had noticed that the men did not hover around her as they did some of the other girls and now they explained that this was because of some characteristic which in their lingo was indicated by "dumbness." Obviously he had lacked judgment in appraising her—or as he concluded, he lacked the quality that the other men possessed to detect this undesirable trait.

The next week was crowded with beach suppers, hatless, breathless motor drives along with curving shore road—sunny hours of swimming and tennis and later hours of dancing or card playing. Besides for Daphne and Tom there was a geological survey up the side of a hill five miles inland, arranged for six o'clock one morning so that it might not conflict with the program arranged by Helen for Daphne's entertainment.

To ask a girl to go pebble hunting at six o'clock in the morning was further proof that Tom was a nut—and of course any girl who would consider such an invitation in the light of anything but a joke was hopelessly dumb. Still in one way both Tom and Daphne were popular. It was Tom who always found it convenient to "change a bill" when the crowd had stopped at a roadside inn for refreshments. His two new cars were always ready for anyone who wanted to drive them. And Daphne just happened to have all sorts of pretty new clothes, parasols, bathing suits, shawls and scarfs that she would so much rather have one of the other girls wear than to bother wearing herself.

Two weeks later after Daphne had gone home and Tom and Rodney and most of the other men had gone back to the city after their summer holidays Ben and Katherine Kelly, lingering on the beach with Helen, discussed Daphne.

"I know Daphne wouldn't mind my telling you of her engagement," said Katherine. "I suppose every one guessed it anyway. Daphne's immature and rather dumb, but she's a nice girl—"

"Maybe she's not so dumb after all," suggested Ben. "She did quick work with Tom all right. And Tom's a decent fellow and he's got a lot of money even if he is a nut."

"I don't know [illegible] is such a nut anyway," observed Katherine. "He was chosen out of two or three hundred applicants as head of some geological survey from college. You said yourself he was the one fellow in the crowd who was likely to make his name in the world."

"Well, of course there's that," said Ben indolently, but he was thinking neither of Daphne nor Tom—rather wondering to himself whether in all the world there was a more deliciously fashioned pair of lips than those of Helen Keys.

AEROPLANE RIDE SATISFIES WISH

Winnipeg Woman Fulfills Many Years Ambition to Fly.

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 7.—Mrs. Richard Sargeant, 78 years old this autumn, satisfied an ambition of many years when she took her first aeroplane ride July 1st. Incidently, she is the oldest Winnipeg woman to enjoy a trip in the clouds. On landing, her only comment was that she might travel in an aeroplane from Canada to England to visit relatives across the water. This will not be her last air ride by any means she said. The plane did not seem to be moving at all, and after landing she thought she was still in the air.

The sight of big forestry planes circling and swooping above her home made Mrs. Sargeant long for an air ride. "I have ridden in a horse-drawn buggy, an automobile, and my one desire was to have the thrills of an aeroplane ride before I died. It was wonderful, and I want to try it again," she declared.

ROMANCE TAUGHT HISTORY SCHOLARS

Factual Method in Teaching is Dull and Uninteresting.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Aug. 7.—Stories of the adventures and explorations which led to the settlement of Canada, 400 years ago, were told by Rev. R. J. Renison, D.D., to the Kiwanis Club as examples of the "Romance of Canadian History." A generation ago, "romance in our national history had almost been destroyed," Dr. Renison said, by the dull and factual teaching methods of that day. Modern pedagogy used the legend to make the fact attractive.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

New lingerie trimmed with appliqued ribbon roses, ribbon embroidery and bows.

Every season you may count on a number of revivals—old fads and fashions nearly forgotten for a time, brought to light again in slightly altered form. And now we have with us again—what do you think?—lingerie ribbon.

If there was any accessory of dress that women were glad to see go out of favor it was lingerie ribbon. Taking out the ribbons after underthings had been worn and then weaving them back into the beading or eyelets again was one of those small tasks that had a way of becoming extremely irritating. And with the old type of lingerie you usually had to put the ribbons in because if you didn't they wouldn't stay in place. Finally—you may recall—came washable lingerie ribbon, that you didn't have to take out, and then shortly after that it occurred to some brilliant genius that it was possible to design chemises and nightgowns and so-called "corset covers" or camisoles that didn't need to be held in place with ribbons at all.

Thank fortune the new way of wearing lingerie ribbon is different. It isn't run through "entredeux" or beading or a series of little eyelets. The garment it adorns will stay on without it. In fact these new lingerie ribbons are purely ornamental. But they do, of course, need to be removed when the garment is washed and they have to be tacked in place again. Some of the more elaborate pieces of lingerie are made with ornaments of appliqued ribbon which of course cannot be removed and these make necessary the most careful sort of laundry work. But there are little wreaths and festoons made of tiny rose buds and forget me knots made of narrow ribbon of the removable sort.

Some of the new night gowns are made with ribbon bows on the shoulders and shoulder straps on slips and step ins are conveniently made of ribbon, but these will stand the careful sort of laundry process which is necessary for any dainty bit of lingerie now a days.

GETTING IN DUTCH

I walked along the quaint little streets of an old Dutch town today and met four boys on their way to school, each with a long black cigar in the mouth, puffing away like veterans. I do not know whether their mothers wean them on cigars, but the eight-year-olds I have seen at the task would almost lead me to think so.

Today I tasted a new thing. It is called Soetkrahelingen. It is a form of cheese and a good glass of port wine. You had best write the name down, for you will never remember it, but the food's delight you will find unforgettable enough.

Another way to get in Dutch is accomplished best at Middleburg, where tourists flock in hundreds on Market Days. Here you may hear every seven and a half minutes the plaintive silvery bells and carillon, in the tall tower of the Abbey at the Nieuw Kerk. Eight times in the hour, day and night, they bombard the ears with their deliberate and beautiful tones, forty-one of them in all. Of course, this sounds distressing, but there are thousands of us who have experienced the bombardment and most of us agree that we like it, even at night.

Cliff Bricker Leads Canadians In Marathon

GALT RUNNER FINISHES TENTH

El Quofi, Moroccan, Representing France, Captures Honors in Marathon Race.

FINLANDER THIRD

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 7.—(By W. H. Ingram, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent). — El Quafi, Moroccan, representing France, won the marathon race of the Ninth Olympiad yesterday, with Plaza of Chile second and Maitelinen of Finland third.

Cliff Bricker, sturdy marathoner from Galt, Ont., after faithfully training in Holland for three months, finished 10th, leading the six other Canadians. Johnny Miles of Hamilton, formerly of Sydney Mines, Nova Scotia, was the second Canadian, placing 16th, and Silas McLennan of Noel, N. S., was 24th. Billy Hughes of Hamilton was about 40th and Percy Wyer of Toronto about 42nd. The two other Canadians who started were Harold Webster of Hamilton and William Reynolds of Galt.

Bricker's performance in coming tenth in a field of 78 of the world's best endurance runners was creditable, but to himself it was disappointing. He accepted the result with good sportsmanship, however, and finished in good physical condition, though his feet were badly blistered, like those of Miles. Both went from their dressing-rooms to the hotel after the race in an ambulance.

Bobby Kerr of Hamilton, Canadian track team captain, and Dr. A. S. Lamb of Edmonton, president of the Canadian Amateur Athletic Union, congratulated Bricker as they removed his shoes after he came off the track. Bricker was in philosophic mood and expressed himself ready for the next marathon.

Road Hurt His Feet.

Bricker told the Canadian Press correspondent later that he felt fine as far as the third control station. After that the brick-paved road covered with gravel, along the Anstel Canal, began to hurt his feet. He was not immediately aware that they were blistering, however. "Near the finish, where the road was brick-paved and covered with pebbles, I was forced to slow up when I was sixth with Joie Ray of the United States just in front of me," he said simply.

It was just at this point that Ray surged in front for a temporary lead. The pebbles continued to hurt Bricker's feet and he dropped to seventh place. "I was forced to ease off and let Koski of Finland, Ferris of Britain and Michelson of the United States pass me," Bricker explained.

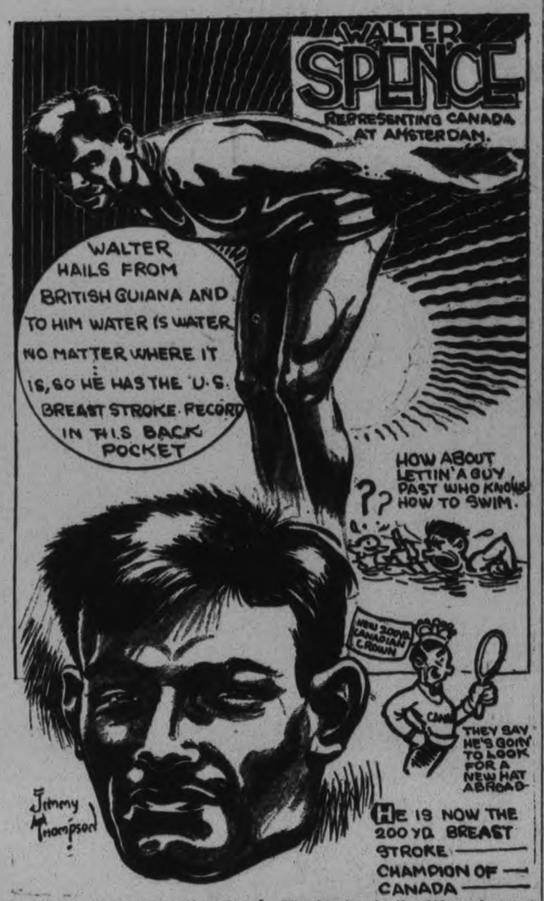
"When these runners were well ahead I forgot to stick to Ray." This had been his policy in the grind. "I decided to hold tenth place grimly or bust."

With the aid of strong will-power, good physical condition and carefully-built up stamina, Bricker did hold tenth place against the threats of competitors.

Johnny Miles accumulated sand in his shoes right at the start of the grind, as soon as he had left the Olympic stadium. Soon his feet were badly blistered, but he hung on grimly with the hope of finishing in the first ten. This it was impossible to accomplish.

So William Sherring's triumph of 1906, when this Hamilton man won the marathon at Athens, remains the only Canadian victory in the historic Olympic event.

AN AQUATIC FLASH



Only three swimmers in the whole Dominion were deemed strong enough by the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association to carry Canada's colors at the Olympics. But those three (one of whom, by the way, is a girl) are more than good. Most celebrated of them is Walter Spence of British Guiana who is nominally representing a Montreal club.

Spence's star turn is the 200 yards breast stroke, in which he has long been famous. In the United States he annexed the national breast stroke title, an altogether outstanding honor, while in Canada he holds the 200 yard championship.

His showing in the 200 yards event at the Olympic trials was nothing short of spectacular. An easy style and powerful stroke sent him gliding swiftly through the water to the end of the tank. Then a special effort enabled him to turn like a flash, and with a tremendous push he was back on the course again, gaining as much as five feet on opponents in those few brief seconds. However there will be stiff competition to meet at Amsterdam. Spence is undeniably good. But how good are the others? Time alone will tell.

UNITED STATES DEFEAT CANADA

New Westminster Team Lose Out by 6-5 Count at Amsterdam.

BEFORE BIG CROWD

OLYMPIC STADIUM, Amsterdam, August 7.—(Canadian Press).—Forty thousand persons, the biggest crowd that ever saw a lacrosse match watched John Hopkins University team, representing the United States defeat the Canadian—the Salmon Bellies of New Westminster, six goals to three yesterday.

The match was staged as an exhibition of a national sport not on the Olympic program but it was more than an exhibition to the opposing team who fought like tigers. The Canadians who come from a famous lacrosse centre and whose teams have been considered as worlds champions for nearly a quarter of a century exhibited superior stickwork.

Intense feeling among the players developed and rough scrimmaging, much to the crowd's entertainment, as play progressed during the interval between the start and the finish of the marathon.

PLAY-OFFS START ON NEXT TUESDAY

Final Arrangements Made For Campbellford Softball League Series.

(Examiner Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, August 7.—Final arrangements have been made for the town softball league play-offs and the first game will be Tuesday, August 7th at fifteen minutes after six in the evening. The executive of the league met at nine o'clock Saturday night to complete all the details for the games.

Tinney and Beatty will be the officials in charge and it was decided that the umpire's ruling would be final except where the captain of the team wished to dispute it and no other players would be permitted to dispute a decision. The rules on this are very clear in the rule book of the Ontario Softball Association and will be strictly adhered to.

All games are to be a full nine innings and will begin sharp at 6.15 p.m. Any team which is not present and ready to take the field at this time will automatically lose the game by default.

The first two teams to meet will be the Outlaws and St. Andrew's. This will be a best two out of three series and the winner will meet the Clerks, at present at the top of the league. The dates set for the games are August 7, 9, 13 and 16. In case either of the two teams in the first series win two straight, the final game will be played Monday, August 13th.

So that the umpires may not have any trouble making their decisions, the grounds are to be newly marked. New bases are being made and will be spiked to their proper place. Several other minor details are also to receive attention. The work is to be done on Tuesday afternoon and any volunteer assistance will be appreciated.

VIEWS ON SPORTS

There will be no game in the City Softball League until Wednesday night, August 8th.

The Canadian girl athletes covered themselves with glory at Amsterdam on the final day of the track and field section of the ninth Olympiad. Sharing equal honors with the men of the Dominion, they set new world's records in two events.

The fourth game of the series of five which were to be played between the Lock Works and Hastings to decide the winner to oppose the city section of the East Peterborough League was postponed on Saturday on account of rain. The Peterborough players did not put in an appearance but wired that the game might be played yesterday, but this was later changed and the possibilities are now in favor of Wednesday, August 8th.

Scoring an aggregate of 45 points out of a possible 88, they amassed a total that surpassed that of the other three divisions put together.

He Swims While Asleep

Erickson, the ex-Brooklyn plasterer who is wimming in Toronto at Exhibition time in the Third Wrigley Marathon came by his prowess in an accidental way. He was plying his trade on a bit of saffolding, when it gave way and plunged him into the river, where he failed to sink. Beleiving the aqua pura to be his proper medium of expression, he entered the Lake George race and remained in for an enormous length of time, so long, in fact, that they were preparing to offer him inducements to get him out. Before the 1927 race he had developed a stroke which carried him the full distance. He landed at 3 a.m., still cheery and not overly tired, but very sleepy.

Now he seem to be able to shake off his snoozing proclivities.

"I've learned how to sleep in the water," he announced to the world.

"Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" now has an added significance.

TIGERS TAKE THIRD GAME

Detroit Checks Advance of Athletics by Winning 8-5 at Home.

INDIANS SPLIT BILL

NEW YORK, August 7.—(Canadian Press).—The Detroit Tigers checked the advance of the Athletics yesterday by winning the third game er Whitehill for Detroit, nor Earner Whitehill for Detroit, nor Earnshaw for Philadelphia, the starting pitchers, finished. Whitehill was batted out in the seventh after three successive singles had scored two runs and Earnshaw was relieved by Rommel in the fourth when the Tigers scored three times. Rommel gave way to Quinn in the eighth. Harry Heilmann got his second homer in two days.

Cleveland and Washington divided a twin bill, the Indians taking the first game 7 to 4 and losing the second 11 to 2.

In the opening game the Nationals were unable to solve the offerings of Walter Miller, while in the nightcap, Irving Hadley was supreme.

Joe Judge, Washington first baseman, hit safely in five times at bat in the second, three of his hits going for extra bases—two doubles and a triple. He batted in five of the Senators 11 runs. Emil Barnes, Washington outfielder hit a home run in the first game.

Ralph Kress and Heinie Manush each collected a triple, a double and a single in four times at bat off the offerings of two Boston Red Sox hurlers as the St. Louis Browns took a 9 to 4 decision.

The victory, which gave the Browns a two to one edge in the series was marked by much hitting, with Harris and Griffin giving eleven safeties and Ogden of the winners ten.

Held Yankees.

Bill Kamm, captain of the White Sox and Bib Falk, kept the Yankees from increasing their three and one half game lead over the Athletics yesterday. With two out in the 15th inning, the score tied at 4 to 4, and Falk on first base, Kamm landed on a fast ball from George Pipgras and drove it to deep left center to send Falk across the plate with the run that gave the White Sox a 5 to 4 victory.

The Yankees lead remained unchanged as the Athletics dropped a game to Detroit.

The veteran Urban Faber pitched the first eight innings and allowed all of the Yankee's runs. Grady Adkins finished the game and gave only two hits in the remaining seven innings. Waite Hoyt started for the Yanks and gave three runs and eleven hits. Moore carried the burden for two frame, yielding a run and four hits, and Pipgras went in in the tenth.

DELORO TEAM PLAYS TO DRAW

Entertain Belleville Canadian Legion Team on Home Field.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MARMORA, August 7.—On a field better suited for water polo than football as some would say, Deloro received the Belleville Canadian Legion team again on Saturday evening, the result being a three goal draw. The game was semi-humorous, players frequently colliding in the different pools of water with everyone concerned creating a splash. Thirteen corners were taken in the hour's struggle of which Deloro were awarded eight. With the exception of the corner which led to Kennedy scoring, they were of the fruitless type. Cousins who played centre for the local eleven opened the scoring after five minutes of play beating Bawden with a low shot. Belleville became aggressive but Murray cleared well. Play being taken to the other end brought a corner to Deloro. The kick was well taken but the forwards mussed their chance. Belleville broke away with some good combination and Norridge equalized with a splendid shot. Deloro making several rushes in endeavoring to regain the lead, Bawden was at length tested. He fell in clearing a low shot, the ball going to Cousins who sent it in with a bang. This was all the scoring when the team changed ends. End to end rushes materializing in corners featured play for ten minutes of the second half. Finally Kennedy evened the score. From the kick off Deloro again attacked and Groves scored a neat goal on a fine pass from W. Brown. In the last stages darkness made the game a greater comedy than it had been from the start. Football togs all around looked ready for the Monday wash tub. The referee had difficulty in watching play with the fast rushes being indulged in. To Howard fell the honor of scoring the final goal. The natural whistle of Referee Shell sounded with play in midfield. For Deloro Groves and Southern made their first appearance and justified their inclusion.

Teams:

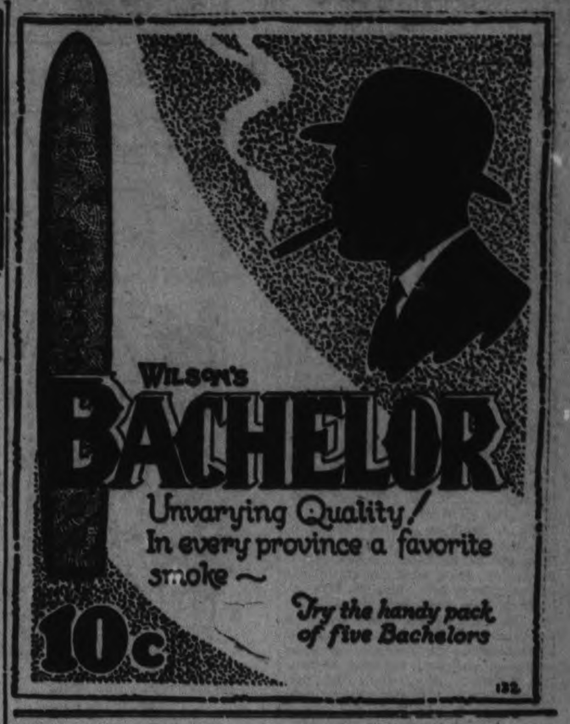
Linesmen—A. Smith and W. Brown.

Referee—Mr. F. B. Shell.



FOUR COUNTRIES IN QUARTER FINALS

Fight It Out for Olympic Honors on Sloten Canal.

SLOTEN, Holland, Aug. 7.—(Canadian Press.)— The field remaining for the quarter finals starting today in the Olympic regatta, indicates that Great Britain, Canada, Gemany and the United States will fight it out for rowing honors on the Sloten canal as closely as they fought on the Olympic track.

Joe Wright of Canada got back into competition yesterday morning when he defeated Bernasconi, of Italy, in 7 minutes, 9 2-5 seconds over the 2,000 metre course.

Wright meets Collett, of England, whom he defeated in England, in the quarter final to-day. Other single scullers surviving are Pearce, Australia, Myers, United States, Straka, Czecho Slovakia, Gunther, Holland, Saurin, France, and Candevau, Switzerland. Bob Pearce meets Saurin and Myers rows Candevau today.

Eights in the quarter final round are Canada, Great Britain, Germany, the United States, Poland, Holland, Italy and Denmark.

Double sculling combinations surviving are Canada, the United States, Germany, Austria, Holland, Italy and France.

Pairs without coxswain remaining are Great Britain, the United States, Germany and Italy.

Fours without coxswain are Britain, Italy and the United States.

An upset was the victory of the German sculls crew, Hoeck and Veight over Joe Wright and Jack Guest of Canada.

The Canadian eight crew meets Poland to-day, Britain battles Germany, and the United States tackles Italy.

The total amont of damage caused by the recent flood disaster in Vermont is estimated at $30,000,000.

PHILLIES WIN DOUBLE BILL

Tail-enders Defeat Chicago Cubs by 6-7 and 5-1 Scores.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

NEW YORK, August 7.—(Canadian Press).—The lowly Phillies gave the Chicago Cubs a rude jolt yesterday by handing them a double licking. The tail-enders won the first game a double header 8 to 7 and the second 5 to 1.

Slipshod fielding by the Cubs helped the Phillies to runs in both games. Hack Wilson hit two home runs in the first game each time with a man on base, and brought his total for the season to 26.

The Phillies pounded Charley Root hard in the pinches in the second game, while Alex Ferguson held the Cubs to eight hits.

Other teams did not play.

Loughran Signed to Meet Sharkey

NEW YORK, Aug 7.—(Canadian Press).—Evidently prepared to relinquish his lightheavyweight title, Tommy Loughran yesterday signed articles with Tex Rickard for a 15 round bout against the Boston Lithuanian, Jack Sharkey, at Madison Square Garden, Oct. 5. Sharkey's signature has not yet been obtained but his manager, Johnny Buckley is to confer with Rickard here to-day.

After Gene Tunney's retirement, Loughren announced he was ready to abandon his 175-pound crown and cast his lot with the heavyweights.

EAST LEADS IN CANOE REGATTA

Grand Trunk Boating Club Captures Seven Out of Eleven Championships.

IMPRESSIVE SHOWING

LACHINE, Que., Aug. 7 (Canadian Press).—The Eastern division, led by the crack crews of the Grand Trunk Boating Club, swept through to an overwhelming victory over the Western, Northern and Algonquin divisions at the 26th annual regatta of the Canadian Canoe Association, held here Saturday. The Eastern division, comprising clubs in Montreal and district, captured seven of the eleven championships in the meet, scoring an aggregate of 45 points out of a possible 88, amassing a total that surpassed that of the other three divisions put together.

Grand Trunk made the most impressive showing of the individual clubs, carrying the regatta to a dramatic climax by capturing first place in the last four races on the program, after having been able to garner only one third place in the first seven events.

Starting with the Intermediate Fours, the Trunks swept through to victory in the Junior Tandem, the Senior Fours, and wound up in a blaze of glory by winning the One-Mile War Canoe race, the last and feature event on the program.

The Mile War Canoe race, a befitting ending to a day of brilliant competition, was one that will be long remembered by those who witnessed it, a race in which the finish called forth one of the wildest demonstrations ever witnessed at a C.C.A. regatta, and a victory that was gained over one of the strongest fields of war canoes that ever competed in a Dominion championship meet.

Grand Trunk went into the race conceded but a small chance to win against the strong crews from Ottawa and Toronto, following the impressive showing made by the boats of the New Edinburghs and Parkdale crews. But the longer mile race told a different story. Grand Trunk spurted to the front at the start and maintained a pace that only the Burghs of Ottawa, of a field of eight, could maintain.

Greatest Race

The entire race was only between these two, first one leading and then the other. It was the greatest race in the history of Dominion paddling. Barely one hundred yards from the finish, the Ottawa crew held a half-boat length lead, gained at the two hundred yard mark. Under instructions from Captain Bert Barker, the Trunks then made their final bid for victory. The Burghs tried to meet this final challenge of the Montrealers, and while they had the courage, they lacked the stamina, and just before the finish line was reached, the Trunks flashed by, winners by one stroke of the paddle. The Balmy Beach crew of Toronto finished third.

While the morning events were run off with dispatch and precision in ideal paddling weather, the afternoon events were somewhat marred by five different storms, the rain coming down in torrents on each occasion. Three times a halt in the proceedings had to be called, until as such time the telements desisted. It was close to eight o'clock when the last event, the Mile War Canoe get underway.

Northern Division Second

In the divisional scoring, the northern division, clubs of Ottawa and Gananoque, just nosing out the Toronto clubs, Western division representatives, by the narrow margin of one point. The Algonquin division, represented by Sudbury, scored one second place for two points.

The Lachine Club, upon whose course the regatta was staged, compiled a total of 15 points to finish next to Grand Trunk in the individual scoring.

Retains Singles Title.

The senior singles title was retained by Frank Amyot, of the Rideau Canoe Club, of Ottawa. The champion jumped into a short lead soon after the start, retained it at the turn, and led the field home by three lengths. Roy Nurse, of Balmy Beach, Toronto, a former Canadian champion and one of the veterans of the game, was second to Amyot, while E. Jarvis, of Lachine, who had previously captured first place honors in the intermediate singles event, finished third. Sandy Lindsay, veteran Lachine representative, and one of the pre-race favorites was disqualified at the starting boom for delaying the race.

The Henry Birks Trophy, emblematic of the Canadian half-mile war canoe championship, was won by the Ottawa New Edinburgh crew, captained by R. Gisborne, with two Toronto crews, Parkdale and Balmy Beach second and third, respectively. The Rideau crew, one of the race favorites finished absolutely last in a preliminary heat held earlier in the meet, thus losing a place in the final.

Rideaus, of Ottawa, scored an impressive victory in the senior tandem event, Barryman and Butler beating a strong field. These two and the Lachine entry, Lindsay and Robert, beat the rest of the entrants from the start and fought it out between them. Lachine led fifty yards from the finish by a scant margin, but collapsed under the final powerful spurt staged by the Ottawa duo. Nurse and Porter, of Balmy Beach, finished third.

A well-deserved victory in the junior fours was scored by the St. Rose Club of the Eastern Division. This club has but six paddling members, four of them being placed in their only shell for Saturday's Dominion championship event. The shell was originally used in Canadian title races in 1902, and at present is somewhat the worse for wear. The four youngsters from St. Rose were conceded little or no chance of even figuring among he first three. They fooled the wise ones, however, and coasted home easy winners, their smooth and powerful stroking giving them a four-length advantage at the finish line. Gananoque were second while Parkdale came home in third position.

The senior fours were captured by Grand Trunk.

Brilliant Pageant.

The regatta provided the historic Lachine course with a brilliant pageant, dense crowds lining the banks from the starting to turning buoys, while canoes, rowboats, and motor launches dotted the shore line on either side, the entire length of the course. The heavy rain, however, somewhat clouded over the brilliant picture presented, but failed to dampen the ardor of the real, dyed-in-the-wool paddling enthusiasts.

SOCCER MEETING TO-NIGHT (TUESDAY)

A special meeting of the local Association will be held to-night in the Chamber of Commerce rooms at 8 o'clock. Business important.

DISQUALIFIED

The Canadian girls' team at the Olympics got a "tough" break when Myrtle Cook, the ace of the Canadian sprinters, was disqualified for false starts.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

RICHARD DIX IN "MAN POWER" WINS PLAUDITS

Richard Dix reached the Regent last night in his latest Paramount hit "Man Power." And hit it is!

'Man Power" is entirely different from anything Dix has done in the past. No longer is he a college athlete or prize ring hero. In "Man Power" Richard appears as a strapping former officer of the U. S. Tank Corps who endeavors to turn a dilapidated tractor factory into an up-and-going success. Needless to say, he does, but not until obstacles have made him stumble again and again.

The picture opens as Dix pulls into town on an empty freight car. Saving Mary Brian from what he imagines to be a terrible death, he decides to settle down in her home town. Entering the leading industrial plant, he is told to make a group of run-down tractors workable. It doesn't take him long to discover Mary's father is president of the factory, nor does it occupy any more time to discover why Philip Strange, the manager, doesn't enjoy his company. The final smash comes on a rainy night when a dam, far above the little valley town, is about to overflow its high walls. Richard finally gets one of the tractors running. He attaches a couple of trailers, loads them with sand bags and—starts on one of the most thrilling rides which have ever been shown on the screen.

"Man Power" brings a star to the Regent screen who is just now at the top of his cinematic career. When we say that Dix has never been better, we mean it! Clarence Badger, the man who made "Senorita" directed. Sam Mintz and Ray Harris adapted Byron Morgan's story. Louise Long prepared the continuity.

CANADIANS WIN DOUBLES HEAT

Wright Eliminated From Singles at Sloten This Afternoon.

COLLETT BEATS HIM.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 7 (By T. S. Louden, Special Correspondent of the Canadian Press).—Joe Wright, of the Toronto Argonaut Rowing Club, was eliminated from the Single Sculls at the Olympic Regatta to-day, when he was defeated by David Collett, of England, by two lengths over the 2,000 metre course on Sloten Canal. Collett's time was 7 minutes, 52 seconds.

Wright's defeat in the quarter finals, his second in the regatta, followed a victory in the doubles in which he paired with Jack Guest, his clubmate, to defeat a French double crew by four length in 7 minutes 21 seconds.

Wright and Guest rowed a brilliant race in the doubles following their defeat yesterday by Hoeck and Voight, of Germany. The defeat of Robineau and Caplin, the French pair, put them out of further competition as they have suffered two defeats. At the start Wright and Guest rowed thirty-six strokes to the minute and the Frenchmen, forty. At the quarter mark, the Canadians were trailing by a length, but at the 750 metre mark they drew up steadily, rowing a long, steady thirty strokes to France's thirty-six. The Argonaut crew passed the Frenchmen and had a length lead shortly after they had passed the half-way mark. The Canadians then dropped their stroke to twenty-six and drew gradually away, winning by four lengths.

Wrights defeat to-day eliminates him from any further contests for the Olympic Single sculling honors.

GIRL SWIMMER RETAINS TITLE

Martha Morelius and Arne Berg Merged as Olympic Champions.

SETS NEW RECORD.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 6 (Canadian Press).—In a Big Six soccer fixture at Lansdowne Park Saturday afternoon Carsteel of Montreal, defeated the Ottawa eleven by two goals to nil, scoring once in each half. Displaying accurate combination and pretty ball control the visitors took the offensive from the start and had the locals penned in their own territory except for occasional breakaways which spent themselves on reaching the backs. Twelve minutes from the kick-off this attacking bore fruit, as Westwater scored a well-placed cross by Cook.

Before half time a heavy thunderstorm broke and play was suspended for several minutes during its height. The playing field was drenched, making conditions impossible for good football.

In the second half a second storm made things even worst, but despite this, Carsteel managed to score in the dying moments ofthe game. Fitzpatrick gave Frame no chance with a shot from close in after a pass from Westwater.

The winners were clearly the better team on the play, and it was only the stellar work of Frame in the Ottawa goal that kept the score so low.

The teams were:

Carsteel.—Robertson, goal; Smith and Butler, backs; Thompson, Martyn and Stott, halves; Westwater, Brown, Fitzpatrick, Cook and Johnston, forwards.

Ottawa.—Frame, goal; Calderwood and Tighe, backs; Ward, Martin and Myles, halves; Lowson, Doig, Torrance, Macdonald and Stewart, forwards.

Referee—J. Graham, Ottawa.

VOTE TO RETAIN WOMEN'S EVENTS

Olympic Leaders Refuse, However, To Allow Full List of Competitions.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 7.—(Canadian Press).—International Amateur Athletic Federation, after spirited debate, to-day voted fourteen to six to retain the women's track and field events in the Olympic program by a vote of fourteen to eight, however, it rejected the full list of ten events asked by the women's International sports federation.

CARSTEEL WINS FROM OTTAWA

Capital City Defeated 2-1 in Big Six Soccer Fixture.

PLAY GOOD COMBINATION

AMSTERDAM, August 7.—(Canadian Press).—Martha Norelius of New York and Arne Borg of Sweden, merged as Olympic champions at the conclusion of the first two finals in the swimming events yesterday. Miss Norleius retained her title won at Paris in 1924, at the 400 metre distance in which three British girls won places and Borg displaced Andrew "Boy" Charlton of Australia from supremacy in the 1500 metres for men, in which Garnet Ault of Canada won sixth. Both were world's record performances.

There were only two finals on the day's swimming program but preliminary competition got under way in the 200 metre breats stroke swim and in springboard diving. Eric Jdemacher of Germany world's record holder won his last in new Olympic record time of 2 minutes, 52 seconds.

Covering 400 metres in five minutes, 42 4-5 seconds, Miss Norleius easily retained her championship won in 1924. Her time was two and three fifths seconds faster than the world's record she herself established Saturday in a preliminary heat, and was 19 2-5 seconds faster than she made in winning the crown at Paris.

In the other feature race, Borg defeated off Charlton and Crabbs in the first few strokes, getting a big lead which he was able to hold in part despite a great bid by the Australian in the last half of the race which sent him well ahead of the Hawaiian boy.

Borg's time of 19 minutes 15 4-5 seconds better the world and Olympic marks now on the books. It was made possible by a tremendously fast early pace which many of the onlookers believed would kill off the Swede before the finish line was reached, but he kept on with little diminution of speed over the remainder of the distance.

KINGSTON LOSES CHANCE TO CLIMB

Wins First Game From Oshawa, But Loses Second Match.

KINGSTON, Ont., Aug. 7 (Special to The Examiner).—Kingston lost a chance to tie with Oshawa in second place in the C.O.B.L. standing, when, after winning the morning game by 5 to 0, they fell to places and were beaten by the Motor City team in the afternoon by 12 to 1.

Fournier's pitching made the morning game a beautiful exhibition, but in the afternoon they piled up the errors of omission and commission and Oshawa romped to an easy victory.

Oshawa secured only four scattered hits off Fournier in the morning, and the Kingston twirler was never in great danger.

In the afternoon, Jamieson was knocked from the mound in the sixth and Buck fared little better. With good support, however, the locals might have pulled a double win.

SPECIAL EVENTS KEENLY CONTESTED

Rain Fails To Mar Preliminary Regatta at Juniper Island.

STONEY LAKE, August 1. — The special events regatta was run off successfully at Juniper Island on Saturday afternoon, and the attendance was good in spite of the two drenching showers which showed that the St. Swithin's Day prophecy was running true to form, with rain at least once a day. The first shower, which was like a miniature cloudburst, broke about two o'clock just after the dinghy and canoe sailing races had got well away. It was, however, of brief duration, and the paddle round Juniper Island scheduled for 2.15 was only five minutes late in getting off, with a smaller number of entries than ever before, as only three men volunteered. The rain gave an encore to its first performance while they were engaged at this strenuous undertaking.

The committee consisted of Messrs. G. K. Fraser, J. H. Renwick, George Guillett, and F. W. Jones, and the races were run off in good time, and in most of the events with a good list of entries.

The first event was the dinghy sailing, which brought out nine entries. Seven finished, while two, who were inexperienced, were capsized, but managed to reach an island, and were ultimately restored to their friends. This race was a particularly good one, much better in every respect than last year when only five entered. Reg. Dixon, last year's winner, again took first place, with Otto Gliddon a good second. Reg. Dixon, who has won this race three years in succession, holds the G. K. Fraser Cup.

The canoe sailing brought only three entries, and was easily won by Bill Chapman, Roslyn Russell taking second place.

The entries for the paddle round Juniper were disappointing, as seven entered last year and six the previous year. The race was really between Jack Ridnath, last year's winner, and Don. Fitz Gerald, winner in 1926.

Don. won the race making a time record of 22 minutes 52 seconds. Ridpath was second with 23 minutes 40 seconds.

The best time in 1927 was 24 minutes, and in 1926, 23 minutes.

The outboard motor boat race did not come up to last year's exhibition, when four boats entered and kept the spectators guessing till the finish. Only two entered this year and Don Jory romped him an easy winner, with J. Gardiner taking second place. The Peterborough Canoe Company did not enter a racing boat this year, and Mr. Gardiner had a seven passenger craft, which was a considerable handicap.

The Open Sailing was especially good, with eight entries, one more than last year and double the 1926 entries. Otto Gliddon won first place; Reg Dixon, second; Tom Van Alta, the third place; Gordon Matthews took fourth place with the "Skidly."

At four-thirty the swim from Lech's Island to Juniper took place with eighteen entries. This was in many ways the premier event of the afternoon's program. The entry list of eighteen was the best yet, and of these fourteen finished, including the six girls who represented the fair sex in the contest.

This race is sponsored by Mrs. Gordon K. Fraser, who presented a handsome trophy thwree years ago to the association for this race, which covers a distance of 1,217 yards.

The first year (1925) it was won by Don Fitzgerald and in 1926 by Tom Van Atta, with Fitzgerald second place; in 1927, Fitzgerald won and this year Van Atta again took first place, with Fitzgerald second. Van Atta is said to be champion swimmers of West Point college, N.Y. His time was 20 minutes and 20 seconds, Fitzgerald's time was 21 minutes, 50 seconds.

The first lady to finish was Margaret Strickland, who was fifth in the race. Her time was 26 minutes 50 seconds. J. Guillett and W. R. Thompson took third and fourth places respectively. The youngest participant in the swimming race was Ruth Gouinlock, the thirteen year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Gouinlock. She finised tenth.

A motor race came as rather an anti-climax after the swimming event, which had held the attention of everyone, and Messrs. J. R. Dodworth and Roslyn Russell, who were the only contestants, went over the course with practicaly no audience and no encouraging applause. The former finished an easy winner.

J. N. Gouinlock announced that badges and programs would be sold on Monday in aid of the Star Fresh Air Fund and hoped that the response would be generous to this splendid cause.

It was also announced that the prizes would be presented immediately after the regatta.

The only thing which failed during the afternoon was the announcer's gun which did not always connect with its announced schedule. The fault lay, not with Mr. Jones or the gun, but with the shells. A hundred blank shells were ordered and one hundred empty shells were neighborhood was combed for shells sent, and although the immediate the results were not satisfactory. However, the program was run off easily and the episode provided one of "life's little comedies" whichout which no regatta is complete.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 4.—(Canadian Press.)— "Low powered brains directing high-powered cars" was one of the greatest dangers on the highways of Canada at present, W. B. Hastings, well known automotive engineer, said in a radio talk on safe motoring from a Toronto station. He declared that it was lamentable that such a large percentage of brakes was allowed to become inefficient Mr. Hastings also pointed out that "safe speed" could not be determined offhand. Twenty-five miles an hour in some circumstances would be slow, but 25 miles an hour on a street packed with children at play would be criminal. Regarding people who habitually drive at 50 miles an hour, he declared that such practice would sooner or later result in a crash.

AIR MAIL RATE NOW FIVE CENTS

Agreement Reached With U. S. For Letters Posted in Canada.

MUCH TIME SAVED.

Air mail is now cheaper, the rate being reduced to five cents for the first ounce. A saving of time is also found in the sending of mail by air. C. Laucheur, local Postmaster, in an interview with The Examiner, furnished the following information.

Air Mail Fee to United States Reduced

The public is informed that by agreement with the United States postal administration the air mail fee for all classes of mail matter posted in Canada intended for transmission over any United States air mail route has been reduced to five cents for the first ounce, and ten cents for each addition ounce or fraction thereof.

A five cent Canadian air mail stamp will be issued shortly, but ordinary Canadian postage stamps may also be used in Canada to prepay air mail for conveyance over any United States air mail route. In all cases covers should be conspicuously endorsed "Via Air Mail." The above rate, prepaid by Canadian postage stamps, includes both the postage and air mail fee. The post office department will see that all letters sent in the above fashion will be routed the quickest way.

All letters are posted in the usual way, only marked as above. The western air mail connects with the plane at Detroit. Mail posted in Peterborough in time for the Smith's Falls-Toronto train, which closes at the local post office at 2.45, will make connections in time for the plane at Detroit, taking it to Cleveland and then to California with stops at intermediate points. When picked up at Chicago, it leaves there at 7.50 p.m. central standard time, arriving in San Francisco at 4.30 p.m. the following day, which is a saving of three days from here to the coast, counting the time it takes a letter to go from here to reach the plane.

The mail going east and south closes in Peterborough at 8 p.m. It is picked up usually at Boston, although New York will service the mail also. When the mail travels from Boston to New York by air, it leaves Boston at 6.15, arriving in New York at 9.15, which means a saving of twenty-four hours from here, Mr. Lacheur told The Examiner.

Then there is the regular air mail service from Rimouski, which has proved successful in saving time of the mail from incoming steamers.

The time of experimenting is passed and now thousands of letters travel via air. Peterborough people are taking advantage of this service already and are sending their letters by plane, and the Postmaster tells that the number is growing all the time.

AIR SUPPLIED TO SUB CREW

Divers Able To Attach Cable To Italian Vessel Sunk Yesterday.

WAVES HINDER WORK.

ROME, Aug. 7.—(Canadian Press)—Rescue workers, laboring all night to bring aid to the crew of the Italian submarine F. 14, sunk in the Adriatic early yesterday have succeeded in attaching a pipe to the crippled vessel in order to supply air to the imprisoned men.

The divers also were able to tie a steel cable to the F. 14, which sank after a collision with a destroyer during manuevers. The crew of the ship was known to be still alive to-day and they were maintaining communication with the rescuers by means of a submarine telephone.

The rescuers were racing against time in their effort to refloat the submarine since it was feared that her water tight compartments might give way at any moment. Her maximum safe depth is 75 feet and she now is flying in 130 feet of water, so that it is only a matter of time before the water tight compartments yield.

Although communication with the submarine is being maintained it is not known how many members of the crew are still alive and it is feared that some may have been killed by the first rush of water which was prevented from flooding the entire submarine by her water tight compartments. Efforts to lift the submarine will be started as soon as possible, but the work is being greatly hindered by heavy seas.

Night express airplanes are soon to be put into service from Paris to Berlin, Paris to Rome, and Paris to Casablanca.

Fire Alarm Rung in for Fire in Car

"If your car or your chimney catches fire, do not pull a fire alarm box but phone 100," was the request voiced by Fire Chief Gimblett this morning, in discussing an alarm which came in from the corner of Dublin and George streets at 10.17 last night. A driver had taken the wrong method of calling out the brigade. His car was not seriously damaged by a fire which was soon extinguished.

There was one other alarm on the Sabbath, coming from 576 Stewart street at 3.23 p.m. A chimney fire required four chemicals before the danger was eliminated.

ASSOCIATION MEETS HERE

N. Phillips, the assembled delegates informally discussed ways, means or methods of handling various phases of their work. Throughout there was apparent a desire to improve all things pertaining to funeral work so that the utmost in kindness and sympathy may prevail.

Exhibits Inspected.

To the 1st vice-president John Comstock, of Peterborough, who has left nothing undone to bring the convention to Peterborough, and provide for its success in this city, fell the duty of formally opening of the exhibits on the main floor of the armouries. The tour of inspection encountered the finest handiwork of many trades.

In all there were more than sixteen booths or displays by the following firms:

Canicula Chemical Company, Toronto.
Central Casket Company, Ltd., Toronto.
Champion Chemical Company, Springfield, Ohio, and Toronto.
Dominion Manufacturers Ltd., Toronto, and branches.
H. S. Eckels & Co., Philadelphia and Toronto.
Evel Casket Company, Ltd., Hamilton.
A. B. Greer & Son, London.
Guelph Casket Co., Ltd., Guelph.
Messenger Publishing Co., Toronto.
Meteor Motor Car Company, Piqua, Ohio.
Northern Casket Company Ltd., Lindsay.
Polusterine Products Ltd., Toronto.
St. Thomas Metallic Vault Company, St. Thomas.
Sterling Casket Co., Ltd., Toronto.
Stratford Casket Co., Ltd., Stratford.
Studebaker Corporation, Walkerville.

The Exhibits.

On Entering the armories from the east end, one first encounters, on his right, a number of beautifully designed and appointed funeral coaches, some by the Studebaker corporation and several exhibited by Q. B. Greer and Son of London, as well as the Meteor Motor Car Company. Sixes and eights are there for inspection, powerful and luxurious.

On the south side, the Dominion Manufacturers Ltd. have occupied the largest single floor space in the building, with a display that must be seen to be appreciated. There is a Chapel tent, for private funerals, a hermetically sealed metal vault with an automatic lowering device and there is a wide range of beautifully designed caskets in plain and quarter cut oak, walnut and mahogany as well as covered and metal ones in an equally wide range of prices. There is one bronze casket, with inside covering of oval plate glass, making it hermetically sealed. The creation is valued at approximately $4,000, and is attracting much favorable comment. Then there was a comprehensive display of morgue equipment, instruments, a catafalque, ambulance cots and in the centre of the casket display is a Catholic setting, complete with mass card holder, two candle sticks each holding 72-hour candles, a crucifix, prayer rail and prayer rail panel.

The other casket companies above named, have equally as attractive displays of their wares, one vieing with the other in range of casket lines. The Chemical companies are on hand with their preparations, interesting for the most part to the undertaker.

'Phone Service.

The Messenger Publishing Company, originators of Religious Art calendars, have placed at the disposal of those attending the convention a complete telephone service for the handling of local and long-distance calls. Through the courtesy of the Bell Telephone Company a private number has been installed. Booth Number 1 to be 3191.

While it is not a complete list of the delegates, the names published below are those of some of the delegates who had arrived previous to press time. More are arriving hourly, and the names will appear later:

She Gained Weight With McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablets

You remember of course—not so way she looked.

long ago she was a regular scarecrow—skinny is a mild word for the

Just look at her now—if ever a woman had a perfect figure she has it—she is the envy of half the girls in town.

It's nothing to get excited about—all she did was to take on weight—filled out the hollows in face, neck and chest—any skinny, weak, run down woman can do the same and gain a clean, clear complexion at the same time.

McCoy takes all the risk—Read this ironclad guarantee. If after taking 4 sixty cent boxes of McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablets or 2 one dollar boxes any thin, underweight man or woman doesn't gain at least 5 pounds and feel completely satisfied with the marked improvement in health—your druggist is authorized to return the purchase price.

Wheat Prices Go Up On Rumors Of Demand

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.— (Canadian Press)—Helped by relative firmness of Liverpool quotations, wheat prices averaged higher early to-day in Chicago. Predictions were current that Japan would make heavy purchases of Canadian Wheat and would also take considerable wheat from the United States. Opening ¾ off to ⅞ up, Chicago wheat later showed gains all around. Corn also developed an upward trend, starting unchanged to half a cent higher and afterward scoring a general advance. Oats were steady.

Opening prices were:—Wheat, September, 114⅞; December, 120¼. Corn December, 75⅛. Oats, September, 38¼; December 41⅛.

Toronto Trading Active But Decline Is General

TORONTO Aug. 7.— (Canadian Press)—Although trading was rather active at the morning session of the Toronto Stock Exchange today, prices suffered a decline. Most of the losses, however were fractional. But a few of the issues experienced quite a severe slump. International Nickel, with slow trading, was down 2¼ at 98¾ as compared with Friday's prices. Consolidated Smelters was down nine at 241 and Steel of Canada was 14½ lower at 165½. Loblaw was off three at 83, while Massey-Harris, Page Heresy, and Photo Engravers were each down a half at 38, 91 and 35½ respectively. Canada Dredge, selling at 42, was down 2½ and Canadian Industrial Alcohol was own one at 37¼.

Mine Prices Irregular With Trading Active

TORONTO, Aug. 7.— (Canadian Press).—Trading was active on the Standard Stock Exchange today following the week-end holiday. Prices tended to be irregular with losses predominating. Some sharp declines were registered as compared with Friday's close, but gains on whole were fractional. Noranda weakened at the close to sell at 55.50, a loss of 2.50, and Hollinger was down 55 at 8.75. Wright Hargreaves was strong and closed with a gain of 5 at .330. Malartic advanced nine to 1.34. Hudson Bay at 18.05 was down 30 and Pend Oreille dropped 20 to 13.50. The other Western issues were firmer. Central Manitoba gained two to 96, Mandy ten to 3.30 and Coast Copper, 1.00 to 39.00. Sherritt Gordon was unchanged at 6.60.

(Unofficial Opinions on the Markets

MONTREAL, Aug. 7.—International Nickey continues to stand out conspicuously in trading in New York as well as Montreal as one of the few stocks demonstrating its ability to move unerringly against the trend. The forthcoming earning statement which is expected to be given out next Tuesday will, it is said, make cheerful reading for the followers of this highly-thought-of stock. Nickel continued to advance on the belief that the company would probably benefit this year from the increased earnings resulting from the vigorous expansion program affecting sales undertaken by the company during 1927.

Imperial Oil—From an investment standpoint, holders of Imperial Oil shares might well disregard transitory movements in the light of the company's excellent and well defined expansion both in scope of activities and earning power. The company is by far the largest and strongest of the various oil companies doing business in this country. Reported sales for the current year to June 30th show a satisfactory improvement over the corresponding period of 1927 and many new units have been placed in operation.

The Imperial Oil shares have hidden asset value represented by the substantial appreciation in realty and leaseholds owned by the company for which no allowance is made in the balance sheet. The shares generally sell on a basis to discount future prospects a considerable distance ahead and income return is small but in view of the fact that the stock certificate of this company and of its subsidiary, the International Petroleum, has only sufficient coupons attached thereto to last until late in 1928 it is believed that the shareholders will receive due consideraton before then if the improvement in the oil industry continues. Whether this development will be in the form of a stock dividend only time will tell.

Noranda—According to the latest advices the Noranda Mines have found it necessary to reduce tonnage approximately 800 tons per day. Production is continuing however, at 70 to 80 tons of blister copper per day. The gold value in this copper during the past two weeks has been approximately $110 per ton. This production is at the rate of $832,000 monthly.

Steel work on the new concentrator is now completed and should be in operation by October. Brick work, and the installation of machinery and equipment is proceeding.

It is stated on very good authority that the company has asked for quotations on two additional blowers of the Bellias and Morcom type. Plans, also, are being drawn up for the addition of two reverberatory furnaces, eight roasting furnaces, and two converters This equipment means a unit twice as large as that now in operation. This looks like the first step towards a 3,500 or 4,000 ton plant.

With regard to the "K" orebody which has been further opened up on the 400 foot level, it is reported that the values on this level are much higher than were found above. Values are running over $60 per ton.

MONTREAL, Aug. 7—The weekend holiday gave time for reflection. It also gave the stock-brokers time to send out another shoal of margin calls, some of which were received Saturday and others to-day.

The situation is by no means encouraging to the bulls, as tight money continues, and there is no hint whatever as to when the banks will ease up.

Meanwhile New York keeps fairly strong, but the local list is not following it, except in the cases of Abitibi and Nickel.

Many people now seem to think that Abitibi may after all pay its regular dividend, but nobody knows, so that the course of the stock can only be guessed at. New York is known to be still bearish on it.

I am told that International Nickel is regarded in some shrewd circles as a good short sale right now; the argument being that it has been overbulled, and ought to sell off six or eight points before resuming its move.

The expectation is that the motor stocks will be leaders in this week's trading in New York, and that they will be stronger.

Lyall's three per cent. dividend is promised for this month. That should help the stock, though it was evident on Friday that some forced selling was taking place owing to weakened marginal accounts. That ought to be practically completed by the time these notes appear, and if the interests behind the stock do not want to see it lose entirely the public confidence it was building up, they will see to it that a recovery sets in at once.

Montreal Locomotive Company has received an order from the Government for winches for the Welland Canal, totalling $1,200,000.

International Paper Company will commence construction on its $15,000,000 pulp and paper plant near Dalhousie, N.B., next month. It is likely that the plant will begin operating on a 250 ton basis and expand later.

Although it is unlikely that dividend will be declared on Canada Steamships Common this year, both common and preferred stocks had been recommended in conservative investment circles.

Imperial Tobacco shareholders will vote this week on a proposal to increase the capital on the company by 3,000,000 shares. It is probable that a large part of this will be offered to present holders at $5 on a basis of one new for six old.

The program of expansion undertaken by the Imperial Tobacco Company is understood to included the acquisition of Andrew Wilson, Ltd., at a price around $2,000,000, and Punch Cigar Company at about $250,000. It is even said that Imperial has ambitions to absorb Tuckett Tobacco Company.

CANADIANS GAIN TEN POINT LEAD

St. Lawrence Yacht Club Leading at Four Race Series.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 7 (Canadian Press).—Royal St. Lawrence Yacht Club sailors had amassed a lead of ten points at the conclusion of their opening four-race series with two crews representing the Barnegat Bay Association here yesterday. Yesterday's encounter, the last of the series here, added another point to the nine which the local yachtsmen had won in the opening three races, the first of which was sailed Friday and the second and third Saturday. The eight-race series will be concluded early in August, when the Royal St. Lawrence Club will sail a four-race series off Side Park, N.J., using the boats of the Barnegat Bay Association.

The last race of the four saw the close of a unique triumph for Alec Shearswood, the Royal St. Lawrence skipper. On Friday he had piloted the Naulakah across the line first; in the first race he won with Mademoiselle; in the second contest he triumphed with the Zohra, and yesterday he accomplished what has never been done before in the history of these inter-club races, when he finished a close first with the Beaver.

Yesterday's race was sailed in the fastest time of any of the series. Before the contest was begun, three of the sloops—Beaver, Naulakah, and Zohra—found it necessary to reef a point, but Sonny Hanna, on Mademoiselle, carried full sail. Beaver, under Skipper Shearwood's smart handling, led the way on the beat to windward, the first leg of the nine mile course to first around the buoy. He kept his lead from then on, increasing it on the first round of the course but losing some of what he had gained on the windward beat on the second round. Naulakah, piloted by Ferdie Shoettle of Barnegat, fought it out with Mademoiselle, skippered by Hanna for third place on the first round of the course, while the Zohra under Al Harden of Barnegat, seemer a safe second. The boats kept this position for the first five legs of the course, but rounding the buoy into the sixth leg—a run before the wind—Harden, on Zohra was outfooted by both Mademoiselle and Naulakah, dropping back to challenge Mademoiselle for third place, while Naulakah raced ahead to finish second. Zohra and Mademoiselle staged a desperate struggle for third and raced bows abreast to cross the line in a dead heat.

ELEVEN PERMITS ISSUED IN WEEK

Work To Cost $2,990 Authorized By City Engineer.

Eleevn building permits valued at $2,990 were issued by City Engineer Parsons last week and work was commenced on the $35,000 new Mark Street United Church in East City by T. C. Ephgrave, the general contractor.

The eleven permits issued were all for repair work, additions, verandahs or garages. The Bradburn Estate is having considerable work done for it by George Sloan & Son. The cornice is being removed at 418 and 420 George Street, and the wall continued up further. At 261, 265, 267, and 269 Townsend Street the estate is having the houses repaired and in some cases modern conveniences installed. Mayor Denne took out a permit to have the roof of the block which he owns on Water Street reshingled at an estimated cost of $600. Brooks Brothers are building a small lean-to to the Brewery warehouse, and E. E. Sheehy is bricking and making repairs to the house at 515 Romaine Street.

NATIVE OF DUMMER IS KILLED BY CAR

Thomas Choate Fatally Hurt When Friend Steps On Accelerator in Error.

Thomas Choate, aged 70 years of Woodville, a former resident of Dummer township, was almost instantly killed yesterday afternoon at Birch oint, Balsam Lake. Mr. Choate was born in Peterborough county and for many years lived in the vicinity of Warsaw. A number of years ago he purchased a farm near Woodville and moved there. Mr. Choate, a member of the Woodville Fishing Club, drove to the point along with his wife in the car of Edward Drummond, Toronto. He got out and opened the gate and when Mr. Drummond stepped on the gas accelerator instead of the brake Choate was struck in the abdomen and died in half an hour.

OBITUARY

MRS. STEPHEN MILLER

On Monday, August 6, there passed away in Peterborough, Annie Rose Kidd, beloved wife of Stephen Miller, aged 59 years. She had resided at 123 James street, and leaves to mourn one daughter, living in Peterborough. She was born in Warsaw.

The funeral will take place from 123 James street on Wednesday, August 8, at 2 p.m., to Little Lake Cemetery, the Rev. J. E. Todd conducting the services in the absence of the Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe. The Rev. A. E. Thornley will assist him.

MRS. JOHN BEST.

MOUNT PLEASANT, August 7. — The funeral of the late Annie Margaret Thexton, wife of the late John Best of Peterborough, took place from the home of her daughter, in Peterborough, on Saturday afternoon to the Presbyterian Cemetery, Mount Pleasant.

The service at the grave was conducted by the Rev. David Wren, and the Rev. Mr. Greatrix, both of Peterborough. The pall bearers were Messrs. C. D. McFarlane, E. Best, L. Thexton, G. Richardson and Dr. Fulford.

The late Mrs. Best was born near Mount Pleasant almost seventy-five years ago, and was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Richard Thexton, but had lived in Peterborough for the past forty-five years.

Left to mourn her loss are her daughter, Mrs. C. D. McFarlane, of Peterborough; T. L. Best of Kingston, and Dr. Elmer Best, and S. Best, of Minneapolis, Minn.; also eight brothers, Robert, of Vancouver; Albert and Joseph of St. Thomas; N. D. William, of Winnipeg; Louis and Elmer of Chicago; and Walter and Harry of Minneapolis. Her husband, the late John D. and Thomas Thexton, both of Mount Pleasant, are also deceased.

The late Mrs. Best was very highly respected in this community and a large number of friends were present at the grave to pay their last respects. Among those from a distance present were Mr. and Mrs. I. T. Best of Kingston and Mr. Elmer Thexton of Chicago.

WILLIAM S. KNOWLES.

The death took place on Saturday evening at 11.30 p.m. at his residence, 305 Townsend street, of William S. Knowles. He was born in Dublin, Ireland, in 1853, and had resided in Peterborough since May, 1911, during which time he had made many friends.

There are left to mourn his loss a sorrowing wife, two sons and one daughter, John and Henry, of Toronto and Mrs. Annie Williams at home.

The funeral service was conducted this afternoon at 3 p.m. by the Rev. J. Douglas Paterson, of All Saints' church. Interment was made in Little Lake cemetery.

DEATH

MILLER.— On Aug. 6th, 1928, Mrs. Stephen Miller, 123 James street. Funeral arrangements later.

RESUSCITATION DEMONSTRATED

W. M. Cruthers Gives Address To Rotarians, Assisted By Two Colleagues.

INTERESTING TALK.

Resuscitation by the prone method was the subject of the address given by William Cruthers of the C.G.E. Engineering staff, to the Rotary Club, at their usual luncheon in the Empress Hotel. Practical demonstration was given by S. O. Shields as the demonstrator and S. C. Hayes as the victim, both of the engineering staff of the C. G. E.

Rotarian Lee Barns introduced Mr. Cruthers and his demonstrators, stressing the importance of life saving and mentioned the important address on the St. Lawrence Development to be given next Monday by the Hon. G. N. Gordon.

Mr. Cruthers first thanked the Rotarians as apparent of Peterborough for the splendid boys' camp they are fostering, and then started on his main topic. Resuscitation is fostered by many organizations all over the world. There are two methods, the better known pulmotor method which is mechanical and the Schaffer prone method which is manual. This was invented in Edinburgh by a professor named Schaffer and adopted by the Royal Medical society of England as well as the police and by engineers, electrical and gas societies all over the United States and Canada.

These associations have tested many methods and have found this the best. The pulmotor takes time to arrive at the scene of the accident, which means the loss of valuable minutes which results in a much longer time necessary to revive the victim. Another weakness of the pulmotor is that it is mechanical and it is not proper to deflate the lungs by a mechanical means. The manual method is the better.

The breathing action is familiar to all but many do not realize how it is done. An arch shaped muscle which forces the air into the lungs does the work. This is what the prone pressure method does manually. It works this muscle.

There are many known cases of success, two recently appeared in The Examiner. When a man's skull was rebuilt after he had suffered a severe electrical shock he had to be resuscitated in order that the doctor could work on him. A second case was where a New Jersey man had been revived after he had received a shock of many volts.

There is more danger of the ordinary man being gassed or drowned than shocked. In any case never lose any time in applying resuscitation and work on the victim wherever possible.

An accident by gas in Schnectady was cited as a case where after 35 minutes of work there was no indication of life but at the end of that time an eyelid flickered and then a finger moved after which the victim took one long breath and at the end of 45 minutes began to take short breaths. When the patient breathes the worker must adjust the action to his breathing.

Ordinary proofs of death are not always accurate in cases such as these and all help must be given before he is pronounced dead. The patient must be kept warm, especially in the case of drowning as the body cools rapidly when taken from the water.

Mr. Hayes and Mr. Shields then gave a practical demonstration on one of the tables in the grill room. Lifting the victim so as to empty out the water taken in the rescuer placed him on the table with hands overhead so as to give 30 per cent. more capacity to the lungs, placed his knees below the thighs and hands at the floating ribs and applied pressure on his hands.

The time is two seconds pressure, one second to come to an upright position, two seconds pause, and then repeat. This is the regular breathing period, but after the patient begins to breathe it is necessary to adjust the pressure to his breathing period.

Mr. Shields answered many questions and Mr. Cruthers gave instructions to the Rotarians, stressing the importance of the subject and the necessity of immediate operation.

Rotarian W. R. Morris occupied the chair and read a letter from Port Hope issuing an invitation to the street fair to be held in Port Hope. He also called the attention of the members to the article in the Rotarian this month by the past president in the convention number. He also told of the growth of Rotary and desired that the boys' work be continued after the summer camp closes.

Dave Melton of Oakville told of the electrical situation in Oakville in a one minute talk, and J. J. Turner told of his trip to the British Isles in similar brief fashion.

To-day's visitors were J. L. Burton of Toronto, D. Melton of Oakville, J. Mackey of Lindsay, J. Cairn, of Lindsay, G. Quirmbach of Brockville, E. Jeffcoat of Pittsburgh, M. Mayers, J. McFadden, of the city, H. L. Ormand of Dayton, H. C. Morris of Fort William, J. J. Turner, R. J. Devey and C. Devey of Peterborough.

Frank Morris, past president of the Bowmanville Club, dropped in after the luncheon to invite the boys to the street fair in his town, and to invite them to luncheon anytime they were there on a Friday.

RAIN DAMAGES RIPENED CROPS

Haying Operations, Already Late, Delayed Further, With Grain Harvest.

ALSIKE RUINED.

TORONTO, Aug. 7.— (Canadian Press).—Heavy rains throughout the province are causing the farmers much anxiety. While particularly ruinous showers were experienced in the central districts there was a fairly general downpour in all parts of the province during the past week.

Haying operations, already much delayed, received a further setback and the harvesting of the wheat, barley and alsike crops, which are now ripe was checked. The later crops, particularly oats, are in many cases flattened to the ground.

The effect of the bad weather on the alsike crop is perhaps the most serious. A good portion of this crop had been cut and all of it was ripe. Much seed was beaten out by the storms.

STRANDED SHIP BEING MOVED

Noronic Expected To Be Taken Off Rocks Near Port Arthur To-day.

PUMPS INSTALLED.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., August 7 (Canadian Press). — A fleet of five tugs and one lighter is to-day working at the stranded steamer Huronic, of the Canadian Steamship Lines, which ran on to the rocks of Lucille Island, off the mouth of Pigeon River, on Monday. It is expected that the vessel will be released to-day. Before this is done, however, additional precautions are to be taken to guard against a further inrush of water to the hold. For this purpose the pumping equipment from the salvage fleet is being installed and the hull put in shape to withstand the pressure that would follow her release.

The passengers taken off the Huronic have been taken to their various destinations by train. Special arrangements were made for the transportation of the passengers, most of whom were travelling to Sarnia, Windsor, and Detroit.

Canada's trade with the United Kingdom totalled, in 1927-28, $598,664,695 (a decrease of $13,293,454 over 1926-27). Exports were $412,776,114; imports, $185,888,581.

Wedding Bells

DINSDALE—HETHERINGTON.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in All Saints' church on Saturday afternoon at four o'clock, the Rev. J. Douglas Paterson officiating, when Hazel Caroline Hetherington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hetherington, Jackson avenue, was united in marriage to Carlos Geoffrey Dinsdale.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was attired in a white georgette sleeveless gown, the skirt accordion pleated and a pleated cape fell from the shoulders. The long, beautifully embroidered wedding veil was arranged with a bandeau of orange blossoms. Long white kid gloves, white kid shoes, with white silk hose completed the costume. She carried a bouquet of Columbia roses, maiden hair fern and baby breath.

Miss Helen Hethrington, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid. Her dress was of sand georgette, trimmed with lace of the same shade and she wore a large mohair picture hat of slightly darker shade and blonde shoes and stockings to match. She carried a bouquet of sweetheart roses and lily of the valley.

During the signing of the register, Mrs. Logan played Mendelssohn's bridal chorus.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where Mr. and Mrs. Dinsdale were assisted in receiving by Mrs. J. Hetherington, who looked very smart in a navy blue georgette with touches of sand and small blue felt hat. Mrs. Dinsdale, mother of the groom, wore black crepe with touches of ecru lace and black and ecru hat. A buffet luncheon was served to the intimate friends of the families.

The happy couple left for a trip to Toronto and Niagara, the bride travelling in a navy crepe dress with sand felt hat and blonde shoes and stockings. On their return from their honeymoon they will reside in the city.

BORDEN—LANG

A wedding of local interest took place on August 2, 1928, in the Salvation Army Central Hall, Calcutta, India, the contracting parties being Ensign Caroline May Lang, a former member of the Peterborough 1 Corps, second eldest daughter of the late Thomas Allan and Mrs. Lang, Elm street, and Ensign Owen Borden, formerly of London, England. The wedding was conducted by Lieut.-Col. McKenzie, of India.

WHEELER—ANDERSON

A very pretty wedding took place in Knox United Church, Lakefield, on Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock, when Miss Ethel Anderson, youngest daughter of Mr. David Anderson, of Lock 23 was united in marriage to Mr. Allan Wheeler of Toronto. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with flowers and potted ferns. The Rev. T. M. Wesley officiated and Miss Eita Garbutt played the wedding march while Miss McMillian sang "O Promise Me" during the signing of the register. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was a vision of loveliness in a sleeveless dress of white pussy willow crepe with skirt of chantilly lace, long veil of bridal net and chantilly lace held in place with seed pearls and a wreath of orange blossoms. She wore long white kid gloves, white kid shoes and silk stockings and carried a bouquet of pale pink tea roses with lily of the valley and maidenhair fern. The bridesmaid, Miss Marjorie Kincade, of Toronto, wore a dress of green flat crepe trimmed with gold lace, large blonde mohair picture hat and blonde shoes and hose to match, and carried a bouquet of deep pink roses and fern tied with rose ribbon. The flower-girl, Ada Dunbar, a neice of the bride was dressed in a bouffant dress of pink organdie and carried a basket of sweet peas, roses and lily of the valley.

Mr. Jack Wheeler, of Toronto acted as best man and the ushers were Mr. Stewart Anderson and Mr. Leslie Wheeler.

Mrs D. Anderson, the bride's mother, was gowned in crepe romaine, oakheart shade, with shoes and stockings to match, and had a corsage bouquet of sweet peas and fern.

Mrs. J. A. Wheeler, mother of the groom wore cocoa satin with hat and shoes to match, with bouquet of sweet peas and fern.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where decorations were carried out with pink and white streamers and white wedding bells with a profusion of flowers.

Later the bride and groom motored to Stoney Lake, where they will spend their honeymoon. The bride travelled in a blue crepe de chine dress with blue felt hat to match. On their return they will reside at Roger Road, Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler received many beautiful and useful gifts, among which was a mantle clock and silver casserole from the Ambrose Kent Co., Toronto, where Mr. Wheeler is employed.

PICNIC AT COBOURG.

Members of Park Street Church Make Journey By Bus.

Park Street Baptist Church held a picnic at Cobourg yesterday, Civic Holiday. Two buses chartered from the Peterborough Bus lines were filled, as well as many private cars.

Races, softball and swimming were all enjoyed, while the fat men's race was the blue ribbon event of the day. After the strenuous trip over the slippery detour and after the games, all were ready for lunch.

The big buses had quite a time getting over the Dale detour, but the careful drivers took the party down without a mishap. One driver said: "It is easy for a touring car but tough for a bus," as he remarked on the road.

Says Institute Best Gift To Britain

Ishbel MacDonald Shows Interest In Women's Work

Daughter of Former Premier Regrets That It Has Come Under Political Influence in Some Parts of Great Britain.

TAKES WOMEN INTO NEW SPHERES; IS THEREFORE HEALTHFUL INFLUENCE

Women Get More Out of Life Now and Make Greater Contributions Without Losing Romance and Charm.

(Exclusive to The Examiner)

MONTREAL, Aug. 8.—The Women's Institute, a movement which spread from Canada to the Old Country has proved to be one of the best gifts of the New World to the Old, was the opinion expressed at the Windsor Hotel, Montreal in a interview accorded to the Examiner by Miss Ishbel MacDonald, eldest daughter of former Premier James Ramsey McDonald, before departing on the train yesterday to Toronto. Miss MacDonald who displayed great interest in the Women's pages of The Examiner, especially the sections chronicling the activities of the Women's Institute, said that in some cases, especially in the rural districts of England, the usefulness of the institutions was impaired by their getting under the influence of political parties. "Sometimes the family of the largest land owners in the county managed to secure the dominant position and sway the course of the institution in the direction of the party which they favor" said Miss MacDonald. This exploitation of the movement was not confined to any one party, she added, but she felt that such movements were better if freed from outside influence and expressed the hope that the Women's Institutes of Canada would not become subject to political influences. There were many institutes in England, however that kept clear of politics entirely and where this condition prevailed, very good work was done.

Healthful Influence

Anything that tended to break women away from the old tradition that their place was the home only and they should attempt to enter no other sphere was a healthful influence, thought Miss MacDonald, who is herself a keen student of politics and a member of the London County Council. The idea that women ought to stay in the home was one that had gone into the discard, she thought.

The responsibility for the home was a joint one of man and womfin and in turn woman had a right to have something to say in the government of the country when its politics bore so directly on the lives of the women citizens and voters.

Far from thinking that women of to-day have lost something of the charm that was believed to reside solely in the ladies of less emancipated ages, Miss MacDonald believes that the woman of to-day gets more out of life and makes a greater contribution to society than did any of her predecessors. And life is quite as romantic for the woman of the twentieth century as it was for the Victorian maiden.

"I would not change with either one of them," she said. "When women are going out into professions instead of staying in what used to be thought the most desirable feminine sphere, they are gaining the pleasure and adventure of broader realms they did not dream of before. I think it is much better for them than just being stuck at home."

The opening of the universities and the learned professions hitherto reserved for men was only part of one great movement that had changed entirely the traditional attitude not only of women but of men towards the place woman should fill in the home, in society, and in the state. For the woman who was economically independent, life was tremendously interesting, especially when she endeavored to serve others less fortunate.

First Time in Canada.

Although she was thoroughly familiar with the English Peterborough, Miss MacDonald has never been in the vicinity of the city on the banks of the Otonabee; indeed her arrival this week at Quebec marked her first visit to Canada, although she accompanied her father on his last visit to the United States. Her two younger sisters, Sheila and Joan, are paying their first visit to the American continent, while her brother Malcolm travelled Canada some years ago as a member of a debating team from Cambridge University which came over here to contest the oratorical talent of the leading Canadian universities. All three ladies are looking forward with great interest to

NO RESTRICTION ON SMALL SHIPS

Japanese Hint at Some Features of Anglo-French Agreement.

CRUISERS IN TWO CLASSES.

TOKIO, Aug. 8.—(Canadian Press.)—Japanese naval authorities are reported to have hinted that the recent Anglo-French naval agreement makes these provisions:

First, cruisers shall be divided into two classes, those armed with guns over six inches and those with guns under six inches.

Second, restriction of the gross tonnage of destroyers, the size of which will not exceed 1800 tons.

Third, restriction of the gross tonnage of submarines over 600 tons, the size of which must not exceed 1,800 tons.

Fourth, no restriction to be placed on war craft under 500 tons.

The official naval spokesman stated that some parts of the forecast were correct and some incorrect. Japan was considering the matter, he said, intimating the authorities were in general accord with the agreement, although they thought it doubtful that the United States would concur.

LEGION SHOWS CASH SURPLUS

Ontario Command Receives Message From Prince of Wales To-day.

WANTS GOOD HISTORY.

KINGSTON, Aug. 8.—(Special to The Examiner—The Canadian Legion convention resumed at ten o'clock to-day. The auditors' report was considered. The general surplus account as of June 30, 1928, was 7,550 which included assets the value of which is problematical. The actual current cash position indicates a deficit of $2,620.21. They expressed the view that the present expenditures appear to be well controlled. The affairs are managed in an efficient business-like manner that must rebound to the credit of the Legion and command the public sympathy and support, so essential to progress. The income was $26,178.36, expenditure $30,960.23.

The Prince of Wales wired this morning, "My grateful thanks to all members of the Canadian Legion in convention at Kingston for their kind telegram which I much appreciate."

The reading of the despatch was received with cheers. The resolutions were taken up. The first authorized a bulletin which will be issued monthly, detailing for the information of the branches all matters of general interest handled by the Provincial officers. The Ontario Government is asked to discuss with other provincial governments, the providing of a uniform Canadian History, for use in the schools, dealing in an adequate manner with the part played by Canada and the British Empire in the Great War.

LIGHTNING BOLT WRITES RECORD IN PHOTOGRAPH

SCHENECTADY, Aug. 8—Natural lightning, untamed and destructive electricity, that is measured in millions of horsepower and millinths of a second, has been made to write a record of itself.

In the foothills of the Allegheny Mountains, near Lake Wallenpaupack, Pa., where engineers of the General Electric Company have been co-operaitng in experiments on the 220,000-volt transmission lines of the Pennsylvania power and light system for more than three years in an endeavor to ascertain the characteristics of lightning, the greatest enemy of high voltage transmission lines, a photographic record has been obtained, showing the nature of a lightning stroke on transmission wires before reaching the ground.

This was the first 220,000-volt line ever built in a lightning invested territory and the first in the world outside of California.

PETERBOROUGH MAN CHOSEN PRESIDENT OF ASSOCIATION; NEW LEGISLATION DISCUSSED

Election of Officers Important Part of This Morning's Session.

BREAKFAST MEETING.

Informal Discussion of Technical Matters Held Around Table This Morning.

John Comstock, you have been elected chief officer of this Association, and I now install you in that office for the coming year. It will be your duty to preside over all possible meetings of the Association—.

Thus speaking, F. W. Matthews, past president of the Ontario Funeral Service Association formally conveyed to John Comstock, of this city, promotion from the 1st Vice-Presidency, following elections which featured this morning's session of the convention being held in the Armmourles this week. The other members of the 1928-1929 executive installed were:

1st Vice-President—Harry Phillips, of Sarnia.

2nd Vice-President — Morley Bedford of Toronto.

3rd Vice - President — Preston Thompson, of Aurora.

Treasurer—Roger Milson, of Chatsworth.

Executive Secretary—George Logan, of London.

Director—G. R. Quirmbach, of Brockville.

Permanent Secretary — James O'Hagan, of Toronto.

The convening funeral directors were up bright and early this morning, attending in large numbers the breakfast meeting in the Empress Hotel at 8.30, where a brief informal discussion took place under the chairmanship of C. N. Greenwood, of Stratford. Preparation room requirements and other matters formed the subject of interesting questions and answers. T. E. Thompson, M.P., chairman of the Board of Examiners answered many queries. Adjournment then took place until the meeting proper, which began at 10 a.m. in the Armouries at the call of President Mundell.

New Act Discussed.

At the morning session, Mr. Thompson was again called upon and volunteered answers to a continuous round of questions applying directly to, or provoked by the new act for Ontario Funeral directors, copies of which were distributed. Of course, many of the members volunteered answers also.

Some of the queries were answered as follows:

Q.—Are electric signs to be scrapped?

A.—If your sign has not anything on it that has been disallowed by that clause of the act, it may remain up.

Q.—Does the act compel a man to get an equipment for a branch where an experienced assistant is employed, or may I use my equipment from my main office?

A.—If you open a branch and can

Britain is Leader in Smallpox Cases

LONDON, August 8. — Great Britain's smallpox record is the worst in Europe, according to a report issued by the health organization of the league of nations. While the decrease in the number of cases has been strongly marked in Europe as a whole, cases have increased considerably in Great Britain, both as regards number and the area of the country affected. Mortality, however, is low, the disease appearing chiefly in a mild form known as slastrim.

Even this light form of the disease has been stamped out in continental Europe, even in Switzerland, where between 1921 and 1928 it existed in epidemic form. No cases were reported from Switzerland in 1927 and it is believed that the fight against it has now been successfully ended.

Great Britain's record is much less happy than that of Switzerland. In 1927 there were 14,931 cases of smallpox in Great Britain —more than twice as many as in all the rest of Europe, where the figure was 6841. However only 49 deaths occurred in England and Wales during 1927, and there have been none in Scotland since 1922.

DESIGNS AUTO 125 FT. LONG FOR DESERT SERVICE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—An automobile 125 feet long, 25 feet wide and 45 feet high has been designed for desert travel by a German engineer, according to H. C. Schuette, Assistant Trade Commissioner at Paris.

This supervehicle will have wheel almost forty feet in diameter and will carry 150 passengers and 200 tons of merchandise. The designer claims the car could be used for large steppes and deserts where other means of transportation would involve unwarranted expense.

Through the employment of compensation devices the wheels will adhere to the ground in whatever position the car may be so that the body always will be at a convenient angle. The machine will be operated by two Diesel engines of 650 horsepower each, one to be held in reserve for emergencies. There will be two dynamos for light and electromotor power.

Delegates Are Made Welcome

Mayor Denne Places City at Disposal of Men of Convention.

BANQUET HELD.

Pass Motion To Elect Officers From the Floor of Conference.

The afternoon session of the first day of the Funeral Association conference took place in the armories. His Worship Mayor Roland Denne was introduced by F. Sanderson in the absence of J. Comstock. The Mayor welcomed the men of the convention to the city which he placed at their disposal and offered to do anything in his power for them and to arrange sight-seeing trips through Peterborough. A. A. Jackson, of Sudbury, replied to the Mayor in a very entertaining fashion with a few well chosen words and stories.

Rev. J. D. Paterson was introduced by J. Comstock. He said that in their calling, that they represent a great organization, serving the community at a time when they can do a tremendous amount of good or a tremendous amount of harm. "Always in my all too many dealings I have found that fellowship and co-operation with me well carried out and that you have realized that you and I are men and servants of God where God wants us, helping our neighbors at a time when they need us most. I ask you all to stand and repeat the Lord's Prayer after me." After this the prayer of invocation was said by the Rev. Mr. Paterson.

James Dutton.

James Dutton, president of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce, was the next speaker. He endorsed the Mayor's hearty welcome and spoke warm words of praise for the city which is blessed with so many natural resources and beauty spots. "As president of the Chamber of Commerce if there is anything I can do for you we are at your service and yours to command. I want to congratulate you on the steps that you are taking to put your organization on a still higher standing with the improved legislation. The necessity for education which is important in business is recognized more than ever. Those who enter now the funeral association must serve two years with a licensed funeral director followed by a course in the university, another step on which I congratulate you."

Demonstration Given.

The next was a practical demonstration by R. Stone, of Toronto, who spoke while he remodelled the mutilated face of a wax figure showing how these mutilation could be covered up.

"What we need is not more embalmers but more thorough embalmers who are careful and who beautify the bodies that come under their care," he said. "There has been no improvements in the last fifteen years in methods but there have in the practice. We should take more time. The whole thing is the will to

C. H. ACKERMAN HEADS LEGION

Elected Head of Ontario Command By Acclamation To-day.

GREETED WITH CHEERS.

KINGSTON, Aug. 8.—(Special.) — This afternoon amid great enthusiasm, Col. C. H. Ackerman, Peterborough was elected president of the Canadian Legion in convention here. He succeeds General Gunn. His selection by acclamation was received with cheers and song. His apt reply was, "Comrades, I thank you. I will serve you as I did overseas, to the best of my ability."

LOSES HIS BARN AND WHOLE CROP

Bert Lee, Norwood Road, Suffers Severe Loss By Fire During Storm.

The barn and outbuildings of Bert Lee on the Norwood Road, near the Rifle Ranges were burnt this morning during the electrical storm. Mr. Lee has his entire hay and wheat crop in the barn, and all was destroyed. He carried some insurance but the loss will be quite large. The house alone was saved.

Prince of Wales Joins Pilgrimage of Ex-Service Men to Battlefields

BOULOGNE, France, August 8 (Canadian Press Cable via Reuter's). — His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales arrived here yesterday aboard the mail steamer to join the great pilgrimage of ex-service men and their families to the battlefields of France and Flanders. He was heartily cheered as he disembarked with his equerry, Brigadier-General Trotter. As he was about to enter his waiting motor, the Prince hesitated for a moment, and saying to his companion that the crossing had given him an appetite, the couple walked to the station lunch counter, where the Prince ordered a light lunch. After this informal meal the Prince and General Trotter left for Bethune, where the official visit begins.

Upon his arrival at gaily beflagged Bethune the Prince was met by Lord Jellicoe, and cordially welcomed by the authorities of the town. He was then conducted to the dais in the centre of the town square, surrounded by a guard of honor of French war veterans where His Highness in a brief address thanked the prefects of the Somme and Pas-de-Calais Departments for their cordial reception of the pilgrims.

The Prince arrived in Lille by motor car, where he will spend the night, and to-day will take part in the great memorial service at the Menin Gate of Ypres. The service is the culminating ceremony of the pilgrimage, and will be conducted by the Archbishop of York.

Settlers Dislike Rocks

Fear New Country Poor For Farming As They Cross Ontario.

PLEASED WITH PRAIRIES.

Premier King Discusses Reception in Canada With Carload of Immigrants.

REGINA, Sask., Aug. 8.—(Special)—As the Confederation, crack train of the Canadian National Railway, pulled into Regina today, the private car of the Prime Minister was on the rear end and a colonist car on the front. Hearing that the Colonist car was full of immigrants from Central Europe, Mr. King visited them.

There were men, women and children from Jugo-Slavia, Poland, Russia and Roumania. Only one could speak English, a young man who was going to join his brothers who were farming in the Edmonton district.

"I got a surprise at first" he said to Mr. King, "because when I saw all those rocks in Ontario I thought it will be some job to farm in rocks like them. But now I see it is different," and he pointed out of the window to the fields of waving Western grain.

The Prime Minister explained that Ontario was big and the part he saw was only the top of it. There were farms and orchards and wheat fields and great cities farther south.

The Prime Minister asked the newcomers about their treatment by Canadian officials in Europe, on the ship, and in Canada, and pleased smiles came when the question was interpreted. The young Polish immigrant said "They treated us fine, everywhere. I don't ever want to go back to Poland."

YOUR OPPORTUNITY TO GIVE

The appeal to our citizens in connection with the Citizens' War Memorial being mailed to every household. There is already quite a good response. The memorial will be altogether completed in about a month's time and it is hoped the small balance necessary to make the full payment will be subscribed before that time. The total cost of the memorial is $32,500, of which $26,000 has been subscribed by organizations and individuals.

The opportunity is given to every home in the city to subscribe some amount to the memorial and it is hoped that every one will take advantage of it and have a personal interest in what will be one of the finest memorials in the province.

Council Decides To Ask Cabinet For Three Dams

Aldermen Request Utilities Commission To Have a Survey Made of Burleigh Falls and Dams Four and Five.

CHANGE IN HOSPITAL BOARD SUGGESTED IN VIEW OF REQUEST FOR FUNDS

City Should Be Directly Represented On the Governing Body. Mayor Denne Believes — Old Home Week Mooted and Consideration Promised.

Possibly one of the most important matters to be dealt with by the council for years was initiated at last night's short meeting when a resolution was passed asking the Dominion Government to grant the power rights at dams 22 and 23 (formerly 4 and 5) and at Burleigh to the city for the use of the citizens and asking the Utilities Commission to have a report made on the power available there, the cost of development, etc. There was no discussion of the matter, the Aldermen being all agreed on the advisability of taking steps and leaving further consideration until after submission of the report and the receipt of the government's answer.

Another matter of importance reserved for discussion at a special meeting in the near future was the by-law for the Nicholls Hospital extension. His Worship Mayor Denne urged that discussion of this matter with the Board should precede the passing of the by-law as he felt that reorganization along the lines of the city trust, with representation of the council on the board. The city is asked to supplement the money left by the late Mrs. Nicholls and now is the time to take steps to have changes made on the constitution of the board, His Worship believed.

Another matter of interest brought up and left with the aldermen for consideration until the September meeting, was that of an Old Home week next summer. Ald. Lowe introduced it, stating that many citizens had mentioned it to him. He felt that it could be made a financial success if work on it could be started this fall, and the other aldermen present endorsed his views.

The hospital by-law was introduced by Ald. helan. It would have been given two readings, the third depending on the vote to be taken September 26, but His Worship counselled delay, saying:

"I think to be fair to the council and the people that we should go into the matter more fully. There should be a trust formed the same as the city trust. We don't know how much it is going to cost the city yearly. We should have a talk with them and go into the plan."

Ald. Macdonald—"I think you're right. We're adding to Mrs. Nicholl's money."

Ald. Hamilton—"The method of appointing the board was arrived at 30 years ago. The amount Mrs. Nicholls put in will become a very small part. Now is the opportune time for us to see if the institution of the board is satisfactory."

His Worship—"I don't want to block this for it is absolutely necessary, but we should have some understanding."

The Mayor will arrange for a meeting with the city trust.

Hspital Not Full

St. Joseph's Hospital Board wrote to correct statements made during the discussion of the Nicholls Hospital by-law. The letter stated the the hospital's capacity is 85 beds, not 140 as was said at the meeting, and added that the hospital has never been filled since the recent extension.

Power Survey Approved

"Hear! Hear!" and "That's the talk," were among the remarks heard when the Mayor proposed that the council ask the Dominion Government for the power rights at dam 22 and 23 and at Burleigh for the use of the citizens and a motion was passed without discussion, followed by one that the Utilities Commission, having been elected to look after power matters for the city investigated the situation and make public the report on the power available, and the cost of development.

Won't Reduce Price

The Hydro Electric Power Commission wrote declining to reduce the price of the gas plant below $300,000 but agreeing to include, for this price, three parcels of real estate owned by the commission in the city.

Ald. Lowe brought up the matter of an "Old Boys Reunion" in Peterborough in 1929. Many former residents of the city, he said, would like to come home for such a celebration. His suggestion met with

SKILLED HELP STILL WANTED

Little Demand at Present For Unskilled Laborers—Conditions Good.

FARM HELP WANTED.

Conditions in employment around the city are in good shape. There are very few men who are willing to work who are unemployed. The drifter, however, still has a tendency to apply for a position when he has not the least idea for work.

Farm hands are still needed badly but the employment bureau stated that if this weather persisted it was feared that the demand would fall off as the farmers would lose their crops due to the heavy rains.

The demand for unskilled labor still runs light, while the demand for skilled labor is increasingly heavy. These jobs are mostly out of town.

Nearly every industry is wanting men of some description. The automobile companies are requesting hood and wheel stripers, as well as body stripers. The foundries want wood pattern makers. The lumber industry requires a setter for a steam saw mill, an edgerman and a trimmer. A granite letter cutter is required by the monumental trade. In general industry are required mechanical draftsmen, diemakers and riveters. The electrical firms need linemen, while the summer hotels are applying for hotel help, and the farmers need help very badly at this time of the year.

CANADIANS WIN IN SEMI-FINALS

Wright and Guest Beat German Pair For Right To Meet U. S.

ARGOS ELIMINATED.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 8 (By T. H. Louden, Canadian Press Special Correspondent).—The Canadian Doubles sculling tteam, Joe Wright, Jr., and Jack Guest, of Toronto, easily defeated the German pair, Soeck and Voight, in the Olympic Doubles semi-final to-day, winning by a length and a half in six minutes, 44 seconds.

The Canadian pair thus avenged themselves for the defeat inflicted by the Germans on Monday.

The Canadians started with a powerful drive of 38 strokes to the minute and though the Germans broke away at 40 to the minute, the Canadians had a length lead in the first minute. Wright and Guest gradually pulled their shell into the lead of a length and a half at the 750 metre mark. Half way, the Canadians, rowing 32 strokes to the minute to the German's 30, pulled into still longer lead.

Here the German pair put on a hard sprint and came within a length of Wright and Guest, but the Canadians held to a steady 28 strokes slip and easily held the lead, though the Germans continued sprinting in the last half. The German pair, worn out with repeated spurts, were hardly able to finish and the Canadians won by a length and ahalf.

The United States Double Scullers, Charles McIlvaine and Pauld Costello, beat the Swiss pair of Bossard and Reider, by four lengths.

Apell, of France, gained a close decision over Franc Martin, of Mon-

.SWIMMERS QUALIFY.

Joe Wright Eliminated From Further Contention For Single Sculling Honors.

(By W. H. Ingram, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent.)

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 8. — Joe Wright of Toronto, holder of the Diamond Sculls, was eliminated from further contention for single sculling honors at the Olympiad yesterday by David Collett of Britain, an old rival. Otherwise the results of the Canadian activities in important trials at the games yesterday were highly satisfactory.

Though Wright lost in the singles he partnered with Jack Guest, his Toronto club mate, to decisively defeat the French pair in the doubles. The Canadian eight-oared crew, Toronto Argonauts, won by a length from Poland.

The Canadian doubles crew goes into the semi-finals with Germany to-day and the Canadian eight is in the semi-final with the United States. Britain, represented by the Thames Rowing Club, meets the winning eight oared crew for the Olympic title.

Given Ovation.

Wright received a tremendous ovation after his race with Collett, the spectators being eager to pay tribute to his wonderful ability.

Wright had raced seven times since Thursday, owing to his participation in the doubles. He raced twice on Monday and twice yesterday, besides races last Thursday, Friday and Saturday. For Collett it was the third race since Thursday.

Collett, who lost to Wright twice in successive clashes at the English Henley, won by two lengths yesterday in 7 minutes and 52 seconds. He gained a lead at the start and hung on to it against Wright's repeated threats. The Canadian spurted at the finish and made up a length of the deficit but Collett had sufficient margin for a decisive victory.

Only two hours previously Wright rowed with Guest in the doubles easily defeating Robineau and Caplin of France by four lengths in 7 minutes and 21 seconds. The Canadians hung back to the halfway mark but from then on steadily drew away from the Frenchmen.

The eight oared crew were slightly behind the Polish leaders in the first stages of their race but evened it up at the 500 metre mark, racing neck and neck from the 500 metre mark to the half way mark, 1000 metres, and from then on gradually gained to win a good race by a length.

Swimmers Qualify.

Three Canadian swimmers qualified in their respective trials yesterday. Walter Spence, representing Montreal A.A.A., will be in the final of the 200 metres breast stroke championship as a result of placing second to Teuruta of Japan in the semi-final yesterday. Spence forced the Japanese to mark up a new Olympic record for the distance of 2.49 1-5.

SUBSTANTIAL SUM GAINED AT REGATTA

Marmora Women's Memorial League Receives Two Fine Gifts.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MARMORA, August 8.—Approximately four hundred and eighty dollars was taken in at the Regatta held at Crowe Lake on Monday. On this day the Women's Memorial League also received the handsome sum of one hundred dollars from Mrs. H. M. Molder, of Cleveland, Ohio. A like amount was also received from the Hon. J. R. Cooke.

The ladies feel grateful for the generous response made thus far to their appeal and are delighted to think that so many old residents of the village have been disposed to make good contributions.

Guaged by gate receipts at Monday's event, an attendance of at least several hundred persons may safely be assumed.

Personals.

Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Dennis of Campbellford visited the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Dennis on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. McKenzie visited friends in town on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Kennedy, of Lindsay, visited the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Kennedy, over the week-end.

The Messrs. Stafford and Paul Clement, of Detroit, are spending a holiday at Crowe Lake.

Miss Eileen Cuddy, of Oshawa, is spending holidays with her sister, Mrs. T. Cousins.

Mr. James O'Brien, of Peterborough visited in town on Monday.

Mrs. M. Penrose and sons, John, Arthur and Theodore, and daughters, Laura and Emma, motored from Toronto, to spend the week-end with relatives here.

MUCH DAMAGE DONE BY HEAVY RAINS

Will have Huronic Re-floated To-day

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 8.—(Canadian Press).— The Northern Navigation steamship Huronic, aground on a reef off Lucille Island, fifty miles southwest of Port Arthur, in Lake Superior, will probably be floated off at daylight this morning, according to information at the head office of the company here last night.

Advices from the scene of the stranding are that damage to the steamer may not be extensive and that she will, in all probability, proceed to Port Arthur for drydocking and repairs.

Passengers were remeoved from the steamer Monday night and taken to Port Arthur.

MANY SEEKING HARVEST WORK

Idle Miners Form Majority of Applicants For Trip to Canada.

READY FOR HARD TOIL.

LONDON, August 8.—(Canadian Press).—Despite the objection to the scheme voiced last night by A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation, the 10,000 men to go from Britain to the Canadian harvest fields are rapidly being secured, especially in the northern mining centres. As early as eight o'clock long queues of potential harvesters formed themselves at the labor exchanges in industrial centres.

"Even if the work is very hard, it cannot be harder than work in the pit," declared the many miners among the applicants.

In some centres a distinct objection arises among the applicants to the stipulation that they secure written consent of their wives to their going. Taking all centres together, however, the large majority of the applicants are probably singl men. Comparatively few applicants are being taken in London because of the official preference for men from mining areas which are suffering from depression.

MUST FIND WORK.

OTTAWA, August 8.—(Special to The Examiner).—"Safeguards against the unemployment of incoming harvesters from the British Isles must be given in everyway before the movement is started," W. J. Egan, Deputy Minister of Immigration today told The Examiner' 'The transportation companies must undertake to look after every one of the men after the harvest is over. This guarantee is asked from the companies, and it also is definitely understood the harvester if unable to find work will have to be deported to England.

"Government authorities have insisted on this point, and there is no reason to fear an unemployment burden in the west this fall," added Mr. Egan, who is expecting another cable sometime to-day from England in reply to one he sent on Sunday.

"This agreement is virtually completed," he said. "As we are keen on safeguarding against unemployment of the incoming harvesters, we do not wish to leave any loophole. It safely can be said this movement positively will not take place if Canadian authorities are not given every possible guarantee against unemployment and overcrowding of urban centres."

A statement by the Deuartment is expected to be issued some time this afternaoon covering every point in issue.

FALLS FROM ROOF AND BREAKS ARM

Fred Nelson Receives Severe Shaking-up When He Slips on Wet Shingles.

(Examiner Correspondence)

OTONABEE, August 8.—While engaged in shingling the roof of the barn on Monday afternoon, Fred Nelson, a man of about 25 years of age, slipped on the rain soaked shingles and fell to the ground from the height of 25 feet. One bone in the forearm was broken, his face was cut and he received a bad shaking up but was fortunate in escaping death.

CAMPBELLFORD PEOPLE CROWD COUNCIL CHAMBER LAST NIGHT AND HEAR HEATED ARGUMENTS

Debate On Paving Work Reaches Personal Stage at Times.

THICKNESS QUESTIONED.

Councillors Argue Over Disposal of Material Taken From Roads.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, August 8. — Seats for citizens interested in the doings of their Council were at a premium shortly after the Council opened its meeting last night. In a very few minutes there was not even standing room. Spectators jammed the doorway and crowded on the stairway leading to the library above. Late arrivals craned their necks in an attempt to peer over those in front, and at the open windows there were full complements of faces. Wordy battles between councillors and engineers featured the latter part of the meeting, and when Deputy-Reeve Davidson, as Warden of the United Counties of Durham and Northumberland, gave as his opinion that the Standard Pavement Company was not living up to its contract, there was electricity in the air. Mr. Keefer, engineer retained by the town, disagreed with Davidson's point taken, and Councillor Stone expressed his opinion as that of Mr. Keefer. His Worship interrupted the argument, and the matter was dropped. Later in the evening, Councillors Wilkinson and O'Sullivan locked horns over the matter of the disposal of the surface material taken from the roads in preparation for paving. Their argument was at once hot, humorous, and personal. Once more the Mayor was called upon to act in the capacity of peace maker.

The meeting last night was ample proof that the condition of portions of the streets has finally roused the ire of more than the occasional motorist who finds himself bounced off the seat. Until last night, everything with regard to the paving has been attended to in an orderly manner, but there was more than one hot retort made in the word war at this meeting.

When the meeting opened, all the members were present, with the exception of Councillor Abernethy, chairman of the Road and Bridge Committee. After the lengthy minutes of the last meeting had been disposed of, correspondence was the order of business. The first letter was from the Minister of Railways and Canals saying that he was pleased to receive the invitation of the Town Council to visit this town during his inspection of the Trent Canal, but he could not definitely accept, since his plans for the future weeks of this season were not yet mature. The letter was received and filed.

Regarding sewer and water connections for the Government property on Mill and Front Streets, there was a letter from the Deputy Minister at Ottawa saying that the Government would take no action since it was not their intention to erect any building on this property in the near future. This letter was also received and filed.

There was also al etter from J. P. Archer, with a release attached for the settlement of the claim of J. J.

BERLIN WON'T AID RUSSIA ON KELLOG'S PEACE TREATY

Risk of Failure in Sponsoring Soviet Delegate Considered Too Great.

SPAIN MIGHT TAKE OFFENSE.

Germans and French Are Skeptical of Russian Good Faith.

BERLIN, Aug. 8.—Wilhelmstrasse does not think Germany's delegate to Paris to sign the Kellogg compact should be encumbered by her neighbor, Russia, which also desires to send a representative but feels like having him chaperoned by one of the signatory powers. The Government will therefore make no open move to have Russia become one of the signatories at the meeting of Foreign Ministers in the French capital at the end of this month.

The danger of failure is too great for the Reich to run risks, and even if the powers would agree to allow Russia to enter in the short time remaining such a move might result in Spain's not returning to the League fold, since Madrid also has aspirations to be one of the original signers of the anti-war compact.

Press Views of Moscow's Move

Public opinion does not fully share the official view. The Boersen Courier, Liberal financial paper, in commenting on M. Tchitcherin's declaration, says:

"Negotiations over the Kellogg compact are closed. After a period of many weeks the Soviets discover that they were not invited to participate in the discussion among the great powers. Without Russion participation Tchitcherin sees the whole affair as directed against the Soviets. Such a supposition need not be noticed. It belongs to that characteristic of Russian foreign propaganda which makes them believe that every treaty consummated is directed solely against them."

The Courier thinks that the present move on the part of Moscow will receive the attention it deserves, since for many weeks the Soviet press hurled the bitterest scorn at the effort of "capitalistic America" to effect world peace. The compact, the paper points out, is open for signatures at a later date, and it adds that Germany will receive the news with satisfaction when the Soviets decide to take such a step earnestly.

Says Soviet Should Be Cautious.

Der Abend, a Socialist organ, regarded as expressing closest the Government's views, also calls attention to Russia's long delay in making inquiries about the treaty. Moscow's uproar now, it says, seems to imply that "Germans are believed to be less intelligent than they really are." Instead of using Germany as an intermediary, Tchitcherin could just as easily have spoken with Washington direct, the Abend argues. His present move was merely made to give the Soviets another chance to charge that Russia is being surrounded by enemies. However, since Russia's later admission is possible, her orators should be more careful and thus leave the entrance open, concludes the Abend.

The Vossiche Zeitung, Democratic organ, feels that Russia has grounds for complaint, since she was not invited, but regrets that her move to get in was not made a long time ago. The paper says the delay was probably due to Tchitcherin's sickness and the absence of Litvinoff, leaving Soviet foreign affairs without proper leadership.

The Tageblatt, a Republican paper, sees no reason why Russia should not become a signatory at some later date, since keeping this power out would morally weaken the compact.

At present the Government is in a quandary just what to say if Russia makes a direct request to have Germany, as a neighbor and a power with which Moscow is enjoying friendly relations, act as sponsor in her attempt to become a member of the compact for outlawing war.

THE WEATHER

Meteorological Office Toronto, Aug. 7.—The weather has been fair today in nearly all parts of the Dominion, warm in the Western Provinces and in southern Ontario and comparatively cool farther East.

Lake Superior— Moderate westerly winds; mostly fair and warm.

Manitoba and Saskatchewan — mostly fair and decidely warm.

Alberta—Mostly fair anl warm; probably a few local showers or thunderstorms.

As if we had not already had more than sufficient rain, there was another thunderstorm this morning about four o'clock. The rainfall totalled .11 of an inch. This makes a total of 1.89 for the month of August to date. Rain has fallen every day. No wonder some of the farmers are becoming pessimistic, and with some at least the outlook is serious. Aside from the outlook for hay and ripening grains, there are ominous reports regarding the effects of the continuous rains on the potato crop. It is to be hoped that more favorable weather conditions may not be long delayed.—W. P.

COURT OF REVISION HEARS TWO CASES

Assessment of Flour Mill Is Set at Purchase Price.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, August 8. — There were two cases to be heard before the court of revision which met in the council chambers at seven thirty last night. The court consisted of Mayor Kingston, Reeve Bygott, Deputy-Reeve Davidson, Councillors Wilkinson and Abernethy. Councillor Abernethy was not present.

The assessment of the flour mill on Mill street was brought up by Richard McKelvie, and after consideration by the court the assessment was set at the actual purchase price plus the business tax.

Dr. G. A. Hay asked that his assessment on his business be lowered, and had all the details at hand to prove his case. At one time he offered to sell his portion of the property for what it was assessed for, and considered he would have made money. After considerable argument it was evident to the court that no decision could be arrived at last night so the sitting was adjourned till some future date not yet set. The doctor will be notified.

WHEAT SPROUTING BECAUSE OF RAIN

Grain Standing in Fields at Mount Pleasant on Verge of Ruin.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MOUNT PLEASANT, August 8.—Drenched under almost a week's rainfall the Mount Pleasant district crops are on the verge of ruin. Fields of fall wheat which has been in the stook for the past ten days is almost all sprouted and even a green growth in many of the stooks. The extreme heat during the past week together with the humidity of the air, causing this damage. Alsike cut and still lying out is also sprouted it having to be turned so often and has a tendency to shell with the handling.

The oat crop is in danger of smut and rust which prevails after a wet season. Signs of rot in the potatoes are also noticed on some farms.

Personals.

The Rev. F. Carpenter, of Cavan, spent Friday afternoon visiting in the village.

Mrs. Margaret Lough entertained a large number of friends on Monday evening in honor of her daughter, Miss Gwendolyn, nurse-in-train-

DISTRICT CROP SITUATION MADE SERIOUS BY WEATHER

Farmers Unable To Begin Harvest Owing to Heavy Rains.

POTATOES ROTTING.

Crop Value Has Decreased By Many Dollars in Short Time.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAVAN, August 8. — The prolonged heavy rains have made the situation serious for the farmers. Wheat is sprouting in the stokes. Alsike is lying in the fields soaked through, while the oat fields are flat. Peas are so much beaten down by the rains they will be very difficult to harvest, and some that are matured are bursting the pods open.

Potatoes are in grave danger of rot. Fruit has ripened too quickly, so that with the excessive wet weather much has fallen that would have been picked had the weather been fair.

In a short time the crop value has decreased by many dollars.

Crops Ruined.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BRIDGENORTH, Aug. 8. — The severe wind and rain storms have done a considerable amount of damage in Smith township. About a mile north of Peterborough for a stretch of about half a mile wide, the crops are almost ruined. Corn and oats are as flat is if the roller had gone over them. Some potatoes are riddled so badly that there are no leaves left at all. In a very short piece on the middle line of Smith there were several poplars and maple trees blown over.

Hay Spoiling.

The continued showery weather of the past week is very discouraging to the farmers. Much hay is spoiling in the fields, having been cut and almost ready to draw before the rains began. Acres of hay is getting too ripe for good feed because the weather is too uncertain to cut it.

Some fall wheat either cut or uncut is suffering from the heavy rains, and fields of barley and oats are so ripe they are falling to the ground, making prospects for cutting with the binder very poor.

Early potatoes in this district are exceptionally large and the tops are still looking hardy and green. Potato bugs continue to work at all hours, making paris greening a chore that must be done repeatedly.

Flowers and lawns in the country are flourishing this season. There seems to be no rest for the one who cuts the lawn.

Carrots appear to be affected with dry rot and beans with rust again this year.

Fruit is plentiful, both tame and wild. The wild grapes berries, and currants are plentiful.

The land has changed in the past week from the state of exceptional hardness to the extreme opposite. It is now almost too soft and muddy for cultivation of any kind.

Peas Growing in Sheaf.

The rains of the last few days have caused many to think of how they will get their wheat, alsike, and peas saved. The fall wheat and peas are growing in the sheaf, while alsike that is cut is spoiled. The road west of Fox's Corner to Lindsay is impassable. Work was done on it just before the rain, and was not completed. This made the road unfit for travel, and it will be bad for some time, as they had to quit work.

Cause for Worry.

The heavy rain of last week has given the farmers in this vicinity much cause for worry. Many large fields of grain are flattened to the ground. Fall wheat and alsike are taking second growth, and this will mean a heavy loss. The raspberry crop is abundant, but with so much rain over the week-end, picking could not be done, and much fruit was wasted.

FROM MAKER TO WEARRE

WOMAN FOUND AFTER A WEEK OF WANDERING

Doesn't Know Her Mother or Children or Her Name.

AMNESIA VICTIM

Doctors Are Baffled by Memory Lapse Following Family Separation.

BALTIMORE, Md., August 8.—A tense drama of human emotion, with baby voices pleading to break the strange veil of amnesia that prevents their young mother from recognizing them or her own mother, is being enacted in Spring Grove clinic here.

As unusual a case as ever confronted State psychiatrists is being studied by them in their efforts to clear the mind of Mrs. Alma Pitcher, mystery woman, whose mind suddenly went blank, drying up the wellsprings even of her mother love.

With face registering neither comprehension nor emotion, she gazed into the tearful faces of her mother and her three little girls and briefly said:

"I do not know them. I do not believe I am a mother."

Forgets Her Mother.

Mrs. Pitcher, twenty-three, had been living apart from her husband, the son of the Rev. John W. Pitcher, Pentecostal pastor.

She had been sought a week, when she walked into police headquarters and said:

"I want to know who I am and where I came from?"

Astonished officials asked her name and she said:

"I think it is Thelma."

Through the astuteness of a police clerk, she was identified as Mrs. Alma Pitcher and her mother, Mrs. Mary Valdivia, was called to the Missing Persons Bureau.

With a cry of joy the mother attempted to throw herself into her daughter's arms, but Mrs. Pitcher, eyeing the older woman with a puzzled expression, slowly said:

"I do not recognize her as my mother. I remember mother as a short, dark woman."

Mrs. Valdivia does not answer that description.

Questioned as to where she had been during the previous week, Mrs. Pitcer passed her hand several times over her brow. Finally she said:

"I do not know a thing except that I am here and that people I do not know are talking to me."

Blank To Children.

Then the subject of her three daughters, exceptionally pretty little girls, was brought up. The girls are Betty, five; Irene, four, and Doris, two.

"I do not remember having any children. I do not believe I am a mother," she said, as her mother listened incredulously.

Then there was a hearing before police officials and upon recommendation of two psychiatrists, Mrs. Pitcher was committed temporarily to Spring Grove Asylum, where, it was hoped, her memory would return.

A scene that brought tears to the eyes of even seasoned officials was enacted there when Mrs. Pitcher first was confronted with her three little girls.

Betty, the eldest, held out her arms to her mother, crying:

'Mamma, I am Betty. Don't you know me."

All stretched yearning arms toward their mother, but she stood, in dumb bewilderment, her brow wrinkled by a puzzled frown. She simply could not remember them, and the sight of them failed absolutely to arouse the mother instinct in her breast.

Uncertain of Name.

Just recently hope has been raised that Mrs. Pitcher will regain her memory.

Questioned by one of the psychiatrists, she suddenly said:

'I believe my name is Alma, not Thelma."

Then, too, the physicians believe she is showing an increasing interest in the children, who visit her frequently, and they hope the mysterious veil of forgetfulness clouding all her past will eventually be rent and she will be restored to her normal mental condition.

Discussing the strange case, Dr. Robert E. Garrett, chief psychiatrist and superintendent of Spring Grove, said the causes of amnesia are a puzzle to science. He added:

"Victims often wander all over the country, working and enjoying themselves, but always under a cloud of darkness.

"They can earn their living in the same trade as before, but they cannot pierce their memory to learn who they are.

Science Baffled.

"Amnesia usually attacks a victim for a period of six months. At the end of that time, except in stubborn cases, the memory suddenly returns.

"Medical science does not know what brings on the disease. Neither is there any cure for it. Nature must take its course, and generally, after the disease has run several months, it terminates suddenly.

"Amnesia is liable to attack anyone, although cases of amnesia are rare. Persons suffering with nervous afflictions are more subject to it than quiet folk."

THE WAR MEMORIAL CAMPAIGN.

The response that is already being made to the appeal for funds to complete the amount necessary for Peterborough's war memorial should be pleasing to everybody.

The duty of keeping green the memory of the war dead of Peterborough City and County is not peculiar to any organization or committee, but is necessarily a community obligation that should be discharged by a community effort.

Every citizen should welcome the opportunity of having some personal share in an enterprise that aims at paying fitting tribute to men who laid down their lives for the common welfare and for the country we all love so well.

But a portion of the total required is left to be secured.

The major part of the cost will be taken care of by funds already raised through various sources, and in view of the unanimous opinion of the community in favor of a war memorial, the balance should be readily forthcoming.

The present appeal should be sufficient to complete the total sum required to cover all the expenditure involved in the erection of what is likely to be one of the most beautiful and striking war memorials in the Dominion.

ANOTHER REASON.

Several large American cruisers which passed through Peterborough recently en route for Georgian Bay are reported held up in the Severn district because they cannot be taken over the marine railway there.

Their experience is a strong argument in favor of the completion of the Severn section of the canal.

Boats of this type are, of course, the sort of craft the Trent Waterway should be carrying in large numbers during the summer months, and would be carrying, too, were the canal completed.

Their owners want to make the Trent Waterway cruise, but they know that under the present conditions the trip is impossible for vessels of that size, and they plan holidays elsewhere, while this district loses the revenue that would be created by the passage through the Trent Waterway of scores of large pleasure craft.

Once the canal is complete from Lake Ontario to Georgian Bay a constant procession of such boats can be expected each summer.

At present we seek to interest motor-boat owners in the waterway, and then are forced to tell those most likely to embark on a long cruise that there is no use coming, for large boats cannot complete the passage of the canal.

The completion of this long drawn out public work means a notable increase in the revenue left in Ontario each year by tourists.

THE DAUNTLESS SIX.

Six Canadian girls have combined to win for their native land the first women's Olympic track and field championship, and the magnitude of that achievement can be appreciated from the fact that the dauntless half a dozen faced world competition and emerged victorious.

Too much credit cannot be given Canada's women's Olympic team.

They ran into unexpected difficulties when Myrtle Cook, best of their sprinters, was disqualified in the 100-metre race, but this disappointment only seemed to nerve them for greater efforts, and the last day of the great international competition saw the Canadian girls set a new world's record to win the relay race, and Miss Catherwood establish another world mark in capturing the high jump.

Canada's girl athletes were the only women's team to win more than one title, and their points total surpassed that of any other nation, to give them the championship.

The Dominion's men made the best record ever achieved by a Canadian track and field team in world competition, but the girls of the Maple Leaf did even better—they won an Olympic championship on their first attempt.

All honor to all six.

THE FEMALE OF THE SPECIES.

Not so very long ago a fifteen-year-old boy who felt a yearning to experiment with a cigarette had to sneak out behind the woodshed to dodge the consequences of parental wrath.

The times have changed.

At the Juniper Island regatta on Monday girls not much older than fifteen strolled around puffing nonchalantly at cigarettes.

No sneaking away for them, apparently no fear of parental wrath; they smoked as openly and as unconcernedly as any man in the crowd.

And the spectacle caused at least one observer to wonder if the fathers and mothers of these youngsters might not benefit from reading General Draper's warning to parents.

Women doubtless have as much right to smoke as men if they desire to do so, but these were not women, but merely children, much too young to play fast and loose with their health.

A few years ago boys of their age who were caught smoking made the acquaintance of a slipper heartily applied to that section of their anatomy most suited for massaging in this way.

If the double standard is to apply in regard to cigarettes, most assuredly it should also apply in regard to slippers laid on as decribed above.

Even if the woodshed has practically became extinct, slippers are still available.

FAULTY BRAKES.

(From the Hamilton Spectator)

A deputation from the Central Council of Ratepayers' Associations recently waited on Mayor McBride, Toronto, and urged that the sale of used cars with defective brakes be prevented. It was pointed out that of 300 second-hand cars recently examined only 25 had effective braking equipment. This is a new angle of the defective brake problem and an important one. The condition, we do not think, is unique in Toronto.

Existing legislation puts the onus of responsibility for faulty brakes upon the owner of the vehicle. It is more important that the brakes be workable than that the motor be tuned up, or, to put it another way, more important that the car be able to stop than to start. It will not be necessary for legislation to be brought down making four-wheel brakes compulsory, because manufacturers of motor cars are being won over to that type of equipment and practically all makes of cars appearing on the market have stopping gaddets fore and aft.

Some years ago, following a series of accidents, it was announced locally that the police intended campaigning against faulty brakes. A hint being as good as a kick in the slats, there was a rush to have brakes adjusted, but the campaign did not materialize and motorists quickly became careless again. Hamilton legislators should interest themselves, we think, in the suggestion that has been made to the Mayor of Toronto. If the used car depot proprietors are prevented from selling cars with deficient brakes, it should have an important effect upon present-day traffic hazards. Automotive engineers have worked it out that properly-braked cars should be able to stop in a given distance, when travelling at a certain speed. It would be interesting to know how many locally-owned hacks conform with this standard.

PUGILISTS AND BOXERS.

The decision of Gene Tunney to retire while he is still the undefeated champion of the world is a wise one. He is retiring at the zenith of his fame, without having incurred the "cauliflower" ear which used to be the trademark of the ring, and before being dethroned and becoming a back number in a night. Whatever one may think about boxing, Tunney has acquitted himself like a gentleman, and so far as "the noble art of self-defense" (as it used to be euphemistically described) can be elevated, he has raised it high.

Tunney never won the place in public esteem that Jeffries or Dempsey did, because he was not the type of boxer that the public, unfortunately, prefers to see. He is a man of culture, lacking that "killing" instinct which made Dempsey so popular with the mob, although in his last bout he hammered Heeney unmercifully, just by way of showing the masses that he could be that kind of a boxer if he had a mind to.

If Tunney's boxing pedigree could be traced back it would probably be found that he descended from the old English school of boxing which began with Jem Mace, reputed to this day to have been the cleverest man that ever stepped into a ring. That school had its modern exponents in Jim Corbett, Packy McFarland, Pete Herman, and a few others on this side of the Atlantic. They owed their first instruction to an old English boxer named Gilmore, who settled in the United States over thirty years ago.

The era of the "slugger" began with the advent of John L. Sullivan, who beat down his opponents by sheer battering-ram force. It had a tremendous fascination for the public, and most of the U. S. boxers since that day have modeled their style upon rushing, tear-away tactics, instead of scientific boxing.

It is not creditable that the modern patrons should like this gory, primeval sort of boxing. But it can at least be said that they are a little better than the Romans, who demanded the death of the gladiators who showed a "yellow streak" in their make-up.

In the old days, men who fought with bare fists were "pugilists." To-day, the padded mit performers are "boxers."

In the old days, "pugilists" were usually beetle-browed, prognathous-jowled, illiterate men who fought terrific battles to a finish in some secluded field for less money than a "preliminary" fighter would take for a six-round affair now. It was a brutal display for brutalized men, although one English champion, Gully, afterwards became an M. P.

The modern boxer is usually of a different mold. Tunney plans a university career. Fidel La Barba, late flyweight champion, took up boxing merely to make money to educate himself at a university. The late Fred Welsh, lightweight champion of the world, spent large sums of money in collecting rare prints and statuary. Georges Carpentier was a cultured Frenchman.

Boxing is now taught in the colleges and universities of Great Britain and the United States. Young men of the finest intellect and physique are learning to box, and as it is an axiom in the profession that brains will always beat brawn, a new epoch may be dawning which will make boxing a skilful sport once more and eliminate the features which make it so objectionable to refined natures.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

The Question Box

E.M. Q.—Please give the five biggest cities of the world, and their populations.

A.—The five largest cities of the world are: London (Greater), England, 7,476,000; New York (Greater), U.S.A., 6,103,384: Berlin, Prussia, 4,000,000; Paris, France, 3,000,000; Chicago, U.S.A., 2,701,705.

D.G. Q.—What is the population of Greater London also Greater New York?

A.—The population of Greater London (in 1921) was 7,476,168; of Greater New York, U.S.A. (in 1925), 6, 103,384.

J.R.A. Q.—Please tell me the exact meaning of the letters "S.O.S." A says they mean "suspend other service," B says they mean "save our ship," while C says they mean "save our souls." Which is correct?

A.—In the wireless code the letter "S.O.S." mean "suspend other service," and represent the universally accepted emergency call.

C.T. Q.—Who sank the German captured fleet in Scapa Flow; that is, who was responsible for the sinking?

A.—All the surrendered German fleet—with the exception of the battleship "Boden" and five light cruisers—was scuttled by its officers and crews, June 21, 1919, in Scapa Flow, Orkney Island, Scotland. Three light cruisers and some smaller vessels were beached.

A Thought

A HARD DAY.

"Say, but this is a hard job!"

That's a phrase we hear almost every day. And it's a natural enough exclamation. In itself, of course, it is merely the statement of a fact, but, according to the thought that goes with the expression are we placing ourselves in the category of either strong men or weaklings? If, because the job is a hard one, we want to give it up, then we classify amongst the infirm; but if we tackle the hard job with cheerfulness and a firm resolution to overcome it, we take our grand stand on the ground with strong men.—Bob Bartlett.

GOD'S MINUTE.

He is their help and their shield.—Ps. 115:9.

* * *

O Lord, our Father in Heaven, we thank Thee for our home, its mercies its joys, its shelter, and its peace. Help us to be Thy children in our home, and make it like the home in Bethany, where Christ loved to go. Help us this day to bear one another's burdens. May we be burden-bearers, and not burden-makers. Help us to practice the Golden Rule, to do unto others as we would have them do unto us. Give us Thy grace that we may control our tempers and our tongues. May Thy blessing, O Lord and Master, be with those who stay at home to work to-day, and may they glorify their tasks by cheerful spirits. Bless those of our home who go out for business, and help and prosper them. Keep them from temptation, and may they always remember that a good name is better than great riches. Let integrity and uprightness preserve them. Bless the children at school; give them diligence, application and ambition in their studies; keep them from evil communications and comradeships. Bless the children who are at home. May their play be innocent and bright. May the love of Christ which moved Him to die for our sins crucify in every one of us worldliness of life, and may we all be faithful, spiritual members of the Church. May this home honor God in public worship, and claim the promise, "Them that honor Me, I will honor." For give us for our sins, and give us the forgiving spirit, for Jesus' Sake. Amen. CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, August 8.—The cattle market opened slow, due to a double market, including Sunday's and Monday's arrivals, but by ten a.m. had become more active and prices held steady with those of the previous week. On the whole, prices were generally unchanged.

Cattle.

Baby beeves were showing a strong demand, a few fancy at 14c and choice from 13c-13½c. A few heavy steers of fancy quality sold as high as 12½c, with quite a number at 12c.

The handyweight butcher steers and heifers were quite popular, choice light going at 11½c-11¾c, with choice heifers 10½c-11c. Fat cows were for the most part at steady prices. A few fancy heifers cows sold as high as 9½c, choice 8¼c-8¾c, good 7½c-8¾c, medium, 7c.

Bulls were rather quiet, choice heavy from 7c-7½, choice butchers 7¾c-8¼c, and bologna bulls from 6¼c-6¾c.

Springers and milkers met fairly good trading, a few good choice young springers gave promise of as high as $130. Choice springers $90-$115. Medium $30, up.

Calves.

Calves met with good trading, choice selling from 14c to 14½c with a few fancy at 15c. Good calves 12½c to 13c, heavy, 8 to 9c, light 11 to 12c, grassers 6½ to 7½c.

Sheep and Lambs.

Trade opened slowly on lambs but later in the day buyers were bidding 15 to 15½c for good lambs, choice 16c, medium to common 14 to 14½.

Yearlings brought 8 to 9c, choice butcher lambs, 6 to 6½c, medium 5 to 5½c, heavy and aged bucks 4 to 4½c, culls to to 3c.

Hogs.

Commission housese were asking 13c f.o.b. but no sales were effected up till noon.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 7 (Canadian Press). — The foreign demand for Canadian grain here yesterday was quiet, but a fair amount of business was done in American and Argentine corn for export account. The domestic trade in Canadian Western oats was good, but the undertone to the market was easier and values declined two cents per bushel.

The export trade in Spring wheat flour showed a decided improvement and a fair volume of business was done. The local demand was fair and prices were unchanged. Winter wheat flour was quiet, but firm.

The trade in all lines of millfeed was of a disappointing character, but values ruled steady. The rolled oats was dull.

Little business was done in butter, but prices for all grades were firmly maintained. The receipts were 93 packages.

The local and foreign inquiry for cheese continued of a disappointing character, but prices were unchanged. demand for standard grades of The receipts were 9,976 boxes.

A feature of the egg trade was the stronger feeling that developed for all grades and prices were marked up one cent per dozen. This was attributed to the good demand and the scarcity of supplies. The receipts were 2,538 cases.

A moderate amount of business transacted in old crop imported beans. Car lots of choice white handpicked sold at $3.90 per bushel, and small lots at $4.10 per bushel, ex-store. New crop October and November qualities were quoted at $2.40 to $2.50 per bushel for car lots to arrive, ex-track.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Aug. 8 (Canadian Press).—Wheat values lurched heavily downward yesterday at the last under selling ascribed in large part to Eastern and European sources. Ideal weather and crop conditions for Spring wheat both in the American and the Canadian Northwest gave impetus to the selling, and put a curb on general demand.

Closing quotation on wheat were weak, 1¾ to 2¼c net lower; corn was ½ to 1¼c off; oats, ¾c down to a shade advance, and provisions varying from 5c decline to a rise of 10c.

For the fourth successive day, all deliveries of wheat broke the low-price record for the present season. Among the outstanding bearish factors yesterday was talk which was current that the Canadian crop had all the ear-marks of being a bumper. In this connection, special notice was taken of a dispatch from Edmonton, Alta., saying that east of there wheat at many places was ready now for the binder, and that some fields looked as though they might produce forty to fifty bushels per acre.

Adding force to the downward swing of the wheat market was the fact that export demand was disappointing, although it was estimated that in the last two days 685,000 bushels had been taken at the Gulf of Mexico for shipment to Europe. Meanwhile, hedging sales here against newly-harvested domestic wheat were persistent, and finally became more than a counter-balance for early upturns in price here that were associated with relative firmness of Liverpool quotations and with falling off in the amount of wheat on ocean passage, as well as with gossip that Japan might make good-sized purchases of Canadian low-grade wheat and of white wheat from the United States.

Corn traders were influenced chiefly by the fine crop outlook for corn and also by the weakness of wheat values. On the other hand, the cash corn situation was strong, with a good demand; receipts here only 100 cars; yellow corn 2 cents up, and with outside points car lots to arrive, ex-track.

STERLING EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 8 (Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as:

Demand $4.85⅛.
Cables $4.85 15-16.

BUTTER, EGGS, ETC.

TORONTO, August 8. — Post holiday dullness featured yesterday's session on the local wholesale produce market. Volume of trading was small and only moderate demand was reported by dealers.

Butter was firm at 38¾c a pound for number one. Cheese was steady at 22¾c per pound and egg trading was quiet at the prices quoted below.

At Chicago—Butter continued firm under light supplies and fairly active demand. Receivers reported trade quite satisfactory on all grades except 92 and 93 scores, which were held for premiums and therefore not moving well. The centralised car market ruled firm under a fairly active demand.

By almost doubling its purchases in the past year Germany became the first customer for Canadian honey, taking 647,972 pounds, worth $54,954. This place was formerly held by Holland, which in the past year ran Germany a close second, with purchases aggregating 630,549 pounds, worth $40,598. The United Kingdom has been consistently increasing its imports, those in 1927-28 amounting to 562,137 pounds, worth $65,740, being double the volume and value of four years previously. France became a factor in the market last year, buying 166,2000 pounds, worth $17,939, as compared with but 9,129 pounds worth $637, the year before. Other important established markets are Belgium, Denmark, Norway, Sweden and the United States.

COUNCIL DECIDES TO ASK FOR DAMS

stant approval, many of the Aldermen adding suggestions. They agreed that this fall is the time to begin the spade work and the matter will be dealt with at the September meeting.

By-laws were passed as follows:

2705—For uniting certain polling subdivisions with one polling place therefor. This concerns the vote on the Nicholl's Hospital by-law, on which only Protestant property owners will vote and it will therefore be unnecessary to have as many polling places.

2706—Authorizing the construction of concrete curbing on King street west of Park street.

2707—To authorize the execution of an agreement to sell the power lines running into Deure township to the Hydro Electric Power Commission.

Eating house licenses were passed of the Dawson Service Station (new), V Boorman (renewal), and N. G. Doukas (renewal).

Lighting Improved.

The Utilities Commission was requested to install a hydrant on Burnham Street and to improve the lighting in the south-end and in the section of the city around the County Buildings. The total increase in the annual charge for the lighting will be $200 ..

Ald. Huffman asked what had been done for lighting the streets between Charlotte and King Streets west of Park.

Ald Cotton replied that the pole lines are in the lanes and the residents object to having poles placed on the streets and to giving a right-of-way through their lots.

Ald. McIntyre questioned the advisability of putting in so many new lights. "I don't know where this is going to end."

"It saves police protection. The people like them," answered the Mayor.

Ald. Cotton pointed out that for years the lights burned night and day. Now larger lights are being put in on time switches, and the increase in cost is not in proportion to the great increase in the lighting.

Gas Pump licenses Extended.

White & Ackford, who are taking out their gasoline pump at the end of September, were granted a license for three months. V. Crebar, who bought out T. Anthony, and T. Johnston, successor to Dawson & Johnston, were granted renewals of the licenses in their own name.

E. H. Howson, who has taken over the Chevrolet Sales and Service Garage, found a supporter in Ald. McCe-Intyre in his request for permission to reconnect the pump for two months.

Ald. Hamilton opposed this on the ground that it was putting in a pump at a bad place.

Ald. Phelan supported Ald. McInte, declaring that the pumps should never have been ordered off, and the majority of the aldermen favored granting Mr. Howson his license for two months.

When Mr. Howson was addressing the Council, Ald. Hamilton asked if it was his opinion that the pumps would not be removed.

The Humane Society will be asked to remove the old street car used as a kennel for stray dogs, etc., as the citizens living around there have been complaining of the howling of the dogs during the night.

Aldermen Stocker and Cotton, City Engineer Parsons and Manager R. L. Dobbin, of the Utilities Commission, will go into the matter of re-arranging the operation of the sewage disposal plant in an endeavor to save power, correct the power factor, and reduce the peak load.

The Board of Works will proceed to repair the culvert on the road running east from the canal and gravel the road. Up to the present this has been a private lane, but the Maniece estate has deeded it to the city. A by-law will be prepared to name it as a street.

Congratulations.

Ald. Hamilton wished to congratulate the Mayor for the good work done in redecorating the city buildings. He also expressed his approbation of the work done by Ald. Stocker in dealing with the lighting system and Ald. Greene in caring for the parks.

INFORMATION ASKED ABOUT ACCIDENT

Young Man Said To Have Been Seriously Hurt at Stoney Lake.

The London, England office of the C.P.R. has had a letter from a Mr. Glossop in Nottingham, England, making enquiries regarding an accident alleged to have occurred to a young man named Easton on or about June 14th, last, and Mr. Thornton of the Montreal office has been in Peterborough and vicinity for the past two days making enquiries. Glossop received a letter signed T. Bennett, stating that young Easton had been injured at Stoney Lake by a girder hitting him.

The C.P.R. is not interested in any way other than through kindness of the organization in an endeavor to get the facts, and if any one knows anything of the particulars of this accident, the Examiner would be pleased to receive them and forward on to the C.P.R.

give proper service I don't see why you should not use your equipment so long as the bodies are taken care of in a manner approved by the local Board of Health. In the far north equipment is scarce and yet men are rendering the very best service under the circumstances. Section 5 of the regulations is also worthy of consideration.

Q.—Can a funeral director run an ambulance?

A.—There is nothing in the act for or against it.

Q.—Is there anything in the act forbidding use of a combination ambulance and hearse?

A.—It is not touched upon in the act, but I imagine it might be of interest to the Board of Health.

One funeral director said he was using the combination and had had no complaints. It was done in a sanitary manner.

Another delegate felt that there was a strong sentimental objection to the use of one vehicle in the capacity of another, as well as for sanitary reasons. He believed the funeral car should be kept for that purpose. This is purely a matter for the local Board of Health.

T. E. Simpson, secretary of the Board of Examiners, stated that the approval certificate of the Board of Health would cover equipment also.

John Comstock—"It has been our opinion that in Peterborough we could not operate a combination ambulance and hearse."

Q.—Can the Board force a man to have his own motor vehicle? Is it right that one man should have his own vehicle while another may keep down his overhead by using livery service?

A.—I think it pay to have a completely-equipped business.

A.—The Board would like to see service given of a calibre in keeping with the funeral director's license.

Q.—A funeral director has an ambulance business. Has the Board any right to restrict his advertising?

A.—Not where it pertains to the ambulance business. Where a man has, previous to the new act, ordered calendars or the like, to advertise his funeral business, some discretion will have to be used during the next year.

Change of Examination Dates

Mr. Simpson made an important announcement relative to the annual school of instruction and examinations for those taking up the profession. "We have always held our examinations in September of each year but this year, owing to the change in the act and new requirements upon the candidates—the two-year instead of one-year practical experience, being one—the Board of Examiners has seen fit to postpone the opening of the school until October 15. It will be of ten days' duration, with morning, afternoon and evening sessions, attendance at which will cost each candidate $25.00. The examination fee will also be set at $25.00."

Reports Received

The fact that the fiscal year has not yet ended, made the treasurer's report unavailable, but Mr. Moffat submitted a comprehensive survey of the year's work, as seen through the eyes and mind of a secretary. It included a statement of receipts and disbursements; commendation for the district meetings held during the past year, and an appreciation of the support accorded the Association by manufacturers and allied trade at this and past conventions. The report was adopted.

Advancing the encouraging statement that in the past year the Association's membership has grown from 296 a year ago to 317, as well as other bits of "good news," the report of A. Williams, of the Membership Committee, was accorded similar treatment in company with the Obituary Committee's report, which made sympathetic reference to a fairly lenghty list of departed members and relatives of members of the Association. As a mark of respect, the convention observed a few moments of silence at the conclusion of the report.

The reports of the committee on Publicity and of the District Club committee was also on the morning's program and following them came the election of officers for the ensuing year with the above results. In conformance with an amendment to the general by-laws of the Association, the nominations were received from the floor of the convention and voted upon by ballot. It was only necessary to resort to the ballot in the choosing of an executive secretary. In this the candidates were George Logan, (successful) and Charles Hulse, of Ottawa.

Mr. Comstock announced during the session that transportation would be provided for any of the delegates' wives who would like to attend the regatta at Chemong this afternoon. Humorously enough, there was no scarcity of volunteers to assist the drivers of the cars.

Toronto Chosen.

The selection of the 1929 convention city was an item of the morning's agenda which awakened much interest, Toronto being selected by vote, after Alderman W. J. Stewart of that city and N. Boyd, of Hamilton, had advanced the merits of their respective cities. A standing vote determined the issue. This selection concluded the morning's business according to the program and adjournment took place until 2.00 p. m., when Dr. Gordon Jackson, director, Communicable Diseases, Department of Health, Toronto, was scheduled to deliver a lecture on "Communicable Diseases."

CRYSTAL BEACH DANCE STOPPED

Attorney-General Issues Orders To Provincial Police To Take Action.

UNDER CRIMINAL CODE.

(Special to the Examiner.)

TORONTO, August 8. — "As the result of complaints against the marathon dances at Crystal Beach, instructions have been issued by the provincial police to stop the dance at once, and this will be done this afternoon," said Attorney-General Price on return to his office this morning after a short holiday.

"One of the difficulties connected with this matter seemed to be the lack of any section that appertained particularly to it, but I think that section 222 of the criminal code covers it. This has reference to a nuisance which may be judged dangerous to the public health or to the public safety, as well as being harmful to public morals.

"There are a number of other sections that could be applied, and I have made up my mind to stop what has been properly called a disgusting and disgraceful exhibition, that is no doubt subversive to public morals. It is another evidence of man's inhumanity to man.

"The reports from Crystal Beach justify immediate action. A mass meeting was held there last night as a protest against it. The matter of dance marathons will be given immediate attention by the government, and my impression is that this is a type of amusement, or whatever you like to call it, that might well come under the athletic act, as it is a test of skill and endurance, and the participants are professional, and should this be done it will preclude the repetition of these disgraceful exhibitions being given without a license from the Athletic Commission. My impression is that they will be so declared and it is a matter that can be dealt with by order in council."

SUDBURY, Ont., Aug. 8 (Canadian Press).—Bears from the Algoma District are said to be flocking in large numbers to the Sudbury Basin and acquainting themselves with the mine operators busy there. J. G. Bennett, a geologist and mining engineer, drove out to Sudbury Basin to inspect some properties the other day and left his car standing by the road. In his absence a bear ambled out on the road and commenced exploring the car for something to eat.

Finding nothing suitable about the engine, Mr. Bruin extended his research to the tonneau, where he proceeded to make a meal out of the leather cushions, selecting the tenderest morsels with care and leaving the remainder strewn along the roadway. He had decamped, doubtless replete, by the time the owner of the car returned, but there were undoubted evidences of his activities.

WHERE FIRST COSTS WILL BE LAST

Wm. G. Murray, Architect.

The English domestic style again justifies its increasing popularity—through the medium of the design shown here. No other style could quite give this seemingly paradoxical combination of cozy informality and dignity.

The fine bold treatment of the roof, as though the designer was not afraid of it, is a characteristic feature employed with great effect here. Notice, too, the appropriate and restrained half-timbering of the gables.

Although the exterior possesses none of the formality which usually accompanies it, the plan follows very closely the Colonial centre hall type. To the left of the hall are the living room and sun porch, while to the right are the dining and service rooms.

A terrazzo floor is laid in the rear entry, kitchen, refrigerator room, and breakfast alcove. This gives a cool appearing, sanitary, and easily cleaned surface, ideal for these rooms. A very complete array of built-in equipment which would materially lighten the household labors may also be found here. These include a milk door, icing door, kitchen cabinets, clothes chute, broom cupboard, and ironing board.

Three large cross-ventilated bedrooms, replete with closet space, are located on the first floor. A little alcove off the main bedroom presents opportunities for the decorator to give his or her individuality full sway. Think how distinctive you, yourself, could make it with your favorite colors and belongings.

An idea worth consideration is one employed here of using salvage plate glass for the main windows.

Approximately 30,925 cubic feet are contained in this home which, exclusive of lot, cost about $9,900.

Readers desiring further information regarding a house of this design should communicate with Home Building Information Service, 345 Adelaide Street, West, Toronto, Ontario, who will see that it is supplied. When writing please mention design No. 135. Copyright 1928.

BRONZE OR COPPER SCREENS KEEP OUT INSECT PESTS

Everybody who has lived in summer in a house unprotected by screens knows the annoyance of insect pests. They swarm in through open windows and doors and get into every part of the house, making themselves a general nuisance.

If insects were harmless and simply annoyed the occupants of the household, that fact would be sufficient reason for taking care to keep them out. But they are not harmless. Insects are among the most formidable enemies of the human race. Take the common house fly, for example. If you could look at one through the powerful lens of a microscope you would see that he has a hairy body and legs in which may be lodged the deadly germs of typhoid and similar transmissible disease. The fly is small but he is an elephant in size compared with germs. A single fly may carry not thousands but millions of germs. To see the fly or mosquito as the scientist sees them through his microscope would be argument enough to bar these pests forever from the home.

There is one sure way to keep insects out of the home and that is by having every window, door and porch equipped with screens. Merely to install any kind of screens, however, is not enough. Insects need no encouragement to take advantage of the smallest opening. A single break in the mesh and the entire screen becomes useless. Before you know it the little pests are infesting every nook and corner of the house.

Rust is the cause of most of the breaks in ordinary screens. Corrosion weakens the metal and rust holes appear. Unless each rust hole is patched the screen at once loses its protective value. If you will observe insect pests buzzing about a screen you will note how alert they are in finding a break.

Patching rusty holes in corrodible metal screens is an endless task and it is always unsatisfactory. Soon the screen becomes a mass of patches which also rust in their turn. A coat of paint is not the remedy. It requires time to apply and at best is only a temporary protection.

The way to be certain that screens will give permanent protection is to use rustproof insect screen cloth. Insect cloth made of bronze or copper wire is immune to rust and it gives the full protective service you have a right to expect from screens.

the remainder of their tour and are delighted with their Canadian experiences so far.

Miss Ishbel, who is an attractive young lady with a typical Old Country complexion, was immensely amused at being described in a Montreal paper as a lady with a "heather complexion." It was suggested to her that probably the erring reporter had never seen real heather and got his ideas of it from the colored supplements of the Saturday papers. "No doubt he meant well," was her comment. The former premier and his daughters toured Montreal's historic spots during their brief visit and the Misses MacDonald yesterday visited some friends who came from Lossiemouth (Mr. MacDonald's birthplace) and are now located in Montreal.

The Canadian tour is the result of a promise made some time ago by Mr. MacDonald that he would take his daughters to Canada and go over the journey taken twenty years ago when he visited Canada with the late Mrs. MacDonald. The party hope to enjoy a beneficial holiday among the Canadian Rocky Mountains.

Miss Ishbel MacDonald first became known to the world when she became chatelaine of No. 10 Downing street when her father became the first, and so far the only, Labor Premier of Great Britain. During her short occupancy of the famous residence, redolent of the memories of the greatest hostesses of the past, wives of Britain's most famous and most aristocratic premiers, Miss MacDonald won the regard of Queen Mary, and the queen and the daughter of the Labor leader who rose from a humble beginning to be the First Commoner of the land became firm friends. Although typically Scottish in appearance Miss MacDonald speaks with a strong English accent, a fact which is accounted for by her long residence in London.

All three ladies appeared very grateful for the cordial welcome extended by Montreal, a city which in general is very much opposed to the policies advocated by Mr. MacDonald. But political differences were ignored and the city turned out to welcome the man who had been honored by his countrymen and placed in the seat of highest authority in the British Empire. A large crowd gathered in the Windsor Station concourse after his arrival on the Frontenac from Quebec. Yesterday he addressed the Canadian Club of Montreal where he pleaded for an interest in and understanding of British labor problems by Canadians to discount the flood of ignorant criticism which, he said, was certain to be levelled at the Labor party if it was returned to power in Great Britain.

In a statement earlier in the day he declared that he was delighted with the evidences he had seen of prosperity in Canada. The condition of the country, he said, was a tribute to the energy, the character and the intelligence of the Canadian working classes.

Mc MacDonald is filling a number of engagements in Toronto to-day.

Pease "Economy" FURNACE

Here is conservative and sound endorsation of Pease heating efficiency from Knox Manse (Rev. Wm. McDonald) 298 King Street East, Peterborough, Ontario, who operates an "Economy" furnace. Rev. Mr. McDonald writes:

"The Pease Economy Furnace in Knox Manse is giving excellent satisfaction. It was carefully placed and piped by courteous workmen, and supplies abundant heat with moderate firing. The warm air is well distributed and we are comfortable in every part of the house."

In every detail of the "Economy" furnace there are points of excellence: The one-piece, dust-proof ash-pit; the handy vertical shaker; the big double feed door incorporating a hot-blast air feed and similar features that warrant your investigation. CITY PRAISED BY PRESIDENT

Head of Funeral Service Association Refers To Peterborough in Address.

NEW ACT BENEFICIAL.

The following address was given by President J. A. Mundell at the Funeral Service Association meeting yesterday:

"Under the guidance of the good hand of God, we are permitted to meet once again in the Annual Convention of the Ontario Funeral Service Association. May our hearts ascend in thankfulness and gratitude to the Most High for His bountiful benefits bestowed upon us for the year passed.

The Place of Meeting—

"The city of Peterborough, a centre of beautiful homes, a hive of industry, a perfect charm of scenic environment, and the outstanding business target between the cities of Toronto and Montreal. Closely affiliated with the abundant scenic beauties of Mother Nature, the city is the "stepping off" place for the charming summer delights and the rich enchantment of the far-famed, unequalled Kawartha Lakes.

"The city of Peterborough has a population to-day of about 26,000, and we may feel proud to know that these are entirely of British stock. That splendid spirit of justice, freedom and good will, permeates the hearts of the people, and her law abiding citizens are justly proud to keep untarnished at the top of the mast, that emblem of British liberty and freedom, the good old Union Jack.

"The local council is one of the finest in the country and are never neglectful to adopt any measures, which would be for the benefit of the advance and enlargement of this fair city of Peterborough. Just about to complete its existence of one hundred years, and our visit to this city will enable us to verify what has been said with regards to progress. Suffice enough to say if the city of Peterborough steadily advances in the next decade as she has in the past one hundred years in progress and industrial power, it is not an assumption to say she will yet take her place as one of the foremost cities of our fair Dominion.

"The river Otonabee, which flows from the beautiful Kawartha Lakes, winds its way through the city, and later on is known as the Trent River, which falls into the great Lake Ontario near the town of Trenton. This is the stream which is so harnessed to produce the necessary electrical power to supply and turn the wheels of industry throughout this part of Ontario. The city derives its electrical power from this river, and many of the factories in the city are well worth a visit. The fine edifice of the Canadian General Electric Company must be seen to be fully appreciated, the Quaker Oats factory whose splendid foods many of us relish, the Western Clock Company, the Canadian Woollen Mills, the De Laval Company, manufacturers of all kinds of dairy equipment, the Raybestos Company, the Nashua Gummed and Coated Paper Company, the Vermont Marble Company, the Canadian Aladdin Company, the Canadian Packing Company, the Brinton Carpet Company, the Peterborough Lock Works, the Ackerman Company, several lumber companies and the William Hamilton Companies, as well as a good number of smaller companies. This list of industries is a fair sample of the cosmopolitan nature of the work carried on in this fair city. They give light, heat, food and clothing, and let us not forget the clocks, there can be no excuse for anyone of our members being late at the sessions of our Convention.

"The industries of Peterborough have a capital investment of $22,000,000, and the products amount annually to $30,000,000.

"The city is linked up with other parts of our fair Dominion with six lines of railway. The C.P.R. to Toronto and Montreal, and to Georgian Bay. The C.N.R. railway to Belleville, Port Hope, Lindsay, Orillia and Midland. All this communication and connection assures the manufacturer of splendid service, and of every economic principle for disposing and distributing, and the shipment of his wares. There are 22 passenger trains come and depart from the city daily.

"The highways leading to and from the city are in excellent shape, and motorists can fully enjoy and appreciate the comforts of easy travelling. These highways have often been eulogized by our neighbours to the south, who spend their vacations during the summer months in this district. Plans are already in the making for other similar highways, the engineers of the Provincial Government are daily busy surveying and building. A visit to the famous Trent Canal is well worth while, and one of the greatest engineering feats in the world may be seen, in the hydraulic lift lock, the largest in the world. Don't fail to visit this place, you will be well repaid.

"The educational status of the city is one of the highest. The city is proud of her many educational facilities. A provincial Normal school, Collegiate Institute, ten public schools, ample provision for all kinds of technical education, a large library, and a splendid conservatory of music furnish a high reputation in the Province.

"There are six public parks in the city, which provide recreation and rest for the city working man and his family. Many of the citizens have beautiful cottages along the banks of the river, and near the lakes, and these are used as the summer vacational place or residence.

"A city of large and imposing churches, two hospitals and a theatre. A Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. all contribute eloquently to the welfare of the city intellectually, spiritually and socially.

"Our visiting delegates in this Convention will find at the Little Lake Cemetery one of the very best burying grounds in the Province of Ontario. The Peterborough funeral directors are all prominent in the city. It is only fair to mention the names of those whose guests we are, and who have done so well to provide accommodation, and extended a hearty welcome to us for our convention. These names are:

A. Comstock and Sons,
Walter T. Belleghem,
Lane and Eano,
Gerald McFadden.

"The three outstanding men who have provided Peterborough funeral service in the past were:

Aaron Comstock,
Daniel Belleghem,
Martin McFadden,

are now deceased, but their honoured names live on in their sons.

Our Fraternal Dead.

"Since our last Convention which was held at Hamilton many changes have taken place. There is one change that will come upon us all individually, when our service here will close and we shall be called higher. The grim reaper has wielded his weapon in the midst of our ranks, and has taken away from our Association and fellowship those whom we loved. We feel sorry and our hearts go out in deepest sympathy to those bereft of their loved ones, and it is our prayer that the Great God Eternal will soothe and comfort their hearts. Let us arise and with bowed heads and hearts pay humble tribute to those of our brothers and sisters who have been called to higher service. Their names are:

Mrs. Phillips, wife of Wm. Phillips, a brother of Harry Phillips, V.D., of the Association, and a member of the firm of Phillips Bros., of Sarnia.

Reuben C. Glaves, father of J. C. Glaves of Scotland, Ont., uncle of John Lampman, of Wellandport, Ontario.

Mrs. Jane Winter, mother of Richard Winter of St. Catharines, Ontario.

J. F. Haines, a former funeral director of Brampton.

Henry C. Barlett, father of A. W. Barlett, funeral director, Toronto.

W. H. Beach, of Beachburg, Ontario, died suddenly while on his way to answer a first call.

E. H. Stevenson, of Renfrew, Ontario.

Joseph D. Schuett, of Cargill, Ont., killed by a train while returning home in his car.

Wm. H. Letcher, father of Martin Letcher, Port Perry, Ontario.

Joseph Branchand, of Cobalt, member of firm of Thorne and Branchand.

Mrs. Walsh, mother of W. Walsh of Simcoe.

Harry Ellis, of Toronto.

Miss Edith Paul, daughter of J. Paul, of Powasson, Ontario.

Brother of Ed. Killingsworth of London.

Jas. McArthur, predecessor of J. Paul, of Powasson, Ontario.

Wm. McCleister, father of D. W. Cleister, of Brantford.

J. A. Grobb, member of firm of Grobb Bros. He was uncle of G. Grobb of this Association.

S. F. L. McMurtsy, of Midland.

James R. Tupper, one of the older generation of Casket travellers, Toronto.

Mrs. Thos. Gillott, mother of W. J. E. Gillott, of Millbrook.

James T. Patterson, son of J. J. Patterson, Welland, a member of the firm.

Donald J. Harris, of Harris and Brady, Ottawa.

Mrs. Frank Kilkenny, of Bradford.

Our Association.

"The Ontario Funeral Service Association has taken a real step in advance this past year as the returns will show.

"At Hamilton Convention, applications were received for membership. A list of twenty members were added to our Association at the Executive meeting held at Toronto on September 6th, of last year.

"The District meetings which have been held throughout the jurisdiction have been an inspiration not only to those who took part, but to all who attended, which added a new and living interest to our Association as a whole. Members everywhere were aroused to the living truth that the district meetings were well worth while. Encouraging comments and friendly criticism substantiated the fact of their huge success. Neighbour got to know his neighbour, and the interests and workings of our association in the District meetings, acts as an education ground for each director to take a leading part in the larger and more definite machinations of our Association. At a meeting of the Toronto District, including the adjoining counties, a very profitable time was spent, and it was reported that very decided and satisfactory progress was being made with district meeting.

"Up to and including Jan. 1st, 1927, District meetings have been held in the following places:

At Toronto, Sept. 30th, 1927
At Orillia, Oct. 10th, 1927
At Harrison, Oct. 19th, 1927.
At London, Oct. 19th, 1927
At Hamilton, Oct. 28th, 1927
At Flesherton, Nov. 9, 1927.
At Peterborough, Nov. 10th, 1927

"An invitation was extended by the Quebec Association to hold a demonstration and a Dinner in Montreal on January 19th, 1928. About 24 Ontario men and Professor Eckels put on a successful conference on that date. This was certainly a most successful meeting, and the cordiality of the welcome extended to us by our sister Association of Quebec will not be easily erased from our minds.

"Such a list indicates to us that 8 out of 11 Districts, into which the Province is divided, are already functioning. The plan is fraught with great popularity everywhere, and many repeat meetings have already been arranged.

"It is also interesting to note, as is indicated by the test that about 43 new members have been added, this could have never been possible had it not been for the staging of our District meetings held throughout the jurisdiction. Beyond the shadow of a doubt everything goes to prove that the enthusiasm and attendance shown on behalf of our member as well as non-member, is arousing a spirit of uniformity that will help tremendously in the larger service of our Association.

"Non-members of the Association are heartily welcomed to these meetings, we hope you will all soon be numbered as members. The real spirit of co-operation is shown by the following letter from a funeral undertaker of a small town in the extreme east of Ontario.

"'Enclosed find my cheque for $15.00 for application for membership in the Ontario Association, because I find it a good thing to help one another, and to be united altogether. It is not because I have a big business here, as it is a very small place, and I am getting from 10 to 20 jobs in a year, and you can see yourself that $15.00 fees for a small place like this is a good deal, but I am glad to send it and help the Association to be successful, and to have your help whenever I am in need of your protection against foolish opposition or something of that kind.

"'Yours for protection.'

"Such is an example worthy to be followed by every Funeral Director in the Province who is not already a member of our esteemed Association.

Legislation.

"New and important legislation has been passed during the year. At a recent session of the Ontario Legislation Bill No. 152 introduced by Mr. McBrien called an act respecting Embalmers and Funeral Directors. It is cited as The Funeral Directors and Embalmers Act, 1928. The Act is fully outlined in the "Canadian Funeral Service" Magazine which no doubt has been read by you. I feel certain, you will agree with me, when I say such legislation places our Association on a solid basis, economically and educationally which it hitherto lacked. It is also the harbinger for still greater legislation for the upbuilding and the cementing of those ties of union, which is the main spring of every organized unit. See that you get a copy of the new Act; read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest it.

The Canadian Funeral Service.

"Words of mine as your president are inadequate to express the deep sense of gratitude we owe to our esteemed Editor and friend of the "Canadian Funeral Service Monthly Magazine." I refer to Mr. James O'Hagen. Each month brings to our doors a copy of a paper which is of fundamental interest to every funeral Director, the product of a fertile mind, an inspired intellect, and an awakened conscience as to the pros and cons of our Association. Over-flowing with matters of usefulness and deep interest, it is proving itself a monthly stimulus. As the official organ of our Association, I ask you as a member to get in behind the venture and help make it a real power for good amongst us. (Surely I have not to remind you that you should become a subscriber, and act promptly, at once. It is of such important value in your business that you should not leave this Convention without making arrangements to have your name added to the subscription list. The congratulations to the editor on the production of such an informative and progressive journal. We wish it every prosperity as an asset of our Association in Ontario.

Progress.

"For a short space I desire here and now to direct a few remarks to the individual member of our Association. Need you be reminded in this present day of sharp, close competition it is only those who fling the weight of their whole being into their business, only those who are "all there" who can succeed in any marked way. Half-hearted energy will only produce half-hearted results. Emerson once voiced a great truth. "It is only as a man puts off from himself all external support and stands alone that I see him to be strong and to prevail." Snap and enthusiasm, joy in your job. Work for the sake of work and not for the sake of salary. The world would be well rid of men who rise precisely at 8.00 p.m. and leave promptly at 6.00 p.m. and who have an eye on the clock from first to last. Get a reputation for doing things well. Get into the habit of being clean, clear, well-ordered and precise.

"Let our Association be a help by magnifying your possibilities, minimize your difficulties, let the staff be courage and your guide self-confidence and no matter what obstacles bar the way, you will be an asset, you will be a help, you will be a mighty force to help make our Association a place of unity and strength and therefore a crown bearing many jewels of success and progress.

"I cannot close or even refrain from expressing my heartfelt appreciation of the practical help I have received from the officers of the Executive. As your President I take this final opportunity for thanking you, and may I add I have never had better assistance and encouragement than that which has been shown by the members and officers of our Association. May every sucess fall as a mantle upon us as we face the incoming year, and may our Association speed on to victory."

NEW VERSION OF THE ORTHOPHONIC

Latest Creation in Victrolas Being Shown For First Time at Heintzman Hall.

In the Credenza phonographic model, Heintzman and Co. are now showing for the first time in eterborough a new version of the Victrola Orthophonic, which visitors to Heintzman Hall are acclaiming as the greatest of all great creations in the talking machine class. The handsome console cabinet in rich walnut offers a refined furnishing, the most discriminating purchaser might well be proud to own, while for exquisite tone and wide range, the Credenza is in truth a wonder machine with not a hint of mechanism to mar its true-to-life reproductions.

An attractive feature of this new Orthophonic which will find favor with all who love order, neatness and ready accessability not forgetting beauty, is the 12 record folios—6 on each side of the full depth vertical sound opening. These volumes are generous in capacity, each leaf being a strong record container with the titles on both faces exposed. The backs of these books are strongly bound in varied shades of leather and stand vertically in tiers of three, backs out and lettered in gold with the names of favorote authors whose classic numbers are recorded for reproduction. This library annex for taking care of records makes for preservation and easy selection, while the backs of the volumes reveal arresting examples of the binders decorative art and present a colorful relief to the dark finish of a walnut cabinet.

Mr. Haddow, the genial local manager for Ye Olde Firme, Heintzman and Co. extends an open invitation to come and hear and see this wonderful Credenza at Heintzman Hall.

CAPITOL THEATRE IN PAINTERS' HANDS

Renovating Will Be Finished in Time For Labor Day Opening.

Movies have moved out and painters have moved in. The Capitol Theatre walls are bare of pictures in the lobby and many gallons of paint in cans now adorn the approach to the theatre. The carpet on the stairs has been taken up and everything points to a complete renovation inside and out. The work is being carried on by one of Canada's leading decorators who will put the theatre in shape for a smart re-opening on Labor Day.

Airplane trips are the novel cure for whooping cough "discovered" by a German doctor; the young patients were taken for cruises of an hour each at a height of 10,000 feet.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

PROCRASTINATION PREVENTS RELAXATION

It is important that you build a determination in your mind to accomplish what you have chosen for your goal in life. Many people are failures in their own business because they are lazy about coming to work on time, and yet if they were working for someone else, they would not be troubled in this way.

Opera singers are seldom sick because they have to set aside their personal feelings and put into motion every power of their will to meet their engagement with the public. A strength of character to meet your engagements and obligations is essential to any honest success. The determination of accomplishment is an attitude of mind necessary for feeling well.

Many people fall into the habit of feeling tired or sick. Man is naturally a lazy animal, and one of his worst diseases is chronic laziness. We must organize our minds and our bodies so that they shall be in top notch condition when they are needed. What would happen to an army if the general only drilled his soldiers when he felt like it? And what catastrophies would happen on a railroad if the engineers ran their trains whenever they didn't choose to smoke or play checkers?

Let us substitute thoughts of health, energy, vitality and industry for those of vacillation, discouragement and idleness. Not only must we have a determination to work, and a responsibility for doing things well, but we must also have our periods of relaxation if we wish to keep a well balanced mind.

I have a number of friends who have reached the high pinnacles of success and almost invariably they tell me that they have made more money and enjoy life more since they learned the value of vacations and recreations. This does not mean that you should fritter your life away in a vain pursuit of pleasures, but means that you can work harder at your occupation, and concentrate on your work with more enjoyment when you know that you are not chained to a prison rock pile.

There is a magic in a clear brain and a vigorous physique. There is a rest and a cure brought on by a contact with nature that cannot be accomplished by all the drugs and sanitariums in the world. Through the majestic forces of the eternal we can contact the surge of life.

Man was originally a free individual, roaming the hills and valleys. He climbed the heights and swam the lakes. The confinement to an indoor occupation or a staving profession which uses all of his strength merely to make a living is certainly unnatural.

The postponement of a vacation has sent many a person to a premature grave. The brain cells need rest and recreation. They lose their elasticity through confinement just as an automobile tire will rot and waste as much through dis-use as from use.

There is nothing so destructive to happiness as monotony—nothing so blunting to ability as stagnation. A fresh point of view, a change of scene, fresh air, and physical movement are effervescents to life, without which it would be as flat as bread without leavening.

Employers are realizing that it is not the one who slaves the longest hours who does the most efficient work, and the old idea of filling the day with monotony from morning till night, month after month, and year after year is dulling to hope, fatal to health, and a hobble to success.

Questions and Answers.

Question: Mrs. L.B. writes: "I have a continual soreness in my left side and left chest. Please tell me what my trouble might be."

Answer: You may be suffering from some form of heart trouble, such as angina pectoris. You should have an examination made by a competent doctor, as it is impossible to diagnose your case by mail.

Question: Mrs. C.M.B. writes: "I have a friend who is suffering with goitre—the kind that hurts worse when lying down. What would you advise in this case as to diet or otherwise? We have found your advice very helpful and want to thank you."

Answer: Fasting and dieting may be used in either simple or exophthalmic goitre. It is not always possible to entirely reduce the swelling without the proper physiotherapy treatments.

Question: Reader asks: "May fruit or ice cream be eaten between meals without interfering with digestion?"

Answer: Fruit and ice cream must both be considered real foods and should therefore be used in place of a meal, or may be used in addition to a meal if combined with those foods with which they are harmonious.

Question: Miss Pat writes: "Will you please tell me a remedy for persistent bad breath. I have had all my teeth taken care of and am in a healthy condition, so I cannot understand this. Will you please give me a remedy?"

Answer: If your teeth are in good condition your bad breath may be a result of diseased tonsils, catarrh, or auto-intoxication. If the breath has a sweetish odor, you may have diabetes. Before I could give you a remedy you would have to tell me which of these things is causing you trouble.

TWO PRIZES FOR DRAWING

Eileen Leahy and Helen Huppe Win This Week's Awards.

CONTEST ENDED.

Two prizes were given this week in the drawing contest, owing to the great number being printed, and the closing of the contest. The winners were Eileen Leahy, 9 years, R. R. No. 2, Indian River, whose drawing was number 34, and Helen Huppe, 12 years, 372 Downie street, with drawing number 31.

All those who are interested in competitions are reminded of the new Secretary Hawkins Club, which runs a weekly competition. Only members of the club are eligible to compete. A membership application is printed in to-day's paper, with particulars of the competition. Look it up.

SPOILT MUSIC

A Splendid New Serial by Ruby M. Ayres

THE STORY THUS FAR:

JENNIFER FRY is saved from drowning by NICHOLAS GAUNT, wealthy young man-about-town. Later he takes her to tea and asks to call, but she refuses because she is ashamed of her humble surroundings. They continue their friendship and Jennifer comes to love Nicholas, but he is suddenly called abroad by his mother's illness. During his absence Jennifer's father dies. She reads of his engagement in the paper, and stands in the crowd to see him and his bride come from the church after the wedding. Her mother dies. Five years later she meets Nicholas again. He decides to divorce his wife, Lady Edith. But just then Lady Edith becomes ill. The doctors promise her only a year of life and she makes Gaunt promise not to see Jennifer for that year. Jennifer is angry and decides to be as gay as she can on a legacy of eight thousand pounds left her by an uncle. She gives up her job and goes to work to have a good time. She meets DOLORES and BUDDY, two women who live in the flat above her new dwelling place. Through them she meets CHESNEY, who quarrels about her with Buddy and proposes to Jennifer. Jennifer asks him to wait for her answer. They meet Gaunt and his wife at a night club. Jennifer, tired and unhappy, promises to marry Chesney. Buddy, when she hears of the engagement, tries to kill herself. Lady Gaunt invites Chesney and Jennifer to dinner. Gaunt tells Jennifer she shall never marry Chesney. Jennifer meets MR. WINTER, and MRS. RUDYARD, an old friend of Edith Gaunt's. Then Gaunt comes to Jennifer to tell her she must go away with him. She refuses.

CHAPTER XXXX.

The Bell Rings.

He strode across the room and turned the key in the lock.

Jennifer cried out, "Nicholas!"

He came back to her, his eyes blazing.

"You say you love me?"

"You must know I do. You must know I do."

Gaunt held out his arms. "Then come to me."

"No."

She tried to face him fearlessly, but there was fear in her heart because, after all, it seemed that she had failed to hold him in check.

She began to plead with him.

"Don't be cruel to me, Nicholas. If you really love me you will go away. Haven't you made me suffer enough already?"

"I have suffered more than you. At least you have always been free, and I have been tied hand and foot."

"A bondage you chose to make and to keep," she could not help reminding him with great bitterness. "It was you who chose to leave me, not I who sent you away."

"Very well, then; now I do not choose to leave you," he said quickly. She held a trembling hand to him.

"If you will go now, I promise to see you again tomorrow and talk things over."

Gaunt only laughed.

"I have no faith in your promises, and tomorrow is too far away."

Jennifer ran past him to the door and began beating on its panels.

Gaunt watched her with merciless eyes.

"Nobody will hear you. You say that the flat upstairs is empty."

Jennifer began to sob. She was overwrought and tried beyond her strength.

"You are utterly cruel and selfish. It is only of yourself you are thinking."

For a moment he stood motionless. Then he went to her and in spite of her struggles he took her in his arms.

"What is it you are fighting against?" he asked, passionately. "A silly scruple which life no longer considers at all? Or is it just your own pride? Kisss me, Jennifer, and forget there is anyone but just you and me in the world."

"No, no, no!"

"I love you so much. I will make you so happy. Don't you believe in my love, Jennifer?"

She looked up at him, the tears running down her face.

"You have failed me twice before," she said brokenly.

"Forget the past," Gaunt pleaded. "Isn't it enough that you are here in my arms?"

Jennifer closed her eyes.

What was the use of struggling, she asked herself desperately. She believed in Fate, and if Fate had decreed that this was to be, no power on earth could change it.

And yet—already he had twice failed her. Imagination carried her back again to the quiet room of her little flat off Notting Hill, and the bowl of fading roses on the table, and for a moment she lived again her own heartbreak and despair.

She had tried never to think since of the night she spent after he left her; her thoughts had always instinctively shied away from the memory of it, dreading a return of the pain, but now she deliberately recalled it with every agonizing stab, every injury to her love and pride. He had not cared then how lie wounded her—would he care tomorrow or the next day, when it was too late to draw back?

"My love, my darling!" He was kissing her hair and her eyes and she could feel his thudding heartbeats beneath her cheek, but when his lips sought hers she jerked her head violently away beyond his reach. "Let me go!" There was a cry in her voice as if he had physically hurt her, and her face was white.

"Let me go. You say you don't believe in my promises. I don't believe in yours either. How do I know that tomorrow you won't leave me and go back to your wife, as you did before? Let me go . . . let me go."

"Jennifer!"

She tried to struggle free of his arms, but he held her fast.

"You know I adore you. You know no woman has ever counted in my life but you."

She was sobbing uncontrollably. It seemed as if the floodgates of years had burst open, letting free the tears and grief that had for so long been pent up in her heart.

"Leave me alone, that's all I want, only leave me alone." Over and over again she made her piteous plea.

"Jennifer, for God's sake don't cry so," Gaunt implored her.

"My dear, you'll make yourself so ill. Jennifer, you break my heart."

"If you'll only leave me."

"I can't leave you like this, even if I wished to, and I don't. I'm never going to leave you again, Jennifer——"

He broke off, turning his head sharply towards the door as the outer bell rang through the flat. With a great effort Jennifer tried to check her sobbing, but she was shaking from head to foot.

"The bell!"

Gaunt made an impatient gesture. "Let them ring. If we don't answer it they'll think no one is in and go away."

"But the lights are on, and you can see the lights in this room from the hall. We must answer it."

"Very well, I'll go." He had turned to the door when she called to him in terror:

"If it's Malcolm . . ."

Gaunt laughed savagely.

"I hope it is. We can settle this thing once and for all then."

He unlocked the door and went out into the passage, closing the door behind him, and Jennifer sank down on to the couch, burying her face on the cushions.

She felt utterly exhausted. Nothing seemed to matter. She did not really care if it should prove to be Chesney at the door; she was sick to the depths of her soul, sick of life.

She did not even look up when Gaunt came back, and he stood for a moment with clenched hands, his eyes on her bowed head.

Remorse was struggling now with the jealousy and desire in his heart. He loved Jennifer as well as he would ever love any woman, but he loved her selfishly.

He wanted her, and in order to get her he did not care if he made her suffer. And he had made her suffer so often. The unwilling thought forced itself home to him as he stood looking silently down at her.

She had been so happy and free from care when they first met. He thought of that tea at Rumpelmeyer's and Jennifer's shy innocence.

She had passed through many turbulent waters since then, he knew, and yet they had not quenched her love for him, and the knowledge made him ashamed even while it left him exultant.

He was unworthy of her love, and yet she loved him, and the despairing thought came to him that if only he were free he would make it up to her so generously—if only he were free!

But freedom could be bought but one way, and that way Jennifer would not go.

She raised her head suddenly, conscious of his gaze. Her face was disfigured with crying, and her hair all disordered.

"Who was it?" she asked wearily.

He echoed her question vaguely. Already he had forgotten the bell.

"Who was it? Oh, at the door you mean. It was the girl from upstairs. I thought you said she was away. You must have been mistaken. She asked for you and I said you were engaged."

Jennifer looked startled.

"If you mean Buddy, it could not have been she. She is away in Cornwall."

Gaunt frowned. He was impatient of the interruption.

"I know the girl well enough," he insisted; "yellow-haired and thin. It was 'Buddy,' as you call her."

"She's away with Dolores," Jennifer said again positively.

Gaunt shrugged his shoulders.

"It is of no consequence, anyway."

Jennifer laughed, a poor ghost of a laugh.

"I don't think anything is of any consequence now," she said brokenly.

There was a tragic silence. Gaunt stood with his hands clenched behind him, and Jennifer sat with averted head, tearing at her handkerchief.

Then suddenly Gaunt flung himself down beside her.

"Don't turn away from me. I can't bear it if you turn away from me," he said brokenly.

There was no longer either anger or passion in his voice, only the sadness of a great despair, and after the least little resistance, Jennifer turned. She put her arms round his neck, hiding her tearstained face against his shoulder, and Gaunt clasped her to his heart.

And for a long time they were silent, clinging to one another, trying not to think of the parting that must come, trying only to be content with the few moments of happiness so meagerly dealt out to them by Fate.

HOROSCOPE

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

THURSDAY, AUGUST 9, 1928.

Astrologers read this as rather an unfavorable day in planetary government, for many stars are in adverse aspect.

There is one aspect of promise which presages good fortune for writers and editors who are to profit greatly. Newspapers and magazines will be in tremendous demand, it is foretold.

Contracts and leases may be signed today with a fair possibility that they will prove satisfactory.

Women should be extremely cautious today, for they may be easily deceived in either love or business.

Weddings solemnized today may preface a partnership in which there is a lack of frankness and understanding. Honesty is the best policy in even small domestic affairs.

Persons interested in oil should take note that Neptune frowns today, warning against speculation.

There is an aspect supposed to indicate quarrels and dissensions regarding the domain of Neptune which includes beverages of all sorts.

There is warning in the stars against accidents. There may be a serious disaster early in the autumn.

While the aspects may have a tendency to hinder action and to cause discouragement, they may nevertheless cause extra effort which will be remarkably successful.

While this configuration prevails, talkative persons may learn that silence is golden through some sort of a snub or rebuke.

The sway favors writers rather than talkers and brings better promise to newspapers than to radio service.

newspaper than to radio service.

All the planetary conditions indicate tremendous expenditure of physical energy through the spoken word, which may not be always effective.

Persons whose birthdate it is should beware of impulsive or emotional decisions. These subjects of Leo are often too stubborn for their own good, but they have extraordinary possibilities of success all through their lives.

Children born on this day may be headstrong and hard to manage, but they have in all probability great potential talent. They may have in addition to the power in gain all that they desire a decided spiritual endowment.

LYRICS OF LIFE

THAT EXTRA ROOM

Five rooms, a roof, and not much more
We started with, a bride and groom,
And wondered what we had it for
A lot of times, that extra room.
Well, now our house is twice as great
As was the cottage we had then.
Leave out the attic and it's eight,
Or, if you count the hall, it's ten.

But really it's a puzzle now
When people come, as people do,
It's rather hard to figure how
To put them up a night or two.
Then dodging folk pajama-clad
Becomes our greatest indoor sport,
The while we thank the Lord we had
The sense to buy a davenport.

We've bought and sold and sold and bought
But still the problem is the same.
We had more space, or so we thought
Until an aunt or uncle came.
No poorer now we seem to be
Than when a youthful bride and groom.
But here's the mystery to me:
What happened to that extra room?

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

Five-days Bedtime Story

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE LOST SQUIRRELS

"Come on!" chattered Johnnie Bushytail to Billie Bushytail.

"Come where?" asked Billie Bushytail of Johnnie Bushytail.

"Let's go find some nuts to eat," whispered Johnnie as he scampered down the tall tree in which the home nest was built. "Come on but don't make a noise."

"Why not?" Billie wanted to know.

"Because," whispered Johnnie, "Sister Sallie might hear us, and so might Jennie Chipmunk and if we find any nuts they'd want some and we don't want to give them any."

"Oh, don't we?" asked Billie.

"No," chattered Johnnie, "we want all the nuts we find for our own selves. We'll eat 'em all up!"

"Yes," agreed Billie, "we'll eat 'em all up!"

So the two little squirrel boys scampered off to look for nuts growing on trees. Squirrels are very fond of nuts and with their paws, which are almost like hands, they can hold a nut up and gnaw off the hard shell to get at the soft meat inside as quick as a wink.

Now it was too early in the year for nuts to be properly ripe in that part of the wood country where Billie and Johnnie Bushytail lived. In other parts of the country nuts might be ripe in August, but not around where Uncle Wiggily had his hollow stump bungalow.

There the nuts on trees did not ripen until October when the cold frost cracks open the shells, or burrs and lets the brown nuts fall out on the ground for squirrels and boys and girls to pick up.

So Billie and Johnnie chased around in the woods for an hour or more, looking for a tree with ripe nuts on, but they found none. By this time they were quite far from their nest home, though they did not know this. And they were lost, but they did not know that, either.

At last, after climbing up many trees, Johnnie found one on which grew some black walnuts. The nuts were hidden in an outer green shell of bark which, later, would harden and crack open, so the nut inside would drop out.

But now the squirrel boys were so hungry for early nuts that, after gnawing open one of the soft shells, and finding that the meat inside, though soft, had a good taste, they began to fill their pockets with the unripe black walnuts.

Johnnie sat down on a log.

"Oh, what a lot of nuts!" chattered Billie.

"I'm glad we didn't let Jennie and Sister Sallie know we were coming after them," chattered Johnnie. "'Cause we want all these nuts to eat for ourselves; don't we?"

"Sure!" said Billie.

After they had their pockets filled with the walnuts, Johnnie and Billie started back toward where they thought was home. But they could not find the nest tree. And the more they scampered around the more lost they became until all at once Johnnie sat down on a log most sadly.

"Oh, where is our home?" he cried.

"Isn't it terrible to be lost!" chattered Billie.

Then, all of a sudden, there was a rustling in the bushes.

"Oh!" cried Johnnie. "Oh!" cried Billie.

But it was only Uncle Wiggily hopping through the woods.

"We're lost!" cried Billie and Johnnie together, like twins, when they saw the rabbit gentleman.

"No, you aren't lost any more, for I have found you!" laughed Uncle Wiggily. "But even if you were lost a little while you would not have starved," he said. "For I see you have your pockets full of fine green walnuts. Oh, what a lot you have! Enough for Sister Sallie and Jennie Chipmunk; haven't you? What a good squirrel boys you are to gather nuts for the little girl squirrels who can't get any for themselves so early."

Then Johnnie and Billie spoke up bravely and said:

"We weren't going to give the girls any walnuts, but we're sorry we were going to be so mean and they can have all they want."

"That's good!" said Mr. Longears. So he led the lost squirrels home and there was a great feast of new walnuts in the nest tree.

Boatmen on the river complain of danger from logs. The Martin and Stanley Piano company employees held their picnic to Idyl Wild aboard the "City of Peterborough" while the C.O.E. Angling Club was conveyed down the river by the "Water Lily" and the barge "Otonabee".

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE WORSHIP SCIENCE

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

Our generation is characterized as the age of science. Science is more than popular. We worship science.

The remarkable prestige that science has attained in recent years is reflected in the advertising propaganda we see all around us. We are invariably told that the new tooth paste or the hair tonic comes from the laboratory of the scientists. It is the best that science has to offer. Every manufacturer wants to give the impression that his product is the last word in scientific efficiency.

We literally worship science because of its wide application to practically every phase of human life. Science is popular because it has achieved wonders in the past. The last few years have seen a revolution in our mode of living made possible by the application of science.

Science has fired the imagination with unlimited confidence and expectation. No one would be greatly astonished if someone should discover a means of reaching the moon or even of making a round trip to the Planet Mars. The land and air and water barriers are being made highways of progress through science. We have come to believe that science can and will solve all our problems.

Men have always worshipped the forces that helped them to master their environment and to secure the good things of life, health, happiness and success. Science is deified today because it does what the ancient gods were reputed to do and does it more effectively. It has given the common man more luxury and it promises to lead him into the promised land or the near future where drudgery and poverty will be practically eliminated. What more could you ask of a deity? No wonder we worship science.

Office worker or porter, clerk or housewife—no matter who we are—every one of us may offend unknowingly.

Perspiration odour... here's the plain truth about it

IT is no secret that perspiration odour offends

In business as well as society, it is a serious handicap.

But do you realize that we are all subject to perspiration odour? That at times nearly everyone is guilty?

The warm weather — the active life we lead — the close daily association with others — all make perspiration odour particularly noticeable.

We must perspire — or die. Even on cool days our millions of pores continually give off invisible perspiration — often as much as a quart of waste every 24 hours.

The Danger of Offending Without Realizing It

Whether you see this waste moisture or not — it is always odorous. And it spares no one! Financier or labourer — society leader or servant — all may offend if they don't take precautions.

Nor, unfortunately, can we tell when we ourselves are guilty of unpleasant perspiration odour.

For once we become accustomed to an odour, our sense of smell becomes deadened to it. That's why even the most fastidious people—the very persons who think they are safe—are often among the chief offenders.

A Mid-Summer Special on LIFEBUOY SOAP is now available at your Dealer's

Don't Risk Embarrassment

It's easy now to avoid perspiration odour. Simply wash and bathe often with Lifebuoy, the deodorizing toilet soap.

Just as its mild, antiseptic lather protects health by removing germs —so does it prevent perspiration odour by purifying pores.

And you'll be delighted to see how fresh and clear Lifebuoy's antiseptic lather keeps complexions. Like millions of others, you'll favour it for every toilet purpose.

Note Its Hygienic Scent

You will learn to love Lifebuoy's clean scent which proves Lifebuoy purifies, yet which evaporates after rinsing. Use Lifebuoy a week and you'll use it for life. Get some today.

RICHARD HALL LIMITED

IN POLICE COURT

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, August 8.—This afternoon Magistrate Payne reserved judgement when Harold E. Burgess appeared before him to answer to a charge of running his dance hall after hours permitted by law. Burgess pleaded not guilty and elected to plead his own defense. The alleged offense was committed Friday, August 3rd when it was claimed, Burgess ran nine minutes past the hour of eleven forty-five, when the by-law states, dancing must cease unless special permission has been granted. The by-law governing this is number 1064, amending by-law 1037 of the township of Seymour.

Constable Seaborne gave evidence that he had entered the dance hall at six minutes to midnight and asked Burgess if he were not running too late. Burgess did not think so and they compared watches, Burgess claiming his time to be correct at 11.45 while Seaborne's watch read 11.57. Seaborne claimed that he took two witnesses, and went to Pollock's store and telephoned the C.P.R. station agent in Havelock to get the correct time. The time given by the operator showed Seaborne's watch to be four minutes slow, making Burgess' time piece sixteen minutes behind standard time.

Harold Smith, sworn, said he was at the dance hall on the night in question and had seen the watches of both Seabourn and Burgess, but he had not heard any conversation between the two. He had also gone with the officer to check the time with C.P.R. railroad time.

Bert McPherson, the second witness, also saw both watches and was one of the party that checked the time with Havelock. He claimed that they were absent from the dance hall about four minutes all told.

Burgess was permitted to question any of the witnesses but did not ask anything other than to verify their stories as they had already been told. Testifying in his own defense, Burgess, accused, said that Seaborne had entered the pavillion on Friday night and notified him that he was running overtime. Accused produced his watch and saw that it said sixteen minutes to twelve and stated that this was the correct time to the best of his knowledge. After a short conversation, Seaborne consulted his watch and the two time pieces were compared. Both witnesses were allowed to see the watches as well. Immediately upon Seaborne's departure, he had ordered the orchestra to play the national anthem at the conclusion of the dance number then in progress. "The dance numbers last a few minutes," Burgess pointed out to His Honor. This was all the dancing that took place after Seaborne had spoken to him and it had not been more than three minutes after the end of the conversation that the dancing stopped.

After hearing the evidence, Magistrate Payne pointed out that there might easily be a difference in time between watches and that the evidence of the railroad operator given over the telephone regarding the time could not be accepted as evidence since the operator had not been summoned to appear to swear that he had spoken over the telephone that night. There was no proof that the C.P.R. time was correct. He did not wish to convict a man for a matter of a few minutes and pointed out that he himself had been ten mintues late in making his appearance for the hearing of the case. His Worship thought that Burgess had stopped as soon as he possibly could even though it might have been nine minutes overtime. There were also some irregularities in the copy of the by-law as presented in court. His Worship reserved judgement till such time as it would be convenient for him.

This is the second offence of the same nature which has caused Burgess to appear in court. Last season he was found guilty and fined for staying open after the legal hours. Burgess is the operator of a dancing pavillion at Trent River.

PLATT—FOWLER

MILLBROOK, Aug. 7.—The home of Mr. and Mrs. George Fowler, King street, was the scene of a very pretty midsummer wedding on Monday, August 6, at 2.30 p.m., when their only daughter, Mary Kathleen, became the bride of Albert C. Platt, of Belleville, the rector, Rev. Canon Allen, officiating.

The bride entered the drawing-room, leaning on the arm of her father, to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding-march played by Mrs. Allen. She was daintily gowned in a French dress of peach colored georgette, with large black picture hat, black shoes, and hose of peach shade. A strand of finely-matched pearls, the gift of the groom, was her only ornament, and she carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses, baby's breath, and maiden hair fern.

The bride was attended by Miss Leola Huggins, of South Monaghan, who wore a becoming dress of green and gold shot taffeta, with blonde hat and shoes and stockings of a matching shade. Mr. David Fowler, the bride's brother, supported the groom.

The deep bay window was banked with flowers, the bridal party standing within it while the ceremony took place. There were more than sixty guests. During the signing of the register Miss Elizabeth Russell sang, "O Perfect Love," Mrs. Allen playing her accompaniment.

Girl friends of the bride who assisted in serving the buffet luncheon were: Misses Alice Armstrong, Etta Harcourt (Port Hope); Jane Catheart (Peterborough), and Elizabeth Russell. The toast to the bride was proposed by Rev. Canon Allen, the groom responding.

Later in the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Platt left by motor on a honeymoon trip to Niagara and Rochester, the bride travelling in a dress of navy flowered crepe, navy top coat, close-fitting hat of felt and velvet, her handbag, gloves, shoes and stockings being in a matching shade. On their return they will reside in Belleville.

The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a necklace in white gold with aqua-marine setting; to the groomsman a watch guard in green gold.

Among the out-of-town guests were: Mrs. Platt, the groom's mother; Mr. and Mrs. Craig Platt, Mrs. D. L. Lyons, Miss Helen Pettit, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. McFaul, and Mr. D. A. Moore, all of Wellington; Mr. and Mrs William, and Miss Jane Cathcart, of Peterborough; Miss E. Harcourt, of Port Hope; Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Huggins, of South Monaghan; Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Paul; Misses W. and Audrey Cathcart, of Cavan; Miss Jessie Fallis, Toronto.

The wedding gifts were many and beautiful, and included a number of substantial cheques.

These Muffet eaters—how they do consume them! Not so surprising, though, if you know Muffets.

Whole wheat as you never dreamed it could be! Cooked first. Then drawn to a filmy-thin, open textured ribbon. Wound, layer on layer, to a size and shape that just fit your cereal dish. Baked. And, last, toasted butternut brown.

What wonder Muffets, so light, so crisp, crumble in your mouth!

What wonder they absorb and blend so perfectly with cream and sugar, with fruit juices of all kinds! Yet keep, in every combination, their crunchy individuality, their suggestion of fresh pecans.

RAINS HOLD UP HARVEST WORK

Frequent Downpours Make Drawing-in Almost Impossible.

MEN WORK LATE

(Examiner Correspondence)

WARSAW, August 8.—The last week was a very trying one for hay, wheat and rye harvesting. The rains were so frequent and so heavy that by the time the stuff was dry enough to draw in another torrential rain would come. Monday, Tuesday and Thursday until about five o'clock p.m. were very good days and the men worked late. One man had a great deal of hay in rather a low field. It was dry in the afternoon so they stayed at it until finished at 11 o'clock p.m. and by midnight the rain was on. The wheat and rye is all cut but the greater part is still out and the sheaves which are knocked down by the storms sprout very quickly.

The crops reported throughout the country are better than they have been for several years, if they can only be harvested.

Some of the barley is turning also some of the oats, and seems in good condition, except that in some few places it has been pelted down.

With all the heavy rains the wonder is that people have been able to get as much stuff in in good condition as they have.

Those who have tried their potatoes report good crops of fine tubers.

The growth of garden stuff is rank. In many place leaves are very much larger than usual.

There is abundance of pasture, even in places often dry by August.

The Dummer stone crusher has ceased operations until after harvest.

Institute Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Warsaw Women's Institute will be held on Friday afternoon, instead of Thursday. Mrs. J. A. Sexsmith, District President, will address the ladies, and a most cordial invitation is given to all ladies, whether members or not, to attend.

Personals.

Rev. H. B. and Mrs. Herrington and Miss Lucille returned from their vacation at Denbeg on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Bellowes and children spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lonsberry.

DELEGATES ARE MADE WELCOME

do and the power to do. We embalm bodies not for appearance but only for preservation and to keep the body from returning to the natural elements in the natural way."

He also expressed a plea for further knowledge in the science of embalming which is more than a little knowledge and a whole lot of common sense. He asked anyone if they knew what a pallbearer was.

When they opened up Tutankhamen's tomb they found a beautiful canopy known as a pall. In graveside openings of the casket there should be a canopy as the light and shadows on the body change greatly the appearance of it. Embalming is the preservation against destruction and decomposition of the dead body and to destroy the germs of decomposition and also to improve the appearance of the body on funeral occasions, by the application of chemicals. He would like to see the time when there would be no injections but work done by some outside application. All through the talk there was a running request for more knowledge and for more care and better service in the occupation.

A motion by N. J. Boyd, seconded by A. Brandon, that the officers be elected from the floor of the conference instead of by a committee as formerly, was passed. A motion to amend the by-laws was also passed to this effect.

The court scene that was to have been held was postponed because of the absence of the judge. General inspection of the exhibits then was the next on the program, after which all adjourned to the Empress for the evening session.

Overtaxing the capacity of the grill and dining rooms of the Empress Hotel, over 200 members of the Funeral Service Association and their wives sat down at a sumptuous banquet last night. Souvenirs of Ottawa, and paper hats decorated the tables. Dr. J. W. Bell, Deputy Minister of Health for Ontario, was the chief speaker and was introduced by William Stewart of Toronto. The address was on the "Progress of the Science of Embalming." "Present embalming," he said, "is not the same as it was 6,000 or 7,000 years ago when it reached its highest peak between the years of 4,000 to 500 B.C. in ancient Egypt. Every nation on earth has believed in some kind of resurrection. The North American Indians buried weapons and articles possessed by the deceased with the bodies for use in journeys to other lands. Egyptians buried articles in the tombs, as they thought in a pagan way that the body and soul would unite after a cycle of 6,000 to 7,000 years.

The fundamental reason for embalming was the pagan idea that the soul and body would at some time reunite and carrying on an existence.

The art of embalming is now the preservation of the remains in an attractive state and for sanitary reasons and for the possible removal from the present place of interment to a later place of interment, so that the body will be in a good condition.

In early history embalming was confined solely to priests of the higher orders who guarded the secrets jealously and did not reveal them to persons of lower status. There were no patents in those days, so this was the reason of such secrecy. Modern embalming does not require affiliation with any priestly or religious order, no religious ritual, but a commercial business, a profession.

Discovery Accidental

The discovery of embalming was accidental. Certain lakes in Egypt contained alkaline mineral salts and it was found that bodies buried in the vicinity of these lakes were preserved for a long time. It was deduced that this mineral was transferred to the body which resisted decomposition, so the Egyptians dipped their bodies in this solution which they called "natron," and looked for preservation.

Decomposition set in at a later date, it was found. Then the religious orders took it up and introduced magic. Seven was always a magical figure, so the priests took this number and multiplied it by ten and brought in a state edict, saying that bodies would have to be immersed in this solution for seventy days. Decomposition set in around the stomach and intestinal canals. The ancients had scruples about violence to the dead, but the priests and religous orders could undertake this correctly and perform certain liberties. They selected a certain type of stone and sharpened it. An incision was made in the left flank and they removed the inner organs. This was the first step in dissection. The opening was then sewn up. These were the pioneers in such surgery.

The removed organs, owing to the pagan belief that they would again unite with the body, were wrapped up in a separate package and buried beside the deceased, so they could unite easily.

Air Hastened Decay

The science of embalming commenced about 4,000 B.C., and reached its highest peak in 500 B.C. Egypt priesthood developed along within this art. These priests observed the fact that exposure to air hastened decay, so rubbed the body with air-excluding materials.

Kings, high priests and men high up in civil and military circles received a higher form of embalming. The cranial cavity was opened and the brain removed; disinfectants being used to fill the cavity. The abdominal contents were then removed and disinfectants placed there also, after which the body was immersed for seventy days in "natron." Then it was washed in pitch and swathed in gummed linen. Recent uncoverings in Egypt show how perfect this method was. The flesh, after thousands of years remains soft. This cost one silver talent or about $1,200.00, and there was no casket.

People of less importance were not treated with so much care, and were charged only $300.00. Creosote was inserted in an incision in the left flank which dissolved the abdominal and intestinal organs. The incision was then re-opened and drained and disinfectants were put in, after which the body was immersed in "natron" for seventy days.

Many Persons Embalmed

The lowest class of persons were simply immersed in "natron" for seventy days. Over 730,000,000 persons were embalmed during the thirty-five or forty centuries of Egyptian embalming.

With the coming of the Christian era, due to pagan belief the art was lost for 1,000 years. The Ethiopians dried the bodies, rubbed them and painted them with gypsum, after which they were placed in a transparent case.

In all the ancient methods the circulatory system was not touched, as they were ignorant of the system. The modern embalmer has the advantage over the older one because he can inject fluid into this system.

Later small incisions were made all over the body and medicinal materials poured into them, but this was not so effective as the modern system.

Leaders of Art

He then mentioned a few men who go down in history as leaders in the art. Dr. Rush of Amsterdam (1655-1717), who was the first modern embalmer but who used only alcohol. William Hunter of England (1718-1765) who employed pitch, camphor and essential oils and put gypsum in the coffin to absorb the moisture, was the next. A Frenchman then was mentioned, J. B. Beaudelle (1778-1849) who used salt, asphalt drugs and was the first to use corrosive sublimate. Dr. T. Holmes of Brooklyn embalmed many civil war veterans to be sent home.

Dr. Bell outlined the modern methods used.

This time is an epoch in the development of our art and a suitable time for such an address and to honor the pioneers of earlier methods. You belong to a profession honored by time; a tradition which in some cases is not always upheld as it should be.

You have a government who has recognized you as no other group in the world has been recognized in your art. The government recognizes that they are dealing with decent and respected men; so act accordingly.

The new regulation is a standard, not a club. Regard the act and the regulations in this light and you will have your group the envy of the world over.

To-day your work brings you in contact with those who are mentally unbalanced by grief. Gentlemen, the dead must be buried, and let it be with respect and dignity. The living must live, but do not let their burden be beyond their means. Honor your profession and the pioneers to your profession by earning honorable recognition, public gratitude and respect and satisfaction to yourselves that you have performed a real public service.

J. Comstock replied and moved a vote of thanks. Harry Phillips of Sarnia seconded the motion, and the chairman, J. A. Mundell, extended the vote to Dr. Bell.

Explains New Act.

T. E. Simson of Sault Ste. Marie then explained the new Act and the regulations, of which a discussion took place yesterday morning in the Armouries at the regular business meeting.

After the banquet the men moved to Comstock's Funeral Home, where John Comstock assisted by Morley Bedford and Preston Thomson, carried out a demonstration in embalming.

Then they all enjoyed an Old Timers' Hour, when they told of reminiscences and stories, which completed the evening's program.

Railway locomotives are said to make full use of only five per cent of the heat generated in their boilers.

PEOPLE CROWD COUNCIL CHAMBER

Lewis Hay. This was for the records of the Council, and was received as such.

The Metallic Roofing Company had sent prices and cuts of their signs for stop streets and general road signs. They also asked permission to send a sample sign for the inspection of the Council. The literature was passed around the Council table, and finally laid over to be dealt with under general business.

There were no ratepayers present to address the council, but several members of the council had matters to be brought before their fellows. Deputy Reeve Davidson asked and was granted permission for L.O.L. 36 to hold the July 12th celebration in Campbellford next year. Councillor Stone suggested that a committee be appointed to look after a suitable celebration when the streets of the town were officially opened upon the completion of the paving. Reeve Bygott asked permission for the local branch of the Canadian Legion to have charge of the celebration if the council did not wish to do it themselves. Warden Davidson pointed out that the Cobourg Rotarians had volunteered to help the town put on a celebration when the occasion arrived, but if the council were not going to do it, he was in favour of giving the Legion permission to proceed. Councillor Wilkinson expressed himself as in favor of making it a big night with plenty of band music for street dancing. To use his own words, he wanted to open the town and lose the key for the night. Mayor Kingston suggested that a committee be appointed to look into the matter and report at the next meeting. The committee named were, the Mayor, Reeve, Deputy Reeve, Councillor O'Sullivan, Stone and Wilkinson.

Pavement Broken

Councillor O'Sullivan wanted to know on whose authority the sewer connections were being installed on Sebastapol street after the concrete base had been laid. He thought it did not look well and believed that there would be additional expense in connection with it. The concrete base had been broken in four places on this stheet and all to serve vacant lots, he claimed. Messrs. Stone, Bygott and Davidson attempted to explain and justify the procedure and finally Council Stone asked, "Well, what are you going to do about it?" Mr. O'Sullivan wanted to be notified before any more of such things were done. He though he should know about them since he was a member of the road and bridge committee.

Mr. Keiffer, Tronto, retained by the town to take charge of the paving, was asked by the mayor to address the council. He said that he had been with Mr. Fellows, the government road engineer yesterday and that Mr. Fellows had been quite satisfied with the work. They talked over the sewer trouble on Church street, and Mr. Fellows had expressed himself as satisfied with the pipe already laid. A little speed on the part of the town men working on the sewers would be appreciated since by the time these men were finished, the concrete gang would be "Right on their heels." The work in general was proceeding quite satisfactorily, he thought. There was nothing more that he wished to say unless someone wished to ask any questions.

How Much Will it Cost?

Deputy Reeve Davidson apparently did. He wanted to know if the concrete base was going to cost from two thousand to three thousand dollars per mile more than the contract price. He had understood that it was to be as cheap as the five inch macadam base. This is what the council had been told, he said, and he, as a Councillor, would not stand for anything else. Other councillors expressed their opinion that what Warden Davidson had said was correct. Mr. Keiffer replied by saying that the matter would be taken up in detail at the special council meeting when the costs would be prepared and presented to the council.

This being apparently the best that could be done for the present, Warden Davidson claimed that the town was not getting the two and one half inch macadam surface which was set forth in the contract. The surface was only two and one quarter inches. Mr. Keiffer replied that the base was only two and a quarter inches at the edge but six inches in from the concrete curb line it was increased to the full depth, but Mr. Davidson insisted that he and Mr. Fellows, Government engineer, had taken a sample and that it had only been two inches thick.

The argument waxed hot between Messrs. Davidson and Keiffer until the Mayor expressed the opinion that he thought Mr. Fellows should have been present at the meeting. Mr. Davidson assured His Worship that the Government had not sent Mr. Fellows here for that purpose. Mr. Keiffer claimed that everything was quite satisfactory to Mr. Fellows, but Mr. Davidson was not so sure that it was. He pointed out that Mr. Fellows had taken the two-inch sample to the Department in Toronto.

Mayor Kingston: "Gentlemen! Gentlemen! Don't you think we are splitting hairs. This is a matter for the Counties Council and the Government, not for the Town Council."

This started a triangular argument between Messrs. Davidson, Keefer and Stone until Mr. Davidson got the floor to ask as he allowed his arm to the streets. The condition of the sweep through a full half circle to indicate the large audience present. "Ask the citizens of the town. Ask the audience here if they do not expect three miles of pavement from the Government without having to pay one cent."

The Mayor Steps In.

But his challenge was never taken up because the Mayor asked the clerk if there were no petitions to be read. There were two, one for a sewer which had been verified and the solicitor was instructed to prepare the by-law and one for a water main on a portion of Centre Street, which was referred for verification of signatures, etc.

His Worship then advised the council that Robert Fox, road foreman, wanted to know whether or not to proceed with the Queen street sewer. This started a discussion on the condition of certain sections of the streets. The condition of the Bank of Montreal corner was ordered improved at once. Cosme. Stone thought that where the concrete base had already been laid the streets should be cleaned up and completed as far as possible. The spaces between the curb and the walk should be filled. On motion, these spaces were ordered filled with concrete to a depth of 4½ inches in the business section, and with earth and gravel in the residential section.

J. M. Bygott thought that the town should have through streets with proper signs. There would be about 25 signs needed at once. These through streets were necessary now that certain streets were paved. After some discussion a motion was passed ordering the purchase of signs at the best prices obtainable.

The Building By-law.

The building by-law was the next order of the night and was broached by Reeve Bygott. He wanted to know if its requirements were being met. The Mayor informed the council that the inspector had viewed the building in question and had refused to issue a permit for its erection. The building is not yet completed but apparently does not conform to the terms of the bylaw. Major Bygott thought this was a direct challenge to the council and if it was allowed to pass would make the bylaw useless. It could not be enforced in one case and not in another. There followed a lengthy discussion which only terminated when a motion to leave the matter till the next meeting was passed.

The matter of the disposal of certain trees which are on the streets was left to the Road and Bridge Committee with power to act. This led to the disposal of the gravel which is being taken from the streets where excavation for pavement is being made. Councillor Wilkinson wanted to know why it had been dumped in certain places and not used to repair roads that were not to be paved. J. J. O'Sullican claimed that he had no knowledge of even one load being dumped on private property and that if such had been the case, it was done without his consent. The argument between the two councillors became both hot and personal until the mayor called them to order.

Reeve Bygott said that he knew of a case where about seventy-five loads of this material had been dumped on one man's property. Mr. Wilkinson expressed the opinion that there had been perhaps five hundred loads dumped on private property. Mr. O'Sullivan maintained that if this was the case, it was without his consent or knowledge. Then he and Mr. Wilkinson got at it again. This time there was even more fire in their repartee. Even the personal side was brought to light until the mayor asked if the accounts and paysheets were ready. When they had been read and ordered paid the council adjourned.

Wedding Bells

CRAWFORD—COWARD.

OTONABEE, August 8.—The wedding was solemnized on July 21, at the home of the bride's parents, of Pearl, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Coward, to Donald T. Crawford, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Crawford, of Picton. The Rev. Roy Richard, of Pickering United Church, performed the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a bridal gown of white georgette trimmed with lace, and carried a bouquet of sunburst roses. She was attended by Miss Daisy Watson, of Toronto, who wore mauve taffetta and carried sweet peas.

The bridegroom was assisted by James W. Grimmon, of Picton.

Luncheon was served at one o'clock and immediately following the happy couple left to spend a few weeks at Lawrence Park, Penelan Falls. On their return they will reside in Peterborough.

Guests from a distance included Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Crawford, and Miss Gertrude Crawford, of Picton; Miss Helen Clarke of Belleville, and Mrs. J. Gray, of Peterborough.

Notice to Contractors.

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned and marked "Tender for Concrete Dam at Lock 25, Trent Canal," will be received at this office until 12 o'clock Noon (standard time), Tuesday, August 28, 1928.

Plans, specifications, and form of contract to be entered into can be seen on or after the date of this notice at the office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the office of the Superintending Engineer, Trent Canal, Peterborough, Ont.

Copies of plans and specifications may be obtained from the Department on the payment of the sum of twenty-five dollars. To bona fide tenderers this amount will be refunded upon the return of the above in good condition.

An accepted Bank cheque, on a chartered bank of Canada, for the sum of $9,000.00, made payable to the order of the Department of Railways and Canals, must accompany each tender. Bonds of the Dominion of Canada or Canadian National Railway Bonds, guaranteed by the Dominion of Canada, may be used in lieu of or in conjunction with such accepted cheque. In any case, the sum so deposited will be forfeited, if the party tendering declines to enter into contract for the work at the rates stated in the offer submitted.

The cheque or bonds or cheques and bonds thus sent in will be returned to the respective Contractors whose tenders are not accepted.

The cheque or bonds, or the cheque and bonds, of the successful tenderer will be held as security or part security for the fulfilment of the contract into which he enters.

The lowest, or any tender, not necessarily accepted.

By order,
J. W. PUGSLEY,
Secretary.
Department of Railways and Canals.

YOUNGEST ORANGEMAN

11-Months-Old Son of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Armstrong Christened.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 8 (CP).—Christening of the "youngest Orangeman in Toronto" was carried out as a feature of the Glorious Twelfth with a service in a local hotel with Cecil Robert Armstrong, 11-months-old son of Mrs. and Mrs. Thomas A. Armstrong, as new recruit. The principals were surrounded by a fife band and all the traditional Orange ceremonials during the rites. Water from the Boyne was used.

A Tip or Two

Black satin and sheer black velvet will both be particularly good this fall.

New jumpers in advance fall collections are always belted and developed with a tight hip.

Velvet and long haired furs, including foxes of an extending variety of colorings, will be much in vogue this fall.

Dean Inge of England is in favor of the female bishop, claiming that many of them are better qualified than men.

Prints bid fair to continue into fall, judging from recent advance fall collections shown in New York where printed velvet is important for after noon wear in a new collection, and moire printed with small designs is presented in evening frocks, which are especially effective.

TROPIC BREEZES.

By John Tilson.

"No Arthur," said Helen Allen, "I am sorry, but I cannot marry you. I feel that I have a mission to perform—the Uplift of Humanity. And I have such a wonderful opportunity offered to me now—nothing less than the uplift of a whole nation."

Arthur Phillips stared at Helen, half vexed and half amused and wholly in love. "A whole nation," said he at length. "Isn't that a rather large order to begin with? May I ask what nation it is to which you propose to dedicate yourself?"

"The Republic of Yuscaran," replied Helen calmly, "in Central America."

Arthur gave a low whistle of astonishment and said, "Yuscaran? Well, I don't know of another nation on the face of the earth that is in more need of an uplift. As a mining engineer, you know I am rather familiar with these Latin-American countries. But how did you happen to pick out Yuscaran?"

"Dolores Arosemena, my classmate at Wellesley," replied Helen, "has procured me the position of English governess in the family of her uncle, the president. I understand he has a number of young children and I feel that my influence over them—and possibly over the elder members of the presidential family also—will have a good effect upon what is, I gather from Dolores, a sadly backward and demoralized nation. I shall sail from New Orleans on the Talamanca on the twenty-fifth. And, oh Arthur. I am so sorry—but you see, don't you, that it is my duty?" And there was a tear in her eye in spite of her firm and high resolve.

"No—can't say that I do," said the young man. "But never mind. Let's see; you will have to start for New Orleans day after tomorrow, won't you? It so happens that I have rather important business myself in New Orleans which requires me to start for there early tomorrow morning. I'll be on hand to see you off."

Helen passed a restless and rather tearful night, but without weakening in her resolution to devote herself to spinsterhood and the uplift of mankind. Arthur, on the other hand appeared to be in a very cheerful frame of mind and a telegram which he found waiting for him at his bachelor quarters seemed to add to his satisfaction. He slept like a babe and smiled in his sleep. The Talamanca was about ready to pull out from the levee when Helen espied, strolling leisurely down the deck, the person for whom she had been anxiously searching amid the throng of passengers and their friends.

"Oh, Arthur," she cried as she ran to him, "how good of you to come and see me off, dear. But you must hurry—the "all ashore' signal has already gone."

"No hurry," replied Arthur; "in fact Nellie I have decided to have a look at Yuscaran myself. Don't scowl so. Honest and truly it's a business trip."

"What business?" inquired Helen, suspiciously.

"Mines, my dear. Don't be alarmed. If you prefer to uplift the Arosemena family rather than yours truly, why go to it. Let's talk about the weather. I think we will get a norther out of the gulf."

They did get a norther in the gulf, and then they slipped around Cape San Antonio into the smiling waters of the Caribbean. It was Helen's first visit to the tropics, and a first visit to the tropics is an experience never to be forgotten; it leaves its influence on the soul of a man—or a woman—forever.

Having started out to uplift Yuscaran, Helen was going to uplift it, though all nature called out to her to stay her hand. She told herself this even when she and Arthur sat side by side in their steamer chairs watching the flying fish.

The brief twilight of the tropics had been succeeded by black night before the Talamanca's anchor had hit the bottom two miles off the shore. Out from where the electric lights sparkled on the shore came a motor boat, its side lights of red and green burning.

It lay-to several yards from the steamer, and a shouted conversation took place between the ship's captain and a man who stood up in the launch. Then the motor boat went chugging back to the low-lying electric lights of Rosario.

All the passengers had gathered on deck and listened eagerly to the conversation shouted across the phosphorescent waters. They now gathered in little groups discussing the news. Helen and Arthur were standing close together by the rail.

Helen had caught only a few words that she could understand, but they were enough to excite her anxiety. "Oh, Arthur, what is it?" she asked.

"Why," replied he, "it appears that there has been a revolution and your prospective employer. Arosemena has fled to Paris—which is an excellent thing for the San Miguel mines out of which the old rascal has been squeezing the life. I got a cablegram before I left home saying the affair was to be pulled off and to come down. We stand in on the new administration with both feet. And now, since you can't uplift Yuscaran as English governess for Arosemena, what say to trying it as the wife of Arthur Mason Philips, chief engineer and part owner of the San Miguel mines?" Inclination and duty so exactly coinciding—and in the tropics, too—what could she say?

They spent two years in the tropics. They live in New York now.

NEW INDIAN CHIEF

Charles G. D. Roberts Made Chief of Sarcee Indians.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 8 (CP).—The Gazette's editorial column has this footnote:

"Dr. Charles G. D. Roberts, national president of the Canadian Author's Association, has been made a chief of the Sarcee Indians, with the name of Na Dash Kee Dash Tlee Dash See. We don't know what the dashes stand for, but it is customary to use them in place of words omitted for the sake of propriety."

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

Whenever I go to Toronto one of my ports of call is a little second-hand book store around by the city hall. On my last visit I delved into a volume with the title, "The Home Milliner" or some such appropriate legend. On the first page there was a photograph of a hat in various stages of creation. Then there were pictures of the ensuing stages of composition, until one came to the portrait of the finished hat—a truly awesome affair of satin and flowers, and several commodities I couldn't quite place. Altogether, it resembled something between a meat pie with garnishing and a volcano in full eruption.

• • • •

Can't you imagine a gentleman with fierce mustachios and bristling mutton-chop whiskers, fired at last with the determination to declare his honorable passion at the sight of his lady-love in that tremendously befrilled and doubtless becoming concoction?

• • • •

Having no taste for mustachios myself, however, I merely closed the book and thanked the Fates that I had been born so near the dawn of this sunny century when feminine headgear displays as little superfluity as feminine heads. A bit of felt and a couple of stitches are sufficient to fire with equal enthusiasm the modern counterpart of the whiskered gentleman.

• • • •

There is coming in this Fall a new chic in hats. Felt hats of the type forecast are easy to make and easily trimmed, while if one prefers straw the trimming can be equally easily added. So, after my illuminating discovery of the throw-back in the second-hand store I set out to find something to help my readers in the "fixing" of their headgear for Fall.

• • • •

This help I am offering to-day in the shape of printed instructions, with sketches. All you have to do is get the necessary pieces of velvet or satin, trace the designs given in the leaflet, cut out, and sew on your hat. The leaflet will be sent you free if you use the coupon on this page.

I don't know whether he "cribbed" it, or whether it was original, but anyhow the declaration of a man I met at a little house party last week-end is worth considering. Said he, "The wise wife is one who, when her husband comes home out of humor, hides her own irritability and dissatisfaction and humors him along until he thaws out. Then, when her lord and master's nerves are settled, he will be able to appreciate her, and they both will be contented and happy."

INITIAL COST NOT THE LAST

Average Cost for Baby Born in Maternity Hospital is $500.

TWINS SAME PRICE

Toronto, Aug. 7.—The cost of babies in Toronto is high, but not high enough to cause a similar agitation to that in Montreal. It is not the initial cost, but the upkeep, that makes children a luxury for the middle-class father and mother in Toronto, says the 'Star.'

The Montrea press report that the average cost per baby born in a maternity hospital in that city, with doctor's fees, hospital accommodation and domestic help after birth, runs around $500. This is the average cost to the small salaried man. It is claimed that he is worse off than the very poor, for the Royal Victoria Hospital in Montreal has clinics for expectant mothers of the latter class. They get pre-natal treatment, an ambulance to the hospital and two weeks in a public ward—total cost $15.

Hospital authorities and doctors in Toronto regard the estimated cost of $500 for the small-salaried father as rather exorbitant. "Two hundred dollars at the most should cover it," said the superintendent of the Western Hospital. "The doctor's fee runs from $50 to $100. The usual confinement period is about two weeks, and the rate for a semi-private ward is only $3.50 a day. If the mother stays in the hospital for two weeks she should not need domestic help after she returns home.

"No difference is made for twins," he remarked. "The change is for the service, and is not regulated by quantity."

Just a Joke

HIS HANDICAP

The young man spending his holiday on a walking tour was toiling wearily along a seemingly endless road, when he met a farm-hand.

"How far to the nearest inn?" he asked hopefully.

"About four miles as the crow flies," the other told him.

The tired walker groaned.

"Well, how far is it," he asked, "if the crow's got a blister on each heel, a dashed great pack to carry, and has to walk?"

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

This simply designed gown of gold lame is trimmed with a gold buckle at the side and a golden yellow shoulder flower. A group of gold bracelets are the only ornaments chosen.

Poets have sung the praises of the golden girls—women whose hair even when not actually blonde showed gleams of the precious metal, in whose eyes of brown or hazel there were glints of pure gold, and whose smooth cool flesh seemed like nothing else so much as gilded ivory.

One might indeed have to be a poet to see so much gold in any woman, but now that women have taken up the practice of sunning themselves for health and fashion's sake, there really are many more women who might be called golden.

Certain very fair skin never, never takes on the golden hues. Nature meant it to be white and in protest to too much sunning she simply peels of the old skin, leaving a new white skin beneath. It is the girls of darker pigmentation whose skin the sun turns gold.

And if you happen to have acquired these golden tints, then finish the picture by acquiring an evening gown of gold lame. It should be quite simply made and if you like cut rather low at the back so that you reveal the fact that your sunbathing this summer has been thoroughly accomplished. Your stockings should be of flesh silk mesh in a golden flesh tone, your slippers of cloth of gold or gilt kid, and your ornaments—which should be sparing—of plain gold without jewels. Then indeed you will present a picture that would have charmed King Midas himself.

Gold lame is, they say, coming into renewed favor for autumn and winter, and some of the new metallic fabrics are lovelier than anything of the sort I have ever seen before. They are light in weight, yet possess that slight crispness that is required in many of the new models. Sometimes the gold is shot with color, blue, green or rose, so that it may be used in combination with trimmings and accessories that are not all gold.

CANADA'S HOPE FOR OLYMPICS

Canadian Girl Representatives Described by Alexandrine Gibb.

SIX LADY REPRESENTATIVES

Toronto, Aug. 7.—Alexandrine Gibb describes the six girls who are Canada's big hope at the Olympic games at Amsterdam this summer:

Myrtle A. Cook, director track and field Canadian Ladies' A.C., Toronto-born veteran member of the team, is the only girl on the present team who has represented Canada abroad before. She holds the international indoor sprint title won in New York last March and is claimant now for new world's record for the 100 metres of 12 seconds flat. She will compete for Canada in 100 metres and relay.

Ethel Smith, Canadian Ladies' A.C., born in Toronto, is 21, and was former holder of 220-yard championship, but did not defend the title at Halifax. A splendid sprinter just coming into her own. Is a softball and basketball star, wears glasses when competing, is entered for the Olympics in 100 metres and relay event.

Fanny Rosenfeld, born in Russia, 1905, naturalized Canadian in 1920, holder of Canadian records in broad jump, standing broad, discus and shot putt, has run 100 yards in 11 seconds and 220 yards in 26 seconds, but never been credited with either. Canada's most outstanding all-round girl athlete and entered for Olympic games in relay and discus.

Ethel Catherwood, born in Hannah, North Dakota, still in her teens, parents Canadian born, holds Canadian high jump record, also javelin and equalled world's record in high jump at Halifax trials of five feet three inches. A tall, statuesque beauty, hails from Saskatoon but now permanently located in Toronto. Miss Catherwood will represent Canada in the high jump.

Jean Thompson, seventeen-year-old high school girl from Penetang, but born in Toronto, only commenced real training last September. A claimant for the new world's record in eight hundred metres time of 2.21 1-5. Canada's Olympic entrant in 800 metres.

Florence Bell, sometimes called Jane, 18 years old, Toronto born, holder of Canadian sixty-yard hurdle record, won school championship for four years, swimmer of note, former all-round Canadian junior champion, a member of Canada's 400 metre relay at the Olympic.

The Art of Attraction

No. 16.

Don't try to be clever, girls. Try to be charming. The pulse of the world has its source in the heart, not the brain. The very highest function that a woman can perform is to soothe the way of life rather than to illuminate it. If she can do both, she is a remarkable creature, but she has to have a remarkable mate. The ordinary man is quite content to provide his own brains in the solution of major problems. What he requires in a wife is a cushion to soften the roughnesses of life. If you were a man and had to combat the world day by day, would you prefer a delicious, soft little lady whose main idea would be to have the lamps lighted, the house warmed and the table set with an appetizing meal, or would you like to face the prospect of going home to a cheerless house with dust on the piano and a meal of cold salad and bitter tea, because your brilliant wife was absent on a lecturing tour? Think it over.

TRAVEL-LOG.

THE SPA SUPERB

I have visited most of the famous spas of Europe, and for that very reason hesitate to say which is the best. Spas are like doctors in more senses than one and each patient has his preference, but if Bad Gastein in Austria is not the spa supreme, it certainly is the spa superb. I was attracted to it first because it was in the mountains, over thirty-five hundred feet up, but after I arrived and heard day and night the rush of its many waters, the mountains were almost forgotten. Bad Gastein is built on both sides of the River Ache, which the English say was so called, because it carries away all the aches and pains which have afflicted humanity. Through the village and down the Gastein Valley dashes this roaring torrent, foaming beneath the bridge near the Kursaal with two mighty waterfalls. If you stand in the sunny Straubingerplatz or rest in the rooms of your hotel, the life refreshing music of this dashing water insists on being heard. Twenty thousand visitors a year do not spoil the place, and you do not have to wait for gout and nervous afflictions to send you to its radio-active springs, for judging from most I saw here last week, their chief reason for coming, was the desire for a good rest and holiday amid beauty and comfort.

CHOCOLATE CAKE

(Sent by H. A. W.)

1 cup brown sugar.
½ cup chocolate.
½ cup sweet milk; stir all together, set on stove to dissolve but not boil. Let cool.
½ cup butter.
1 cup brown sugar "scant."
2 egg yolks.
½ cup sour milk.
1 teaspoon soda.
2½ cups flour.

When first part is cool add to second part and bake.

DISEASE GERMS CARRIED BY FLIES

Flies Must Be Killed If Infection Is To Be Prevented.

Eminent health authorities say that the ordinary housefly reeks with filth and germs of dread diseases. These flies' bodies are covered with fine hairs that are saturated with unspeakable matter. They drag their contaminated bodies over food intended for human consumption. Flies taint everything they touch.

Science has developed a pleasant way to banish this most dangerous insect. Send a cloud of FLY-TOX mist high into the air and envelope and stifle flies crawling on ceilings, resting on lighting fixtures or hiding behind hanging pictures.

Have the sprayer handy, filled with FLY-TOX; and when those winging insects such as flies, mosquitoes, mothmillers and other bugs invade your home, or spiders appear with an unsightly web, a few strokes of the sprayer ends the invasion with death.

FLY-TOX is a clean, pure, fragrant liquid which is stainless and harmless to people. It was developed at Mellon Institute of Industrial Research by Rex Research Fellowship. (Advertisement).

Annual Stoney Lake Regatta Is Great Success

THREATENING WEATHER FAILS TO DAMPEN ARDOR OF THOSE TAKING PART IN PROGRAMME

Pie Paddle Race is Feature of This Year's Regatta.

RESULTS ANNOUNCED

Many From Peterborough and District Take Part in Competition.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

The annual regatta at Juniper Island took place successfully on Monday in spite of lowering skies and a drizzling shower, which, however, failed to dampen the ardor of the contestants or the enthusiasm of the spectators, who numbered several hundred people, including more than two hundred from Peterborough, who made the trip by the steamer Stoney Lake. The attendance of cottagers was remarkably good, considering the threatening weather. A feature of the regatta this year was the pleasant spirit displayed. No complaint of fouling reached the judges' stand and no "crabbing" spoiled the pleasure of the day.

The pie-plate paddling, which made such a hit two years ago, was introduced and brought out eight boats to enter, and as the supply of pie-plates was not equal to the demand, the race was run in two heats and the roars of laughter from both contestants and audience were sufficient to assure the committee of its success.

This event was the first of the scheduled special events, and was very popular and exceedingly funny. The canoe fours were good this year, but the number of entries was hardly up to last year.

The fact that Sturgeon Point Regatta falls on the same day as Juniper means that a number of young men who are eager for sailing honors go there and each year sees an increase, which naturally reduces the number of young men to enter the events at Juniper. This is a matter of regret, but appears to be an unavoidable circumstance.

The second special event was a "sea flea" race, which was all to the swift, two boats entering, both equipped with 16 horse-power Johnson motors, and as they skipped merrily along, the name "flea" appeared to be well chosen.

Pillow Fights.

Following the men's fours and the "seven in a skiff," the contestants indulged in an impromptu pillow fight, which amused the audience and added a note of merriment. Dr. Perry Goldsmith injured his hip and was unable to fill his post as clerk, which was a matter of regret to his colleagues on the committee. Mr. J. M. Gouinlock, who was for years the energetic and efficient secretary of the association, was present, and assisted the committee in many ways.

The judges were Messrs. J. R. Dodworth, W. G. Morrow and G. K. Fraser. Messrs. J. H. Renwick and H. F. Foote were the referees. F. W. Jones spent the afternoon in a punt at the starting point with a gun and a box of cartridges for company, and acted as official starter.

Mr. G. K. Fraser handled the megaphone and acted as announcer in his capable manner. Mr. W. Clink was in charge of the numbers and spent an afternoon of ceaseless activity. Mr. George Guillett was in charge of the floats and course, and was indefatigable in his efforts to have everything in proper order for the beginning of the program.

Immediately after the regatta the prizes were presented in the Pavilion by Major H. C. Wotherspoon, with Mr. J. M. Gouinlock announcing the winners.

There were prizes presented to the girl and boy who had sold the greatest number of badges and programs. The proceeds of this sale are devoted to the Toronto Star Fresh Air Fund.

Two new silver challenge cups were presented this year, Mrs. J. M. R. Fairbairn gave one for the open sailing race and Mr. H. F. Foote gave one for the men's single canoe race over the long course.

The next event of the season is the children's masquerade, which will be held on Wednesday, August 8, in the afternoon.

The following is the regatta prize-list:

Prize List

Men's tandem canoe—Clayton and Jack Ridpath, silver cups; Hall brothers, silver cup.

Ladies tandem canoe—Mrs. Don. Fitzgerald and Miss Florence Adams, silver cups; Misses Billy Mackenzie and Theo Elmsley, silver cups.

Men's single canoe, Kawartha Lakes championship — Don. FitzGerald, H. F. Foote, silver cup; Jack Ridpath, silver cup.

Gunwale race—Clayton Ridpath, cigarette lighter; J. Guillett, shaving mirror.

Ladies single canoe—Miss Florence Adams, Stoney Lake Cottager's Association cup; Miss Theo Elmsley, silver cup.

ROSS WINS GOLF TITLE

Regina Professional Captures Honors at Saskatchewan Tournament.

TIE FOR SECOND

SASKATOON, Sask., August 8 (Canadian Press). — Tommy Ross, professional of the Regina Golf Club, yesterday won the open golf championship at the annual tournament of the Saskatchewan Golf Association. He stroked 141 for the 36-hole competition, turning in 70 on Monday and 71 yesterday morning. Tied for second place among the early finishers were Phil Morse, Saskatoon amateur, Jimmy Rimmer, Jasper Park pro., Tom McGrath, Moose Jaw, who had 145. Rimmer went out in 37 and came in with 35, the last being par for nine. Phil Morse, Alberta amateur champion and local player, was the best of the amateurs, winning the medal. With his 79 of Monday he added a 74 yesterday for a total of 149. He was out yesterday in 40, but clipped a stroke off par on the last nine for a 34 which gave him 74 for the round.

CALM FIRST TO THE WIRE

Captures Hochelago Handicap, Feature Event of Blue Bonnets Program.

VICE-ROYALTY PRESENT

MONTREAL, Que., August 8 (Canadian ress). — Before Their Excellencies, Viscount and Viscountess Willingdon, who were visitors to Montreal yesterday, Calm, owned by the Mount Royal Stable, won the Hochelaga Handicap, with an added value of $2,500, the feature event on the Montreal Jockey Club's program at Blue Bonnets. By her victory, Calm stamped herself as one of the best two-year-olds racing in the Dominion. She was asked to carry the heavy impost of 119 pounds over a distance of six furlongs. John B., carrying the colors of F. J. Batstone, finished second, and W. J. Salmon's Glacial, who was made favorite for the event, finished third.

Eight horses faced the starter in the event and Goeland was the first to show in front after the break. The winner was kept within striking distance of the leader. With half of the distance covered Goeland quit, and Ralls, who was up on Calm made his move and assumed command, and John B. moved up to second place, with Glacial maintaining third position. Entering the stretch John B. challenged the leader, but the latter managed to hold her advantage under punishment. Calm paid off at better than five to one for straight tickets.

Mint Grass, owned by C. L. Whiting, won the Outremont Purse, the WLM shrdlu cmfwpy ETAOIN SHR event of secondary importance with The Freshman second and My Son third. The winner of this event was the only favorite to score in the seven races on the card.

OUTLAWS WIN PLAY-OFF GAME

Defeat St. Andrew's 27-19 in First of Campbellford Series.

ERRORS COSTLY.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 8.— The weather conditions were ideal for the first game of the semi-finals in the town league softball last night when the Outlaw team defeated St. Andrew's by the step-ladder score of 27-19 in a nine innings game. In spite of the fact that every effort has been made to have the teams on the field on time, when the hour arrived for the game to begin, there was hardly a player in sight. Twenty minutes later the game began with the Outlaws playing one man short till the fourth inning. Erratic fielding on the part of the churchmen was largely responsible for their defeat. Their batting was not greatly inferior to the Outlaws' clouting, but their errors proved costly. Only one argument came about last night and it was short-lived. Of the four home runs hit during the game, all went to the Outlaws, two each to Flint and Sarginson.

In the first frame, Grills dropped a fly which allowed in a run and put the batter safe at first base. When Ingram's turn came to bat in the second inning, he was nowhere to be found. In the third Bland got into the hall of fame by catching a fly in deep centre field, thus retiring the side. In the same frame Carl Haig hit a single but stretched it into a homer when St. Andrews began some wild pegging. This inning proved a life safer to the churchmen when they got their batting going strong and tallied six runs.

Sarginson was the first man up in the fourth and knocked a three-bagger which developed into a run when there was a wild peg from the field. Ingram arrived in time for his turn at bat. St. Andrews went down as quickly as they picked up their bats. In the fifth Flint got his first home run when he drove a hot one far down the left field. It was the only run for the Outlaws that innings. Morley Feeling scored one for St. Andrew's and kept the margin still at three runs. Sarginson got his second homer in the seventh, and Leo Bush followed with a three bagger. The eighth gave Flint his second homer by a hit in the same place as for his first. DeCarroll hit a two-bagger which brought in two men and left him half way round.

In the final innings, St. Andrew's tried hard to make the grade but succeeded in getting only three runs. Grills got over anxious and was caught between third and home. With two men out and two men on bases, Bland hit a fly to centre field. Lambert made the catch that was necessary to retire the side and win the game for the Outlaws.

The second game will be Thursday, August 9th at fifteen minutes past six.

YOUTH LEADS FIELD AFTER BAD OPENING

Follows in Footsteps of His Brother, Former Canadian Champion.

SLICES TO WOODS

Has Chance to Outstrip Field With Little Straighter Shooting.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.— (Canadian Press)—Following in the footsteps of his brother, former Canadian amateur champion, Alex A Carrick qualified in the junior western golf championship at Glenview Club with a fair 81 despite an inclination to be wild from the tees. His score was well back of the leader but with a little straighter shooting he might even outstrip the field. The Canadian youth got away to a bad start by slicing to deep woods and taking five on the 433 yards first hole. After a perfect 3 on the 178 yard second and good work on the 427 yard third to the green, he took three puts for a five. Another par at the 371 yard fourth and then a visit to the woods again for a five on the 370 yard fifth brought him to his worst hole of the round.

He sliced to some underbrush from the tee of the 547 yard sixth, put his second out of bounds and took 7 strokes. He got in a trap at the 177 yard seventh for a four and took three putts on the 317 yard 8th for a five to reach the turn in 42. Carrick started home with a wild tee shot that cost him five on the 431 yard 10th, a short pitch at the 127 yard 11th that got him a four, and again took to the forest at the 390 yard 12th for a five. Again he pitched short at the 165 yard 14th for a four but at the 485 yard 15th he whaled two good woods nearly home, chipped to within 10 feet and sank the putt for a birdie four. He played the last three holes perfectly to total 39 for the homeward trip.

His card:

Par out	434	448	354
Carrick out	533	457	435—42
Par in	434	535	444—36—72
Carrick in	546	544	444—39—81

CRESCENTS WIN FROM BETHANY

Defeat Durham Team 8-1 and Remain in Running For Play-off.

HEAVY HITTING.

Crescents defeated Bethany by the score of 8 to 1 and thereby kept in the running for a play-off position. Frost did the gunning for the Crescents and held the heavy hitting Durhamites well in check, backed up by some brilliant fielding by Freddie Jones, who came into his own by some marvellous catches. In fact the whole team was in there playing heads up ball all the way.

Russel on the other hand was hit quite freely. Only the sparkling plays pulled off by the ever green Ryley saved him on many occasions. Bob Ross with two doubles, and F. Jones with a double and a single were the heavy hitters. Box score:

CANOE COMPANY PICNIC SUCCESS

Fine Outing Held To Wallace's Point By Boat On Saturday.

One of the most enjoyable and delightful industrial picnics in which it has been my good luck to participate, came off on Saturday last. By "industrial," you will please understand, I mean an event—an opportunity for social pleasure—got up for the enjoyment of those connected with some particular industry; and the occasion to which I refer was the picnic given by the proprietors of the Peterborough Canoe Company to their employees and their friends.

I use the word "given" advisedly for the company provide this outing and everything connected with it entirely free of charge to all participating in it. This particular occasion was the third of a series. I had had the pleasure of being present on one of the two previous trips; consequently, when I received an invitation from one of the officials to make one of the happy crowd last Saturday I accepted the opportunity with pleasure and a looking forward to a happy time, which anticipation was, I need scarcely say, fully realized.

The plan mapped out was to take a river trip on the good old vessel, the "Stoney Lake" (Captain Scollard, as usual, in charge, and a more genial skipper could not well be imagined), bound for Wallace's Point, there to stroll about, carry out a program of various sporting events and eventually to eat a good supper in picnic fashion, seated on the grass.

The Start.

The grounds at Wallace's Point lend themselves thoroughly to such an outing as I have outlined; so, accordingly, at 1:15 p.m., a goodly congregation numbering considerably over two hundred boarded the sturdy little craft before named at George Street Wharf, and after a few minutes the mooring ropes were cast off, the last whistle sounded and the happy party started on their outward journey. A run across Little Lake to the East City Wharf, a call at the Peterborough Lock and another at the old street railway wharf, the terminus of the Peterborough underground street-car line, added somewhat to our passengers.

The Trip Down the River.

As I walked on board the steamer at the George StreetWharf I could not but be struck by the universal happy look depicted upon the faces of so many of the passengers. They were out to spend a real happy day and here let me say they thoroughly succeeded. It was then a beautiful day following a stormy night. The country looked simply lovely and fresh from the overnight rain and the sun shone brilliantly and the women, the girls and the children generally just radiated happiness, enjoyment and pleasure. Immediately after calling at our last stopping place, busy members of the committee—oh! how hard they worked too!—were actively distributing candies of various kinds to the ladies and children, cigars and cigarettes to such as used such comfort-giving, or ought I to say, in deference to some opinions, such soul-destroying inventions. I may be a bad lot, yet I confes a weakness for the herb from whic these pernicious (?) articles are made which have so often afforded me much solace and happiness.

We had the company's own orchestra on board, which gave us as a rule real music, although to suit all tastes the players had occasionally to introduce that heathenish style termed "jazz"; but of this there wasn't much.

At Wallace's Point.

A pleasant sail of about an hour and a half brought us to Wallace's Point. By that time there was a threatening look in the sky in our locality, while in the direction of the city we had left was indication of a heavy storm and considerable rain. However, a baseball game was started, but alas! shortly after it was started rain began to fall sufficient for the game to be called off. However, a large cart-shed, which fortunately was water-tight, sufficed to shelter the visitors, so we really didn't come to any harm, and we all seemed determined not to lose any signs of our happiness and well we all succeeded.

The Sports.

And then the rain having ceased—anyway for a time—the program of sports was commenced. There were plenty of events and plenty of prizes; so much so that in the various events for kiddies it was all prizes and no blanks, every little one competing getting a prize, a good way to eliminate all and every feeling of jealousy, and here is the sports program:

Boys' flat race, 6 years and under.
Girls, 6 and under.
Boys, 6 to 9—1st, Ray McWilliams; 2nd, Jack O'Dette.
Girls, 6 to 9—1st, P. Watson; 2nd, Viola Sexsmith.
Boys, 11 to 14—1st, Earl Record; 2nd, K. Denison.
Girls, 11 to 14—1st, Margaret Sexsmith; 2nd, Beverly Rogers.
Boys, open—1st, W. Denison.
Girls, open—1st, Beverly Rogers.
Ladies, 35 and under—Mrs. Wildman.
Men, 35 and under—W. Denison.
Ladies, 35 and over—Mrs. Schooley.
Men, 35 and over—Austin Doran.
Cigarette Race—H. Morgan and Miss Rogers.
Three-legged Race—Grace Morgan and T. Taylor.
Walking Race—F. Clancey.
Mouth-organ—Mrs. T. Taylor.
Tug-of-war—Tie.
Softball Game—Draw.
Girls, 9 to 11—1st, M. Sexsmith; 2, Beverly Rogers.
Boys, 9 to 11—1st, Ray McWilliams; 2nd, Ray Harding.
Men's Race—T. Sexsmith.

Alteration in Program.

Once during the carrying out of the program we had to make a stampede for the friendly cart-shed, and for a quarter of an hour or so everything was suspended, during which time the rain was real hard, with intervals of thunder and lightning, and this storm made an alteration in our subsequent arrangements.

It had been intended, had the weather been fine, to eat our supper in picnic fashion seated on the grass. But this was not to be. Instead of which the steamer's whistle called us all on board where on our arrival some lovely iced lemonade was served to all and every one in individual cups.

The followed the presentation of prizes, which were plentiful and varied. There was not, however, any prize for the prettiest lady on board. I guess the committee were fearful of the demon of jealousy which might arise. Possibly some of them remembered the history of the Siege of Troy—a ten-year battle caused by one of the godesses of heathen mythology persuading a certain young man to present a golden apple to the one he considered the most beautiful of three young and lovely women. Like the fool he was, he consented and the consequence was that the husbands of the two rejected beauties (they were all kings and queens) went to war with the successful beauty show parties, and this war lasted for ten years.

Now I know, had I been the judge on Saturday, to whom I should have awarded the prize but oh! no! dear reader I'm not going to tell you. I have a pair of eyes yet of considerable use to me and so has the lady whom I should have selected; but I neither wish hers nor mine to be maltreated, so wild horses shall not drag the name from me.

Well, the prizes having been presented, then followed the supper, and very much it was appreciated. Tommy Hooper, of city fame, was the caterer, and right well he carried out the repast, which consisted of sandwiches of various kinds, cakes of many sorts, ice-cream and pie, coffee and lemonade and any amount of everything. It was a meal much appreciated, but oh! what a toil it must have been for those indefatigable committee-men who acted as servers to the crowd of between two and three hundred. All this time the sun was shining and we peacefully lay alongside the wharf at Wallace's Point. By this time it had become pretty hot; there was a lot of humidity in the air. Some suggested dancing. Others said, "Oh, it's too hot," but the devotees of dancing prevailed, Mr. Bruce Meeks being the "caller-off."

Then sounded the farewell whistle, and at about seven we started off on our homeward journey, which was a very pleasant one. The rain-clouds had spent themselves and all was fair.

The committee, who so ably carried out this extremely pleasant and happy outing comprised: Messrs. Harry Morgan, Thomas Henry, Tom Taylor, V. Odette and Scriber. It is needless to say that a very hearty vote of thanks was tendered to these gentlemen, and the thanks of all present were tendered to the company who had so generously defrayed the entire expenses of the outing, as well as to the indefatigable members of the committee, who had made the day's outing such a success. Hearty cheers were given to them and to the company they represented. It is such actions as these, showing the interest of employers towards those who work for them that tend to ease off any rough points which, alas, too often exist in the bearing to each other of capital and labor.

Many thanks are due to Miss Vincent who delighted us with many samples of piano music, which added much to the comfort and pleasure of a large number of those present.

It is needless to say that a very hearty vote of thanks with cheers was proposed and carried to Captain Scollard and the various members of his crew for their universal care, attention and kindness to the passengers.

Although we were, owing to climatic troubles, unable to carry out our sit-down supper at Wallace's Point, a great number of the visitors derived a considerable amount of pleasure from the use of the various swings, see-saw, and other games so plentifully and generously provided there. And now let me express my personal thanks to those concerned for an extremely happy and pleasant afternoon's outing which I shall many a time recall to mind. At 8:30 we safely moored at the George Street Wharf, a happy, satisfied and delighted bunch of people. Oh, it was a huge success!

FRANK RUSSELL.

She chased Rainbows..

—and her dreams seemed to come true! For one brief moment the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow was hers, and then . . . .

"I drifted away to dreamland, again and over and over to myself: Mrs. Cherry Berrenger!"

THE San Francisco disaster had left Cherry an orphan in infancy—without a trace of her pedigree. And forever there was uppermost in her mind the searing thought that, perhaps, she was . . . . .

Dan, the garbage man, had found her after the earthquake, wandering about the debris, in her little nightgown, crying for her "mama"! He took her home—and amidst the unlovely surroundings of the city's poorest district, Cherry received her first impressions of life and its many intriguing ramifications. But although Dan drove a garbage wagon, he saw to it that the garbage did not taint his home, and Cherry merged into young womanhood with a keen sense of right and wrong. Naturally, she was lacking in the outward manifestations of poise and culture, but a certain innate refinement, a part of her pre-natal equipment, no doubt, would always come to her rescue.

It was this same inherited "spark" that had appealed so strongly to Dick, the young and spoiled scion of the aristocratic Berrengers. Obviously she did not belong to his smart set, but he always got what he wanted — and so they were wed. After the first year of rapture, Cherry was too absorbed in the care of her new treasure, young Berrenger the Third, to observe her husband's deflection.

Baby's advent had helped to span the social gulf existing between the Berrenger family and "the garbage man's daughter"—and all went well until a cheque for a small sum, and endorsed by Cherry, had been discovered "raised" to a considerable sum . . . and the blame fell on her shoulders! Stunned at the injustice of the accusation, Cherry's eyes sought Dick's for protection—but he ignored her appeal and remained silent. And, like a flash, Cherry read "Guilt" written all over him! But she loved this coward, her husband, and she just could not disillusion his trusting parents, so she packed up her things and fled! Yes, she started off with her bright-eyed boy, but at the very thought of denying little Dicky the luxury and culture that were his heritage, she returned him to his nursery — — — and with bleeding heart and shattered dreams, Cherry silently passed out of their lives—alone!

What did she do? Where did she go? Did she return to the fetid atmosphere of the garbage wagon? Or, perchance, did she again find the pot of gold at the rainbow's end? All these questions are answered in "SHATTERED DREAMS", which appears in TRUE STORY MAGAZINE for September . . . now on the newsstands. You will be astounded and thrilled at the solution and will find difficulty in keeping back the elusive tears of joy at the triumph of right over wrong!

ALSO EPISODE NO. 1 OF NEW SERIAL

"The Fire Fighters"

A red-blooded chapter play, flaming with thrills.

COMEDY : : REVIEW

JUMPS OVERBOARD

Depressed by foggy weather during a sea voyage after he had been told the sun would probably bring him back to health, Dr. Norman Culbertson, well known throughout Canada and especially in the west for his work in the Yukon district and the North West Territories, while in mid-Atlantic on the steamer Lapland, left his wife and friends and jumped overboard. "He was not out of my sight a minute," Mrs. Culbertson, his young widow, said on the landing. "And after he left me we never saw him again."

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

"FIRE FIGHTERS" WITH DAUGHERTY CALLED BIGGEST

With a complete disregard for money and a tremendous interest in the effect the picture would have on theatregoers, Universal has turned out a chapter-play which is said to surpass all others in its amazing thrills.

It is "The Fire Fighters" starring Jack Daugherty, an adventure picture, directed by Jacques Jaccard, noted serial director, from the entertaining stories "Cap. Fallon, Fire Fighter" by John Morosco.

Through the ten episodes of this dashing picture which is being offered at the Regent Theatre today runs a wistful love story well told, between a sacrificing girl (Helen Ferguson) and a brave fireman (Jack Daugherty.)"

Each episode includes a spectacular thrill which would do justice to the most magnificent super feature film. There are literally dozens of climaxes in the ten episodes. Each one will send a chill down your spine. But by some miracle love will triumph. You know but you are afraid. Serials are the most popular form of entertainment.

Born in Constantinople, educated in Berlin and Vienna, and now a famous star in movieland that is the saga of Rudolph Schilokraut. By a coincidence the veteran actor, who is featured in "Turkish Delight," a new DeMille picture now playing at the Regent, was born in the city and country which serve as the locale for this comedy production.

Schildkraut came to America after years of success as an actor in Europe. His first venture on an American stage was "The God of Vengeance," which he played in New York. Then followed "The Mongrel." Later he was engaged by Universal to co-feature with his son, Joseph, in "His People."

That picture established both as film players of unusual merit, and father and son were placed under contract by Cecil B. DeMille. Rudolph Schildkraut's first work under this agreement was in "Young April."

In "Turkish Delight," the story of which was written by Irvin S. Cobb, Mr. Schildkraut is seen as a Turkish rug merchant in New York, who falls heir to the throne of his brother, late Sultan of Turkestan. Although he hates women he is devoted to his niece, Zelma, portrayed by Julia Faye. They go to Turkey and on the steamship Zelma meets and falls in love with Donald Sims, an American, played by Kenneth Thompson. When they reach their destination, the ladies of the late Sultan's harem go on a strike and scenes of great excitement follow.

May Robson has a featured role, while in the supporting cast there are such sterling players as Louis Natheaux, Harry Allan and Toby Claude. The production was directed by Paul Sloane under the supervision of C. Gardner Sullivan.

Havelock

(Examiner Correspondence)

HAVELOCK, Aug. 7. — The Belmont and Methuen Council renewed their liability insurance against accidents on the roads and bridges of the municipality with the Globe Indemnity Insurance Co., on motion by Councillors Sanders and Steenburgh, at their regular meeting on July 28. The premium on the policy is to be $139.50 for a term of one year.

On motion by Councillors Spencer and Steenburgh, the clerk was instructed to allow John Curtis two days' statute labor for work done on the First Concession line of Belmont, opposite lots eight and nine.

Moved by Councillors Whitney and Sanders that the following road grants and accounts be paid and orders drawn on the treasurer for same: G. Monaghan, work R. B. 55, $12.50; R. C. Buchanan, work R. B. 44, $8; John Davidson, work R. B. 45, $10; R. B. Newton, work R. B. 9, $5; William McMillan, work on R. B. 43, $90; Alex. McArthur, 114 loads of gravel, $11.40; Walter Varty, 15 loads of gravel, $1.50; Arthur Coon, unloading trap rock, $33; Norris Whitney, grading on R. B. 52, $15. Previously voted, $1,329.35. Total $1,515.75.

DELEGATES TO CANADA

Among the outstanding delegates to the British Empire Parliamentary Association who will visit Canada this month are Lord Hailsham (1) 1st chancellor of Great Britain; Viscount Peel (2) first commissioner of works for Great Britain, and Rt. Hon. Thomas Shaw who was minister of labor in the McDonald Labor government.

M'DONALD WOULD RECOGNIZE SOVIET

Detests Bolsheviks But Thinks Recognition Would Remove Menace.

TORONTO, Aug. 7.— In an interview here this morning on his arrival from Montreal, J. Ramsay MacDonald, former Labor Premier of Great Britain, declared that while he detested Bolsheviks he would recognize Soviet Russia for diplomatic reasons.

Mr. MacDonald further stated that, in his opinion, as long as Great Britain fails to recognize Russia, that country is a menace.

TELESCOPES MAY SEE MARTIANS.

Prof. G. W. Ritchey, noted American Astronomer, predicts that within the next eight years the world will know whether there are cities and men on the planet Mars.

Professor Ritchey supervised the design and construction of the 100-inch reflector for Mount Wilson observatory, the largest in the world. Now in Paris he is planning a giant telescope of entirely new design and ten times more powerful.

"The largest number of stars which present telescopes have been able to photograph in one cluster," he explains, "has been about 40,000. The new telescope will photograph millions. It will be able to show clearly any densely populated sections of Mars, if they exist."

The telescope, says Popular Science Monthly will have a mirror nearly twenty feet in diameter, and its construction will be based on Ritchey's discovery of a method of building mirrors of several separate pieces of glass, instead of one huge piece, as at present.

UNITED CHURCH, ROSENEATH

(Examiner Correspondence)

ROSENEATH, August 8.—Rev. H. W. Wilding, of Alderville, took charge of the service in the United Church on Sunday morning and gave a very intelligent and instructive address to his congregation. Speaking from the Acts of the Apostles 9-17 his subject dwelled on Ananias work, his life and the great help he was to Saul. Mr. Wilding impressed his wish that each of us should try to follow the example of Ananias and by so doing our lives would be glorified by kind deeds done the love and help we can show and do for each other will give closer fellowship with God.

Mr. Roger Parks of Belleville, who is spending a holiday with friends here, sang a solo which was greatly appreciated.

There will not be any service here on Sunday next. Service to be held at Alderville in the evening at 7 p.m.

Hollinger Bright Spot On Toronto Exchange

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 8 (Canadian Press).—Trading was dull on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange to-day, with price changes irregular and small. Noranda cotninued weak, closing with a drop of 90 at 53.85. The Sudbury issues also showed a weakness, Sudbury Basin tumbling 15 at 7.50, and Sudbury Contact eight to 17. Western issues were quite firm. Sherritt Gordon was unchanged at 6.50, Pend Oreille up ten at 13.10, Hudson Bay unchanged at 18.00, Central Manitoba, up 1 at 93 and Jackson Manion up half at 97½. Big Missouri dropped three to 56 and Mandy three to 3.35. Malartic, in heavy trading, dropped seven to 1.27, Wright Hargraves closed with a drop of two at 3.26, and Hollinger was unchanged. At 9.00 Barry Hollinger scored a large turnover and was up two at 38. Teck Hughes advanced four to 9.34.

Toronto Exchange Dull Poor Sale Of All Issues

TORONTO, Aug. 8 (Canadian Press).—Trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning was very dull and uninteresting with the exception of International Nickel. All issues experienced less than a thousand sales. The prices were mostly firm with a few fractional gains and losses. International Nickel was weak. Opening at 98, it closed at noon suffering a loss of 1.00 at 97¼. Asbestos was ¼ higher at 27, Brasilian Light and Power with very light turnover selling at 52½, closed with a net gain of one. Canadian Sanders Second Preferred was ½ higher at 94½. Canadian Industrial Alcohol was up ¾ at 38, Massey Harris 78 at 39½, Page Hersey ¼ at 40¼, and Winnipeg Railway advanced to 96 with a gain of ¼. British American Oil was firm, closing with a loss of ¼ at 37¾, and Northern Bakeries slumped 4¾ at 38¾.

New Low Record Prices On Chicago Grain Mart

CHICAGO, Aug. 8 (Canadian Press) —Wheat, corn and oats all touched new low record prices to-day for the season; the fifth successive day in the case of wheat. A pronounced weakness of Liverpool wheat quotations together with favorable crop reports from Canada were the main factor, opening ¾ to 1⅜c off, wheat later showed an additional setback. Corn and oats joined in reflecting the wheat weakness, with corn starting ⅛ to ⅝c off and subsequently continuing to decline. Provisions likewise went lower.

MINING BRIEFS

A Special Service to The Examiner

Directors of Carling Breweries determined to declare dividend only after its fiscal year is completed. The company paid an initial dividend of 50 cents per share, which was regarded as quarterly distribution. It was decided to change the dividend policy. Business and profits this year have been such, the Financial News Bureau is informed, that the company could readily distribute more than $2.00 per share per annum. Let it be granted that $2.00 per annum is paid, on that basis the yield would be 7.7 per cent.

If it may be assumed that directors of Hiram-Walkers-Gooderham and Worts will at the next dividend meeting, which falls due before long, authorize a distribution of 75 cents per share for the quarter, the yield on the stock at the present price would be 5.55 per cent.

Selling at 49, Abitibi Power and Paper pays dividends at the rate of $2.00 per share per annum, on which basis the yield is 5.71 per cent.

At the current price of 39, Northern Bakeries shares, on which the dividend rate is $2.00 per share, yield 5.13 per cent.

Favorable Results Reported at Properties of Alexandria Mine, B.C.

Prince Rupert.—Officials of Alexandria Mines have just reached here after a visit to the properties of the company in Smithers and Haselton districts. The Hyland Basin property in Babine Range has some surface showings of high grade silver-lead-gold ore, yielding sensational values. An engineer and crew are working on the property serveying preparatory to carrying out a development program. The management have high hopes for this property.

The Velvet property, in Haselton district has such favorable showings that twelve adjacent claims have been acquired increasing the Alexandria's acreage by 600 acres. Development to date in the Velvet has disclosed a series of veins from 6 to 10 feet wide, well mineralized and carrying commercial values in silver and. Consolidated Smelters are reported to be negotiating for a property adjoining the Velvet. Their engineers are in the field.

Federal Mining Company is operating the Mohawk Mine which lies in close proximity, while the Duke Mining Company is operating Silver Cup Mine, clearing right of way for tram line and mill site.

Good progress is being made at the Portland Canal properties of the Alexandia Company. No. 2 tunnel is reported to have encountered good grade ore.

The mining market is well provided with shock absorbers. The general list presented a steady to strong front to-day, in face of the wide break that occurred in Montreal yesterday, when Toronto markets were closed.

The feeling is that the liquidation that has taken place this summer in the mine list has placed it in a pretty strong technical position, while credit stringency at the present time may have a restraining effect on new buying, there is too much news of a really constructive character coming down from the various camps to allow for any wide open breaks. This appears, at least, to be the concensus of opinion among well informed brokers.

Advices from Rouyn are that Waite-Ackerman-Montgomery Mines shipped its first two carloads of ore to Noranda Smelter. This is understood to be high grade material and will go direct to the smelter. Shipments will increase steadily, until they reach between 200 and 300 tons daily.

Waite-Ackerman-Montgomery can now be classed as a regular producer, and it can be also counted on to make a revenue that will leave substantial profits. Quebec is coming along.

Noranda benefits from the advent of Waite-Ackerman-Montgomery as a producer in two ways: First, it will derive a revenue from this customs business, and second, it will benefit as the earnings surplus of Waite Mine grows, as it holds most of the stock of this subsidiary in its treasury.

Word comes from Northern Manitoba that Mandy Mines has reached a momentous stage in its development. The company should cut the downward extension of its main ore body at the 300 and 500 foot levels this week.

All over the north country both new and old enterprises have been carrying on developments vital to their future, and results of this work should be coming in before long. As news comes down it should have a bearing effect on the stock market, especially when a constructive movement gets under way once more.

Towagmac was up again on the Standard Board to-day. This exploration company has several important equities that are expected to make history in their respective fields. The Aldermac is crosscutting at 1125 feet dept hto open up two high grade ore bodies; indicated by drills. This development may turn Aldermac which is now a big concentrating proposition into a high grade enterprise as well.

Towagmac's controlling interest in the new Lake Geneva Mining Co., Limited, adds greatly to its possibilities. The Geneva enterprise has been brought quickly into prominence by the proving at depth of persistence of high grade lead-zinc values shown on the surface. Plans for development underground are now pretty well completed, and it looks like a satisfactory improvement over the corresponding period of 1927. This is partially due to the fact that many new units have been placed in operation

The sharp break in Shawinigan is attributed to purely technical conditions within the market. This stock is widely held on margin and consequently the general weakness brought about forced liquidation and the uncovering of a number of stop loss orders.

Ticker Talk

By H.O.

(Unofficial Opinions on the Markets

MONTREAL, Aug. 8. —The local market yesterday experienced one of the severest set-backs it has had in some considerable time, a very large number of the more active stocks selling down to new low levels. Not a single exception of any note was to be seen; Wayagamack, Dominion Bridge, Quebec Power, Shawinigan, Steel of Canada, Canada Power; Smelters, Breweries Converters and Winnipeg Electric were the greatest sufferers.

International Nickel was the one redeeming feature, the security holding well throughout the day. Of course, this stock is principally a Wall Street issue and consequently the demand from that source was sufficient to counterbalance any liquidation from Canada. The earnings statement for the second quarter will be made public early this week and should make favorable reading.

The reason advanced for the sharp break in several stocks is that a number of pools, due to their inability to obtain funds from banking sources, have found it necessary to liquidate their holdings. Another factor is that many traders and speculators have decided to delay their constructive commitments until such time as the market shows that the forced liquidation has run its course. At the present time, a large percentage of the demand is coming from investors and bargain hunters, whilst a number of traders are taking the opportunity of averaging on their holdings.

A well-known local broker was asked yesterday whether, in his opinion, we are in the throes of a major bear market. His reply was that we are in a bull market, but that the present correction is only a natural consequence, when one considers the excessive over-speculation that was witnessed during the past few years. This broker maintained that tight money is one of the principal causes for the present reactionary trend as it is greatly restricting marginal buying.

To anyone who has at all studied the market and conditions pertaining to it, it must be apparent that a number of stocks have reached levels that are very attractive, from a buying viewpoint. As a bull market is generally overdone, a reaction may also be carried to excess. Many stocks of real merit are now down to prices where the return is substantial and those fortunate enough to have surplus cash at this time and use discrimination in picking up the good stocks, are bound to reap large profits if patience is exercised.

Winnipeg Electric sold off to 94, for a loss of 11 points. There is considerable opposition in evidence in Manitoba with regards to the granting of the right to the Winnipeg Electric Co. to develop the Seven Sisters Falls. It is felt by many in the West that any benefits accruing from Manitoba's natural resources should accrue to the Province itself.

The oil stocks, particularly Imperial Oil and B. A. Oil are not being greatly affected by the general weakness. With reference to Imperial, some in the "Street" feel that shareholders can look forward to some important development before the end of this year. There is a possibility of a substantial stock dividend being given. Imperial Oil by far the largest and strongest of its class doing business in the Dominion and reported sales for the first six months of 1928 have shown

INJURED GIRL IS IMPROVING

Miss Gertrude Wilson Still Suffering From Effects of Blow On Head.

WRONG NAME GIVEN.

Miss Gertrude Wilson, who was struck on the head by the fire escape of the Regent Theatre while leaving that building by the side entrance on Monday evening, is somewhat improved to-day. While her head and neck are still stiff and sore, she seems brighter, apparently recovering from the dazed condition in which she has been since the accident.

The name of Miss Wilson's sister, Miss Hazel Wilson, was published in error in last night's Examiner as that of the injured girl.

LADIES WIN CUP AT BELLEVILLE

Two Rinks From Local Club Make Successful Trip To Tourney.

18 RINKS ENTER.

Two rinks of lady lawn bowlers from the local club motored to Belleville early yesterday morning to compete in the ladies' lawn bowling tournament there. Belleville ladies were favored with ideal weather for their annual tournament and the grounds presented a very festive air with many flags flying in the breeze.

The draw was made at 10 o'clock, with eighteen rinks present. After the rules and regulations had been announced by Mr. Rae, of Belleville, the tournament was formally opened by Mayor Duff, who gave the speech of welcome, extending to the ladies the freedom of the city.

Mrs. G. Coleman's rink, composed of Miss Allen, Mrs. H. Graham, Mrs. Hutchinson and Mrs. Colman, were the winners of the first prize and brought home the cup to hold for one year. The ladies of the local club are indeed proud of their victory, as this is the first time in the history of the Peterborough Ladies' Lawn Bowling Club that they have had such an honor. Besides the cup each member of the rink was presented with a silver sugar and cream set on a silver tray. Mrs. Colman's rink had to play off with Mrs. Harcourt's rink of Cobourg, the former winning by two points. The members of Mrs. Harcourt's rink, Mrs Larkins, Mrs. Wilburn, Mrs. Young and Mrs. Harcourt, were presented with china cake plates as second prize.

The third prize of china pitchers went to a rink from Stirling, composed of Mrs. Whitty (skip), Mrs. Wright (vice), Mrs. Legrow, Mrs. Bailey.

The prize of flashlights, given for two wins, with the highest plus, went to a Belleville rink, composed of Miss McLean (skip), Mrs. Russell, Mrs. McKeowen, Mrs. Riggs.

The prizes for one win, with highest plus, were handsome vanity cases and were won by a rink from Tweed, composed of Mrs. Reeves (skip), Mrs. Hindle (vice), Mrs. Wagner, Miss Frost.

The consolation prize of beautiful cups and saucers went to Miss Hurley's rink of Belleville, composed of Miss Hurley (skip), Mrs. Bumstead (vice), Mrs. Bosbridge, Mrs. Lee.

Mr. Roe, of Belleville, in presenting the prizes complimented the ladies on their fine bowling and the good sportsmanship shown.

Each skip of a winning rink was called on for a speech and all thanked the Belleville ladies for the good time enjoyed.

At 4 o'clock the members of the Belleville Club served afternoon tea and a social hour was enjoyed. The last game was finished about 7:30 and all departed after giving three cheers and a tiger for Belleville Club.

The following is the personell of the rinks with the three draws:

Cobourg—Mrs. J. Jennings skip, Mrs. H. Skitch, Mrs. George Mitchell, Mrs. Skitch; Mrs. Hascourt skip, Mrs. Young, Mrs. Wilburne, Mrs. Larkins; Mrs. McKinnon skip, Mrs. C. Skitch, Mrs. McLeod, Mrs. Wilson.

Tweed—Mrs. Clark skip, Mrs. Corbet, Mrs. Bowlby, Mrs. McClusky; Mrs. Beattie skip, Mrs. McGee, Mrs Gordon, Miss Wright.

Warkworth—Mrs. Smith skip, Mrs. Smale, Mrs. Mowat, Mrs. Anderson.

Tweed —Mrs. Reeves skip, Mrs. Hindle Mrs. Wagner Miss Frost.

Deseronto —Mrs. Thompson skip, Mrs. Harding, Mrs. Allums, Mrs. Van Dusen.

Peterborough—Mrs. Coleman skip, Mrs. Hutchinson, Mrs. Graham, Miss Allen; Mrs. Greensiade skip, Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Wright, Mrs. Henry.

Belleville—Mrs. Duff, Miss Hay, Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Byce, Mrs. Dolan, Mrs. Aerkerman, Latimer Forrester, Mrs. Houston, Misses Blecker, McGinnis, Gardiner, McLean, Russell, Miss McKeowen, Riggs

CANADIANS WIN IN SEMI-FINALS

treal in a bout of the Olympic flyweight boxing competition to-day.

Ray Smillie, Toronto welterweight, won his second straight victory when he gained decision over Lenehan, of Ireland, in 147 pound class.

Vincent Glionna, Toronto, bantamweight, gained the decision over Zigiarski, Germany, after a fiercely-fought battle. Glionna scored several knockdowns.

Japanese Wins Swim.

Tsuruta, of Japan, became Olympic champion in the 200 metres breast stroke. The Japanese swam the distance in 2.48 4-5. Rademacher, Germany, was second, and Ildefonso, Philippines, third.

Pearce Beats Collett.

Collett, England's single sculler, who yesterday defeated Wright, of Canada, in the Olympic sculling event, to-day was defeated by Pearce of Australia.

Argonauts Beaten.

University of California, representing the United States, won from the Argonauts of Canada in the semi-finals of the Olympic competition for eight-oared crews to-day.

It was a heart-breaking, nip and tuck struggle, and United States gained the victory over the Canadians by a bare half length. The Argonauts furnished the stoutest opposition which the United States eight has met so far in the competition.

At the half-way mark in the 2,000 metres course, the winners had a lead of one length, but a courageous spurt carried the Canadians to within one-half length in the next 1,000 metres, but the Argos just failed to get up in time to overhaul the powerful stroking lads from California.

Twice in the course of the race the United States coxswain flashed a towel, which is the signal for a supreme effort of his men, and waved it frantically around his head as the determined Canadians drove down the course in a last desperate effort to nail the winners.

By defeating the Canadians, the United States agined the right to meet England for the championship in the finals on Friday. The English crew went into the final round by drawing a bye.

Kingston have been poorly patronized this season, and even now are in financial difficulties.

IN POLICE COURT

Robert Knox pleaded guilty to operating a car after his driver's permit had been cancelled and was fined $25.00 and $6.30 costs. The offence was committed on the Keene Road about 5.30 on August 1st. Knox claimed that there were three men in the car in front of him who were intoxicated and he took the wheel from his daughter, who was operating the car.

John Simpson, who pleaded guilty a week ago to the charge of vagrancy, was let go this morning, provided he leave the city at once.

A further remand was asked for in the case of theft against J. Turner.

LEGION SHOWS

There was unanimous agreement on the matter, School children should know the real facts. At present their minds are being filled with American propaganda by press, movies and radio, and Canadians should endeavor to stop the tide. Amendments to the old age pension act and the Mothers' Allowance Act, to relieve suffering of citizens who do not come under its clauses, were urged.

A resolution was submitted, putting the Legion on record as totally opposed to any political body or department paid by the Ontario government takin gover the care of dnsable ex-service men, their wives and children, the securing of pensions, etc., for them and that this convention emphasize that the adjustment offices of the Canadian Legion, B.E.S.L., continue to do the work in accordance with the constitution. In view of the fact that a special committee was working on the matter, the resolutioin was referred to it and its report will be presented later.

Plot To Loot Twenty Banks Exposed

Wholesale Robbery Plotted

Three Men Arrested in Quebec Village, Charged With Conspiracy.

HEAVILY ARMED.

Police Tipped Off On Sunday of Plan to Rob Provincial Bank Branch.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 9 (Special to The Examiner).—A plot which involved the wholesale looting of over twenty banks in the Eastern Townships was uncovered last night by the Provincial Police with the arrest of three men, charged with conspiracy to rob the Provincial Bank at St. Elizabeth de Warwick, twelve miles north of Arthabaska, Que., as they were eating in a restaurant in the village. At the time of their arrest the three men, who gave their names as Eugene Vigent, Armand Tremblay, and Edgar Gariepy, all of Montreal, were heavily armed and had in their possession safe-blowing tools, crow bars, and dynamite.

The Provincial Police were "tipped off" as to the plans of the three men last Sunday. Detective Jargaille was immediately dispatched to Arthabaska, Que, which is 140 miles from Montreal. Following investigations he learned that the Provincial Bank at St. Elizabeth de Warwick was to be robbed at midnight last night.

A hurried telephone call to High Constable Achille St. Mars, temporary Provincial Police head here, informed headquarters of the contemplated robbery. Constables Lepine, Masse and Lefebvre were sent to St. Elizabeth by automobile yesterday afternoon, all heavily armed in case of trouble.

A patient vigil over the village was kept by the constables all yesterday afternoon and evening. At 11 o'clock an automobile drove through the village. It returned ten minutes later and stopped in front of a restaurant. Three men climbed out and entered the eating establishment and ordered three meals.

Recognizing their men through descriptions furnished them, the detective and the three constables entered the restaurant and at the point of their revolvers ordered the three men to line up against the wall Searching their persons, the police found them heavily armed. In their automobile they discovered safe-breaking tools, dynamite, sawed off shot guns, and several hundred rounds of ammunition. Masks were found in the pockets of the men.

The alleged robbers were taken to Arthabaska and lodged in police cells there. Papers found on their persons identified them as the suspected men, and charge sof "conspiracy to rob the Provincial Bank of St. Elizabeth de Warwick" were laid against each man. They will be brought to Montreal to-night to be questioned by the Provincial Police here and then will be taken to Arthabaska and put in the cells there to await arraignment and trial.

Assistant Chief Dorais of the Provincial Police stated this morning that with the arrest of these three men a gigantic plot to rob about twenty banks situated in the Eastern Townships had been uncovered. The police were first informed of the plot on Sunday morning last, though the details as to what banks were to be robbed and when they were to be robbed were lacking. It was only yesterday that Detective Jargaille learnt that the men were to loot the St. Elizabeth Bank at midnight. With the arrest of the three men last night the plot has been nipped in the bud and if there were other suspected bandits involved in the plot, the arrest of three of their conferes will probably put a stop to the robberies.

According to the Provincial Police the three men arrested last night were ringleaders in the gigantic scheme to loot the string of Eastern Township banks. Two of them, Assistant Chief Dorais stated, have prison records, these being Vigent and Tremblay, who have served time in prison for other robberies. Gariepy has never been arrested before.

TWO MORE POLES PLAN FLIGHT FOR NEW YORK

WARSAW, August 9 — Undiscouraged by the recent failure of Majors Idzikowski and Kubala in their attempt to reach the United States through the air, two other Polish aviators, named Kowalczyk and Kotlicki, are preparing for a transoceanic flight.

The fliers intend to start from Bromberg or Thorn within a few days via Ireland, taking the same route as Koehl, Huenefeld, and Fitzmaurice. The machine to be used by them is said to have already arrived a Thorn and to be of the type of the Bremen. It has, however, two motors totalling 1,200 horse-power.

FLAG MARKS ANNIVERSARY

Bell Company Observes Aug. 10 As Date of First Long Distance Call.

52 YEARS AGO.

The Bell Telephone flag will be flown from the Bell Building on Hunter street on August 10, to commemorate the anniversary of the world's first long distance telephone talk.

Acting Manager M. E. Smye told The Examiner this morning that there are many occasions when this flag is raised as a tribute to the memory of some important date in the history of the telephone. Peterborough people when they see the flag at the mast will now know that it is an important date in the history of the telephone, which they have become so accustomed to using that very little thought is given to it and it is accepted as a matter of course.

On August 10, 1876, Alexander Graham Bell arranged with the old Dominion Telegraph Company for the use of one of their circuits from Brantford to Paris, for the purpose of testing his telephone invention. The test proved highly successful. The listeners in Paris heard quite distinctly the various selections of prose and poetry shouted into the crude mouthpiece at Brantford, eight miles distant. They could not answer by telephone, so the replies were telegraphed back to the speakers, but the test proved the practicability of the telephone for more than local talking.

This is the reason why the telephone company flies the Bell flag from the office on August 10.

C.G.E. CONTRACT TO SHEEHY FIRM

First of New Buildings To Be Erected Will Be Started at Once.

NEW TENDERS CALLED.

The contract was awarded this morning to Sheehy & Sons of Peterborough for the first of the buildings to be erected in the big 1928-29 building program of the Canadian General Electric Company here. This building is of concrete, brick and steel construction and will be proceeded with immediately.

Tenders will be asked for at once for further buildings, the erection of which will be gone on with just as soon as the contract is signed.

This is really good news for Peterborough, as the company is not delaying in the least the program announced a while ago that a million and a half dollars would be spent here in buildings and equipment before the end of 1929.

TORONTO, August 9. Canadian Press. — Fire protection for otulying districts and the organization of volunteer fire brigades in smaller centres have won the sympathy of the Hon. W. H. Price the Attorney General. He stated to-day that the provincial Fire Marshal's Department has been authorized to devote $3000 to assisting the organization of volunteer brigades, of which there are 230 in Ontario.

PROSPECTS BRIGHT FOR YIELD IN THE WESTERN PROVINCES

Point to Production of Greatest Crop in History of Country.

HARVESTING STARTED.

Most Encouraging Progress Made By All Grains Throughout West.

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 9.—(By The Canadian Press)—Western Canada is on the threshold of its 1928 harvesting season, with present prospects pointing to the production of the greatest crop in the history of the country.

Through the Prairie Provinces most encouraging progress is being made by all grains and in districts where cutting has started estimates of wheat yields have ranged from 25 to 40 bushels to the acre.

Recent reports from authorities making their annual field inspections have revealed the crops in varying stages, with the most advanced having completed cutting, and in one instance threshed, while in more backward areas another three weeks of favorable weather will be required to bring the crop to maturity. The general condition, however, finds 1828 crop slightly ahead of conditions at this date last year, and binders are expected to be humming over the Western grain fields within ten days.

Harvesting Started

Cutting of barley, rye and oats, has been underway in some sections for the past week, with these crops yielding slightly above the ten years average.

While no official estimates have yet been made of this year's wheat crop, the consensus of opinion of authorities who have travelled through the Western Provinces during the past week, is that final figures will show a yield considerably above the 1927 crop of approximately 450,000,000 bushels.

The feature of the growing crop to date is its freedom from rust or other pest infection. Hail has taken a considerable toll, particularly in Saskatcheman, but the increased acreage seeded this spring is expected to offset this loss.

The first harvesters excursion train is expected to reach Winnipeg from Eastern Canada early next week. The railway companies also are moving thousands of grain cars to the various centres of movement. Yet another indication of prepardness is arrival here of Leslie Boyd, chairman of the Board of Grain Commissioners, to make arrangements for the hearings on grain rates for interior elevators. These rates will be fixed by the Board on the strength

GENERAL JOINS BATTALION CLUB

Kingston Branch of 21st Battalion Organization Initiates Sir Richard Turner.

G. O. C. IN FRANCE.

KINGSTON, Aug. 9 (Special to The Examiner).—Last night at the residence of Major W. M. Nickle, the officers of the 21st Battalion Club of this city met General Sir Richard Turner, V.C., of Quebec, and initiated him an active member of the organization. E. Cockburn, President of the club, made the address, in which he remarked:

"During the great struggle in France and Flanders, we grew to love you and during the years of peace subsequent to the war, we have to a man admired you for the great and sound judgment you exercised while acting as our general officer commanding in France, and which meant so much in the attaining of the success achieved at St. Eloi and Courcellette in 1916. The years that have rolled by since the signing of peace, have given us an opportunity to discuss you and to think about you, and I am satisfied I express the views of all present when I say that your greatness in time of peace is consistent with the respect that we had for you in the time of war."

Sir Richard said he appreciated membership in the club and was flattered at their kindly references. His thoughts were constantly for the splendid men who served with him overseas. He was pleased to be linked up with the gallant 21st Battalion.

DEAF MUTE HIT BY MOTOR CAR

John Gibbs Brought To Nicholls Hospital Suffering From Cuts.

DRIVER ARRESTED.

George B. Clapper of Havelock appeared in police court this morning charged with reckless driving and causing actual bodily harm. The charge was laid as the result of an accident in Havelock last night when Clapper knocked down John Gibbs, a deaf mute, on the main street of the village.

Eyewitnesses claim that Gibbs stepped out in front of the car, Clapper made an attempt to go around him and Gibbs faltered and was struck, falling face downward on the pavement. Gibbs suffered severe cuts on the face and was rushed to Nicholls Hospital, where he is under the care of Dr. Moir.

A plea of not guilty was entered by Clapper's lawyer, Alex. Elliott, and the case was remanded until Thursday, August 16, in the town hall, Havelock.

Four Men Needed to Handle Traffic

The Bewdley Regatta drew heavy automobile traffic, requir- the assistance of three other officers besides Traffic Officer Hugh Wilson of this district. In the early part of the afternoon Officer Wilson and Provincial Officer Storey were on the scene, keeping the concrete portion of the road cleared to cars. To relieve the congestion and to afford spectators a better view of the sports the cars were parked angle wise on the north side of the road.

Later in the afternoon Highway officer Spence of Whitby and Sergeant Hallick of Port Hope arrived and each officer took a block which he kept under his control. There were no accidents which shows the perfect control the officers had over the traffic. As far as one could see there were cars parked along the north side of the road as close as possible.

Officers Spence, Storey and Hallick left early in the evening while Officer Wilson remained until the highway was considered in a safe condition.

THANKSGIVING FOR WAR PACT

Archbishops Urge Clergy To Offer Prayers On Day of Signing.

GREAT OCCASION.

LONDON, Aug. 9 (Canadian Press).—The Archbishops of Canterbury and York to-day issued a statement advising the clergy of parish churches of England to offer prayers of thanksgiving on the occasion of the signing of the Kellogg anti-war pact in Paris on August 27.

"The occasion is a great one in the contemporary history of the world," the statement said.

Lady Driver Shows She Can Think Quickly

A sudden swerve by a lady driver demonstrating the ability to think clearly with which woman drivers are not usually credited was all that stopped a serious accident on Ge ..t before dinner to-day. A woman on the sidewalk was nearly run down by a car and was saved only by the quick action of the driver. The car was small, so was maneuvered easily. The driver was a little girl about six years of age and the car a tiny express wagon.

Giant German Plane Makes Test Flight Romar expected to do 200 Miles an Hour

TRAVEMUNDE, Germany, Aug. 9.—The world's largest hydro-airplane, the Romar, made its first flight here early Tuesday. The ease with which the eighteen tons constituting the gross weight of the ship with partial load was lifted into air, maneuvred and landed again convinced the builders, the Rohrbach Metal Airplane Company of Berlin, that the Romar will serve satisfactorily in the transoceanic service between Germany and the Argentine, for which she is designed.

The machine rose into the air 250 yards after the start, and Pilot Steindorf handled it with the same ease with which he controlled combat planes during the war. After rising 300 feet, sharp curves were made, banking at nearly 90 degrees. Curves were made into the wond, and other tests of maneuvering ability were essayed in the fifteen minutes the flying yacht was aloft.

The landing was made on a choppy sea without more splash than a motor boat running at the same speed.

This short flight was the beginning of a series of tests which probably will be the most severe an airplane ever received. As this, with two others now in course of completion, are meant for transoceanic service, seaworthiness is one of the main requirements.

If the machine is obliged to land in mid-ocean the Lufthansa, which will operate the service, wants assurance that the passengers will be safe. Therefore the Romar will be sent into the Baltic Sea at one of its roughest periods and allowed to ride the waves to see whether the mountains of water crashing on the wings will overstrain them. Many tons weight already has been placed on the wing tips with satisfactory results, so the engineers are confident that the Romar will come through the tests with flying colors.

The flight was a real triumph for the aeronautical engineers. In many phases of the ship's construction they followed purely mathematical calculations, having no precedent for guidance. So far not a single error in their work has been discovered. That the machine will attain a speed of nearly 200 mile san hour with its three motors running at full speed, developing 2,400 horse-power, the constructors are now confident.

Cruise Around Clear and Stoney Lakes Last Event On Program.

PRESENTATIONS MADE.

Retiring President and Secretary Receive Desk Sets From Delegates.

Presentation of Parker desk sets to the ret iring president, J. A. Mundell, of Orillia, and the retiring secretary, F. M. Moffat of Toronto, featured this morning's session, the final meeting in a business way, of the Ontario Funeral Service Association convention, held here during the past three days, in the Armories. The new president, John Comstock, of this city, presided. final disposition of unfinished business, and a demonstration by Professor R. U. Stone, of Toronto, being the other main items on the agenda.

Professor Stone's exhibition of demi-surgery, for emergencies such as when a body was mutilated in an accident, and his explanation of the values of cosmetics, when used judiciously, was accompanied by a running comment on the new Embalmers' and Funeral Directors' Act and other subjects of interest to the convening funeral directors.

The meeting adjourned soon after twelve o'clock, while at one o'clock, all who could make the trip left by motor for South Beach, whence they will enjoy a boat trip around Stoney and Clear Lakes.

Announcements.

During the morning meeting, several announcements were made, including that of the afternoon outing, by President Comstock. Retiring Secretary Moffat, who had kindly consented to finish the convention as secretry, called attention to the invitation of the Quaker Oats Company to visit the plant between two and four o'clock in the afternoon. He read a telegram from the city of Ottawa, inviting the Association to hold its convention there in 1929, and another telegram was from V. J. Mongeau, secretary of the Quebec Funeral Directors' Association, who extended greetings and best wishes to the convening body. Mr. Moffat felt that the Association should feel gratified at the large registration of the present convention, there being 177 as compared with 165 names at the 1927 convention.

Those who had registered since the publication of the first list were as follows:

Thomas P. Ingram, Millbrook; J. P. Thompson, Toronto; D. G. Gillies, Rodney; T. E. Simpson, Sault Ste. Marie; W. E. Elliott, Toronto; F. M. O'Connor, Toronto; Norman A. Craig, Toronto; N. Presentations Made

It was immediately previous to entertaining upon discussion of unfinished business, that President-elect Comstock arose and in a few words expressed his appreciation of the retiring president and secretary. He introduced Mr. Edwards, of Gananoque. Mr. Edwards spoke in glowing terms of the ability and faithfulness to duty of retiring President Mundell. "You have given good service throughout a strenuous

WITH HELL FOR A NAME, BROTHERS CHANGE IT

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y., Aug. 9. — Alfonse Hell, 22 years old, and Alfred Hell 27, residents of New Rochelle, got permission today from Supreme Court Justice William F. Bleakley to change their name to Heill after they had represented in their petition to him that their original name had subjected them to considerable humiliation.

Alfonse was also allowed to change his given name to Albert. The change will become effective on September 17.

The Hells were born in Alsace, then under German rule, and became citizens of this country in 1920, when their father, August was naturalized.

FINAL TOUCH GIVEN BUSES

Gold Leaf Used To Letter Warning Slogan On Back of Each Car.

EXTRA SERVICE FOR FAIR.

The finishing touches are being put on Peterborough's buses. In the centre in the back, there is the slogan. "This bus stops at all railway crossings," and on the side near the door in big letters, is "Peterborough Bus Lines," while the number of the bus is painted on the cowl on each side of the car.

The letters are finished in gold leaf, which is real gold pressed very thin. A representative of Harris and Boddy, who are doing the work, told The Examiner that this is a very expensive method. After the letters are finished they are outlined in black to give them an outstanding appearance and a finished touch to the slogans and to the general appearance of the buses.

F. Timbs, in charge of the buses, told The Examiner that the bus drivers now have orders to come to a full stop at all railway crossings. Some time ago this was neglected by some of the dirvers who merely slowed down at the tracks, but during the past few weeks this has been rectified and it is a strict order that all these cars stop at the crossings.

The service will be augmented by at least two buses from Walkerville during exhibition week, which are being brought to the city to facilitate transportation during the week. This will assure Peterborough that the buses will be less crowded than if the additional cars were not brought to the city, and also to assure a faster service over the city's lines, as there will not have to be any buses taken from their usual run.

CITY PROMISED CONSIDERATION

Hon. G. N. Gordon Recalls Visit of Mayor Holloway to Ottawa.

ON POWER QUESTION.

Hon. G. N. Gordon told The Examiner this morning that the resolution passed a couple of days ago by the Council, requesting the granting of power rights to the City of Peterborough had already been dealt with by Dr. Holloway during the time he was Mayor of Peterborough.

Dr. Holloway and Mr. Gordon interviewed the Hon. Charles A. Dunning, Minister of Railways and Canals as to whether there was a possibility of a large concern obtaining power if it located in Peterborough. Hon. Mr. Dunning then assured Dr. Holloway that no power rights would be granted without the city being consulted, and considered.

In any event the Hydro-Electric Power Commission would require to have notice because of the assurance already given that if the Commission desired to develop power on the Otonabee, it would be given that opportunity providing it paid $2.00 per horse-power a year rental for the use of the surplus water flowing over the Dominion Government dams.

The Hon. Mr. Gordon further said that he doubted if any more developments would take place on the Otonabee bécause the Hydro-Electric Power Commission was buying all the Gatineau Power it could use at $15 per h.p., and if Mr. Hall's figures are right the Power Commission is making about 100 per cent profit on its investment.

Chairman Toronto Board of Trade Grain Section Explains System.

FARMERS LOSE.

Members of Western Ontario Pool Ten to Fifteen Cents a Bushel Down.

(Special to The Examiner)

TORONTO, Aug. 9.—The advantages of the co-operative handling of Ontario wheat were discussed by your correspondent this morning with John Kennedy, chairman of the grain section of the Toronto Board of Trade.

"The idea of the pool," he said, "is based on the general advantage claimed, that the pool can sell its wheat when it is economical to do so, and can refrain from selling when the time is not advantageous. That is the general proposition at the basis of the movement. But to that must be added the local and particular conditions of the industry. These give rise to certain disadvantages.

"In the first place, it must be remembered that in this province the handling of wheat has been built up on a system of private elevators and mills, and that system has been found to work efficiently. But look at the actual figures.

"The net result of the operation of the pool last year in this province, and these figures are taken from the official circular sent out by the organization, show that the pool farmers of Ontario got on the basis of no. 2 wheat or mixed wheat $1.23½ a bushel, and the price ranged down to $1.03½ for the lowest grade. While of course, the outsider cannot tell the average price, it must have been between these two figures.

"Now in the case of farmers outside of the pool, dealers during the last six months have been receiving $1.30 to $1.60 at country points and prior to that time the lowest price was $1.20 per bushel F.O.F. country points, while there were heavy sales last fall ranging from $1.30 to $1.35.

Those prices apply, of course, to the trade. It must be evident the farmers who sold through the regular channels got a substantial premium as compared with those operating through the pool.

"The non-pool prices are dealer's prices and the prices the farmers got were 5 or 6 cents less. The cost of selling the wheat through the pool is shown by their official circular to be 7 cents a bushel. And the figures quoted warrant the statement that in the case of wheat handled through the pool the actual cost of selling was greater and the prices realized definitely lower than in the case of wheat handled through private channels. I believe a reasonable estimate would be that the farmer in the pool got anywhere from ten to fifteen cents less per bushel.

Different from West

Mr. Kennedy pointed out the difficulty in the way of comparisons between pool operations in Western and Eastern Canada. "In the West you have a sparse population with country elevators at infrequent intervals, but in this province almost every small hamlet has its mill and elevator. Wheat growing in the East, moreover, is really a minor industry. I do not believe that the average farmer produces more than four hundred bushels of wheat on his farm each year."

Mr. Kennedy also suggested the further factor that in the case of the wheat pool the mill feed was not available to the same extent, because of large exports of Ontario winter wheat which should have been milled by the country mills in the province, for livestock, as where the wheat was handled by private channels. "In a province where the bulk of the farming is mixed, that is no inconsiderable factor," he said.

Used 31 Grades.

Information from authentic sources indicate that the Western Ontario Wheat Pool last year handled about 1,750,000, bushels of Ontario wheat. None of this was grown east of Simcoe and York counties.

In handling the 1927 crop the wheat pool recognized thirty-one different grades and as most of the wheat was graded by the pool buyers the county points and paid for on its merits, all the wheat was cleaned either by the farmers or at the elevators. An initial price was paid at the time of delivery, another payment in the middle of March, and the balance at the end of the season, when the crop was completely marketed. A final statement has now been made to the members of the pool and it is from this final statement that your correspondent obtained the figures as issued by the United Farmers' Co-operative Company, Limited.

In conversation with grain dealers your correspondent learns that the

WRIGHT AND GUEST IN FINALS

Canadian Scullers Get Bye

Meet Winners of To-day's Doubles Between U. S. and Austria.

ARGOS ELIMINATED.

Scullers Are Canada's Only Hope For Olympic Aquatic Championship.

(By T. H. Loudon, Canadian Press Special Correspondent)

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 9. — Joe Wright yesterday afternoon at last got a break, when the Canadian doubles team drew a bye in the semi-finals of the Olympic sculling championship. As a result Wright and his clubmate Jack Guest on Friday, will race the winner of to-day's doubles match between the United States and Austria. The United States pair are the strong favorites to enter the final with the Canadians.

The doubles team is now Canada's only hope for an Olympic aquatic championship, with Joe Wright eliminated in the singles and the Toronto Argonauts defeated yesterday by the University of California eight by a bare half length, after as fierce a struggle as the placid Sloten canal is likely to ever witness.

The Canadian eight are given third place honors, with the United States and British crews meeting in the final on Friday This race is being looked forward to as the event of the games, but it can hardly be closer than yesterday's struggle between the Canadians and the Californians.

Make Fast Time

The Argonauts forced the American crew to the fast time of six minutes and two seconds for the 2,000 metre course. The United States crew broke faster and by intensive sprinting the famous Golden Bears had a scant quarter length lead on the Argonauts at the 250 metre mark. The Canadians contented themselves with keeping in striking distance and at the 500 mark were half a length behind. The Americans increased their lead to a length at the halfway mark.

The Canadians made their challenge at the three-quarter mark. Thrusting their shell forward with long, powerful sweeps, the Argos despite the American efforts placed their shell nearly on even terms with the U.S. boat at 1,750 metres. The coxwain of the California crew then went to the extreme limit of his exhortations to the big crew, madly waiving a towel around his head in the call for a supreme effort. It was the first time he had been forced to show the towel and the Californians were equal to the occasion, putting the last ounce of energy behind their oars to keep a winning margin. The Argonauts continued to press, but already had lost too much ground.

The excited crowd gave the Canadians a full measure of applause. The English rowing critics on the ground expressed the opinion after the race that the Argonauts would be a welcome feature at the 1929 English Henley regatta.

Defeated Germany

The doubles entered the final by defeating Germany by a length and a half yesterday. Wright and Guest thereby getting satisfaction for the defeat they received at the hands of the German pair, Hoeck and Voight, on Monday. The Canadian pair were never in much danger in to-day's race.

To-day will be Joe Wright's first holiday from sculling since last Wednesday, except for Sunday. He has had eight races altogether, in the singles and doubles, since the events started last Thursday and the day off should be of great benefit to the young holder of the Diamond Sculls.

THE WEATHER

Meteorological Office Toronto, Aug. 8.—Pressure is comparatively high over the Central States and Great Lakes and low over Northwestern Canada. Light thundershowers have occurred in some parts of Ontario and Quebec, but the weather has been mostly fair over the Dominion and decidedly warm in Southern Ontario and the Western Provinces.

Lake Superior—Moderate east and southeast winds; mostly fair and warmer.

Western Provinces— Mostly fair and decidedly warm.

Party of Paddlers Make 150 Mile Trip

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 9.—(Canadian Press.) — A party of paddlers from the Grand Trunk Boating Club will leave here on Friday for a 150-mile canoe trip. They will be headed by Commodore P. W. Hollingworth and will include two Otterburn Boating Club paddlers. The local oarsmen will start their water jaunt at Smith Falls and will pass through the Rideau Lakes into the Thousand Islands, finishing at Brockville. The party will be composed of the following: P. W. Hollingworth, A. E. Barker, R. Kerr, B. Starke, G. Marshall, T. Colby, J. Parnell, A. E. Turner, S. Foster, M. Clevely, A. Paquette.

DRAIN WORK NEAR FINISH AT MILLBROOK

Workmen to Begin Connecting Sections to Cellars This Week.

CELEBRATE NEXT YEAR

Expected Will be Late in Fall Before Paving Program is Completed.

MILLBROOK, Aug. 9 (Examiner Correspondence).—Work on the main drain has been practically completed from its outlet near the old Octagon Mill site, to its origin at the top of the parsonage hill. The connecting sections to the cellars are still to be done, this part to be underway in the immediate future, and the part that runs along Union street for a short distance has not yet been finished. In the early part of this week the men were at work cementing the openings for the man-holes which are to be left at intervals along the entire length.

For the whole distance along Tupper street the ditch draining has been finished, though the machinery was broken, or bent, more than once because of coming into contact with the original corduroy road, the cedar logs having to be dug out, in some instances, and being apparently in as good condition as when laid on this, at one time, the principal business street of the village.

Tupper street is now scarified for the putting in of the stone, the new concrete bridge, over the stream near Donaldson's corner, being well under way.

The Amesite Company has all its machinery here to proceed with the two-mile paving program, and the stone will be immediately brought in. The work has been halted somewhat

(Examiner Correspondence)

DOWNEYVILLE, Aug. 9.—Congratulations are extended to Zita Herlihey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Herlihey, who was successful in passing her musical examination with the Toronto Conservatory of Music with honors. Also Norine Gosselin, who passed with honors in primary piano with McGill University, Montreal. Both are pupils of Miss Marguerite Weatherhead, Peterborough.

Mr. and Mrs. John Skuce, Mrs. Timothy Driscoll and Miss Lizzie Carroll, all of Rochester, N. Y., spent a few days as the guests of Mrs. Margaret Herlihey in the village.

Miss Mary O'Connell has returned home after a pleasant visit with her cousin, Mrs. Ray Carlow, in Douro.

Mr. Basil Carrol, of Rochester, attended the wedding of his cousin, Mr. Leslie Lucas, and Miss Ruby Perdue here on Tuesday morning.

Mr. Patrick Herlihey has returned from Peterborough, where he spent a few days as the guest of his sister, Mrs. Thomas Murray.

Marmora Youth Wins Honors

Gerald Potts Wins Five Mile Marathon Swim at Trent River

Marmora Youth Battles Way Against Great Difficulties To Be Acclaimed First Amateur Champion Swimmer of Trent Waterways—His Time Was Three Hours and 10 Minutes.

AGNES WIGHT ENTERS MANY EVENTS WINNING AT SWIMMING AND PADDLING

Large Crowd Attends and Sees Every Event Keenly Contested —Dances at Two Pavilions Wind Up Festivities.

TRENT RIVER, August 9 (Examiner Correspondence):

Gerald Potts of Marmora, 22, earned the distinction of being the first amateur champion swimmer of the Trent Waterways through winning the five-mile marathon swim at Trent River regatta. To do so, he had to cover a circle marked with buoys five times. Twice he got into difficulties as he passed through a bed of weeds. Also a strong wind was blowing at the time, which made the water very choppy.

Donald McArthur of Campbellford took the lead at the start but gave up after completing two miles. Donald Ellis of Trent River, another starter, lasted about half a mile. The winner's time was 3 hours 10 minutes. He was given a great ovation on completing his swim. He will have to win the $50 cup again next year to retain permanent possession.

Charles Shannon of Marmora was the winner's trainer.

This year Trent River Regatta is claimed to be the greatest success yet from a financial point of view, and if the crowds which lined the shores and filled the fleet of boats are to be considered, it was a huge success from other angles as well. A stiff but refreshing breeze made the water choppy and tested the skill as well as the strength and endurance of the various contestants. The swift current of the river was also an item to be considered by those taking part in the various events. There were no accidents of any account throughout the entire day, which is little short of miraculous when the huge crowds which lined the water's edge are taken into consideration.

Fashionably dressed ladies and men in sport clothes lent a touch of color to the scene, which was otherwise devoid of decoration save for the small pennants on the finishing were.

All the events were contested, although the number of entries was not large in a few of them. Agnes Wight was perhaps the most persistent competitor, and her name was to be found on the list for practically every event that was open to her sex. She and her sister finished even in first place in the ladies' one mile swim, the last event on the program.

In the outboard motor race there was an accident right at the start, which resulted in one of the boats being stove in in the bows. But its pilot was not to be easily discouraged and came second. A higher powered motor boat of this type was handicapped, and was an easy winner. Unfortunately, the driver passed inside of a buoy and was disqualied.

Two speed boats of the sea sled design, with outboard motors, gave the crowd a thrill as they dashed hither and thither about the area marked off for the regatta. Their speed was estimated by their operators as about thirty miles per hour, but they claimed that with other power units they could easily increase this figure. The hulls are custom built by P. M. Palmer, of Wellington, and are of cedar. When complete and ready for the engine, their gross weight is one hundred pounds. It was expected that the Johnston motors were to be demonstrated this afternoon, but both these boats were powered by five horse-power Lockwood Ace motors, and were driven by Barnard Boulter, Belleville, and J. M. Palmer, Wellington, Ont. Both boats were brought to the regatta by motor car. One was lashed fast to the top of a sedan and the other was carried on a trailer. Both drivers were generous with their craft and freely gave all information asked.

The events of the day began at ten in the morning with the five-mile swim.

The honours for the men's single canoe race went to Otter Scriver, Hastings, Jack Garneau, Trent River and Hiram Revoir, Trent River. The ladies' singles were won by Marguerite Garneau, Trent River, and Agnes Wight, Trent River.

Boys' swimming race— Ray McCann, Gerald Chaplain, Andrew Currie.

Men's swimming race, 100 yards— Jack Griffin, Toronto; Ray McCann.

Ladies' double canoe race— Marguerite Garneau and Bernice Covert;

BICYCLE RIDING ABREAST FORBIDDEN IN ST. KITTS

ST. CATHARINES, Aug. 9. — The traffic regulations here have been tightened up. "Jaywalking" is against the law and pedestrian must keep to the marked lines. It is unlawful for two bicycles to ride abreast. Motor drivers must obey rigidly the "stop" signs and must come to a full stop at a "through" street. The plan to divert tourist traffic through the city by way of Church street, to relieve the great congestion on St. Paul street, the leading business thoroughfare, which is part of the Toronto to Niagara Falls Highway, was abandoned, as merchants on St. Paul street want the tourists to drive on the "main" street, past their stores.

OBITUARY

WILLIAM IRA GOODFELLOW

A life-long resident of North Monaghan passed away at his home, Lot 11, Concession 12, on Tuesday, August 7, in the person of William Ira Goodfellow, aged 47 years. He leaves to mourn, two sisters and a brother: Margaret Goodfellow, Mrs. Bert Huffman and Herbert Goodfellow.

The funeral takes place to-day, August 9, from the family residence in North Monaghan, at 2 p.m. to Little Lake cemetery; the Rev. J. H. Dudgeon conducting the services in the absence of the Rev. W. McDonald.

O.A.C. 1924 CLASS PLANS RE-UNION

The graduating class of Ontario Agricultural College of the year of '24 are planning a reunion in Toronto on Saturday night, November 24th. It has been difficult, according to a letter written by J. B. Nelson, a graduate of that year, for the permanent executive to keep in touch witht he boys and he requests that all the old boys in this and every other section of the country make it a point to be on hand with suggestions as to what they should do for the college, as other years are presenting the old school with paintings of distinguished professors.

The last couple of the old song should be an inspiration to attend:

"Twenty-four, hats off to thee
To thy colors true we shall ever be—" as well as the memories of the times when theiy have yelled themselves hoarse in their Freshmen, Sophomore, Junior and Senior years. The yell Mr. Nelson now states should be:

Co-Boss, So-Boss, whoa-back-gee
Buckwheat, Barley, O.A.C.
Old Boys, Old Boys, Ha, Ha, Ha,
Twenty-four, twenty-four. rah, rah, rah.

ALSIKE RUINED BY HEAVY RAINS

Grain Commences Growing in Stooks in Fields in This District.

OATS FLATTENED

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BETHANY, August 9. — A great deal of the alsike crop has been ruined with the recent wet weather. In some places it has commenced to grow again. Grain in stook has also commenced growing, and the prospects are not nearly as favorable for the bountiful harvest as was expected a couple of weeks ago. A great deal o fbarley and oats has also been flattened with the rain. Roots and corn are doing well so far.

AT KING'S WHARF.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

KING'S WHARF, August 9. — The continuous rains have done thousands of dollars of damage in this section to alsike, peas, and fall wheat. Thomas Sullivan had forty acres of peas all cut, the finest crop, when cut you could see, all spoiled. He could not get his crop in on account of the rain. Mr. Sullivan also has forty acres of fall wheat all cut, but it can't be saved, it is so wet. Both peas and wheat are sprouting, and will mean hundreds of dollars of a loss to Mr. Sullivan.

There were several beautiful fields of fall wheat here, all growing in the stooks and spoiled, also the alsike that is cut is spoiled. The ground is so soft and wet now one can hardly get into the fields to do anything the horses and wagons sink so deep. There are a few fields of hay out, the water lying covering it. It is looking serious for the farmers here. Potatoes are getting too much rain, and there is danger of them rotting in the ground.

Raspberries Good.

The raspberries are a fine crop through here this year, and everyone is getting their share. The gardens look fine and also buckwheat, if too much rain does not come.

There is great demand for cattle

Norman Douglas Ellis, Toronto, is to-day a man practically without a skull as the result of injuries received when an electric current, equivalent to 3,000 horse-power, passed through his body. An artificial skull of bakelite supplies the deficiency, providing the necessary support for a wig. The two pictures of Ellis show him with and without the toupee.

"MYSTERY WOMAN" WILL NOT PRESS CLAIM TO LATE CZAR'S FORTUNE

NEW YORK, Aug. 9 (A.P.).—Mme. Anastasia Tchaikovsky, the self-styled Grand Duchess Anastasia of Russia, will make no attempt to prove her identity as a daughter of the late czar or to obtain possession of a fortune he is reported to have hidden in England.

This was made clear by William B. Leeds, who with his wife, the former Princess Xenia of Russia, have taken care of Mme. Tchaikovsky since her arrival in this country last winter.

The "mystery woman," around whose identy a controversy has raged for several years, desires only a chance to regain her health and lead a normal life, he said. She has no interest in proving her identity to those who doubt her or in fighting for the reputed $60,000,000.

Both Leeds and his wife, who played with the grand duchess as children at the imperial court, are convinced she is the daughter of the czar. He believes no impersonation could have fooled them for the number of months this woman has been their guest.

Her search for the quiet and peace she desires has been difficult, he said, because of publicity. Ever since she arrived in Berlin and failed to convince Russian refugees there of her claims, he said, she has been subjected to questioning and to being photographed. For months she lay seriously ill in a Berlin hospital as a result of a suicide attempt.

Last year Mrs. Leeds arranged for her to come to this country, hoping that the change in scenes and the medical science of this country might restore her health.

During her stay at the Richard and Leeds home, those places were under heavy police guard and at the Leeds home a pack of large dogs was loosed in the grounds at night.

HAULTAIN AND DEER BAY

(Examiner Correspondence)

Mr. and Mrs. Melville Millar and family of Young's Point were in Burleigh Falls on Friday.

Mrs. C. Stinson of Peterborough was the guest of her brother, Mr. John Hill of Deer Bay on Sunday.

Messrs. Thomas and Milton Traynor of Smith Township spent the week-end at their home in Deer Bay.

Misses Madeline Hicken and Eileen Wilson of Oshawa, Ont., were in Haultain on Sunday.

Miss Thelma Duggan of Smith Township spent the week-end with her cousin, Miss Leta Lytle of Deer Bay.

Miss Katie Traynor of Smith Township spent the week-end with her parents in Deer Bay.

Messrs. George MacGregor and Edward Collins of Oshawa were in Burleigh Falls on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Ireland of Lakehurst were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Ireland of Deer Bay on Sunday.

The many friends of Mr. William Bolton of Deer Bay will regret to hear that he is confined to his bed with inflammatory rheumatism.

Mr. Alex. Freeburn, of Toronto, has returned to his home after spending two months at the Park Hotel, Burleigh Falls.

Mr. Frank Adams and his daughter of Peterborough motored to his cottage at Sandy Point on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Duggan, and their daughter, Thelma, and Mr. and Mrs. M. Clary, all of Smith Township were in Haultain on Sunday.

Messrs. Stanley and Raymond Jiles of Peterborough are the guests of Mr. Wilbert Edwards of South Burleigh for two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hill of Deer Bay were in Lakefield on Monday evening.

Mr. Ernie Lane of Haultain was visiting friends in Smith Township on Saturday.

Mr. Johnny Stone of South Burleigh was in Young's Point on Friday.

Mr. Thomas Duggan of Young's Point, motored to Burleigh Falls on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Burr, Miss Ivy Burr, and Master Albert Burr, of Oshawa, Ont., motored to Haultain on Sunday.

M. Robert Clayton of Toronto was in Burleigh Falls on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stubbs, and their son Richard, who have a cottage on Stoney Lake were in Young's Point on Saturday.

Rev. and Mrs. J. J. Robbins, and their daughter Joan, were at Mount Julian on Friday. Rev. Mr. Robbins now rector of the Anglican Church at Markham, Ont., was at one time the Incumbent of the Stoney Lake Mission.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Shaeffer of Toronto were guests at the cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stubbs for the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Duggan of Smith Township were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Hill of Deer Bay on Sunday.

The storm of last week did much damage to the country in the neighborhood of the Burleigh Road. Many trees were struck by lightning, and much grain suffered damage. The fall wheat, while it yielded a good crop this season is now sprouting as it stands in stooks, but it is to be hoped that even yet it may be of use. The farmers are now hoping that the unsettled weather is a thing of the past for the present time, and that they will have the opportunity to work to the best advantage for the remainder of the season.

SERPENT MOUNDS SCENE OF BATTLE

Indians Say Dead of Ancient Bloody Strife Lie Under Mound.

If man's eye could gaze back upon deeds and feats of unrecorded history, what wonders and deeds of heroism would be unfolded to him. A country's history is not only written upon tablets of stone or upon manuscripts, but it is revealed upon the very face of the land itself. This unwritten history generally goes by the name of tradition and is handed down by word of mouth from generation to generation, and in the course of time it is collected by some compiling genius and forms a history.

The Rice Lake country, whose shores in years past were no doubt thickly inhabited by Indians, is replete with evidences of ancestral activity. If you stroll along the Hiawatha shore in the direction of Harkamore's Point and examine the land closely you are quite likely to discover shattered remnants of old Indian arrowheads. These relics of the red man's artillery are to be found at various points around the lake, but are especially numerous around Hiawatha.

The most sacred memorial of the red man's age, however, is to be found on the north side of the lake, down towards the end and pretty well opposite Margaret's Island. It takes the form of a long mound, perhaps two hundred feet in length and some few feet in height. It is called Serpent's Mounds by the Rice Lake populace on account of its winding nature so resembling a serpent, and is the last resting place of many a redskin, who in ages long past is believed to have bitten the dust in a memorable battle once fought on the shores of the lake.

This curious and uncanny shaped mausoleum of their swarthy fathers is the object of the deepest veneration on the part of the various Indian settlers living around the lake. Many and varied are the legends told about Serpent's Mounds. Old Indians say that a terrific battle was fought on the sight of the mound and on account of the great numbers slain it was impossible to carry them back with the usual triumph and display to the village, and hence it necessitated the burying of the slain warriors in this curious manner.

Some years ago the white man's instinctive curiosity caused him to send Toronto curio hunters to examine Serpent's Mounds, and many interesting relics of bygone warfare were resurrected and taken back to the Queen City to delight the eyes of museum throngs. The Indian, however, prefers to have the mound, which shelters his dead, left undisturbed, which is only natural to any nation that venerates its dead as highly as the redskins do.

MARATHON DANCING.

Attorney-General Price has done well in stopping the marathon dance competition at Crystal Beach.

Of all the silly contests the world has had to endure in recent years it is doubtful whether there has been anything quite so absurd as these long distance dances.

There should be no welcome in Ontario for the mercenary promoters of this 1928 craziness.

It is a sad commentary upon present-day mentalities that there are enough foolish people willing to pay to see contests of this nature to make the enterprise profitable to the pockets of the promoters, if not to the health of the competitors, and Hon. Mr. Price's action is welcome on that account.

Had the matter been left for municipal attention it is just possible that some civic officials in Ontario might have been soft enough to have allowed more of these jazz marathons.

We can get along quite nicely without them.

ONLY A SECOND.

A very sensible little folder has been issued by the Ottawa police department with the hope of impressing upon automobile drivers the risk that is involved in speeding on city streets.

The warning of the Ottawa police is one that can be read profitably by all drivers, inasmuch as most people make the mistake pointed out in the folder of thinking more in terms of miles and hours than in terms of feet and seconds.

Here is a quotation from the warning that should provide many Peterborough drivers with some food for reflection:

"You may be able to stop your car within a distance of 44 feet, but remember you have only one second in which to do it if you are travelling at 30 miles per hour.

"If an object suddenly crosses your path 50 feet ahead from where you are sitting at the wheel and you are travelling 30 miles per hour you have only one second in which to act to avoid an accident, and only half a second if object is only 25 feet away.

"Can you with a fair degree of accuracy guess 50 feet on a roadway? If not, you will find a little experimenting both interesting and helpful.

"If you cease thinking in terms of miles and hours, and think in terms of feet and seconds, you are bound to be a careful driver."

A COMPLAINT BUREAU.

It is intimated that the Provincial Department of Highways may introduce a complaint bureau, offering an opportunity by which motorists who are guilty of glaring infractions of safety rules may be reported to the department.

The need of some such channel as this for registering complaints against reckless driving has been felt by many citizens.

The average individual hesitates to inform the police when he sees a motorist guilty of dangerous handling of his machine.

He feels that he should do so, but ninety-nine times out of a hundred decides that he had better not start anything, and the result is the reckless driver goes on his reckless way.

Through the system proposed for Ontario printed report forms will be readily available, upon which citizens who are witnesses of irresponsible driving can merely tick off the particular offense committed and the number of the offending car and mail them to the central bureau.

Such reports should speedily signal out the habitual reckless driver and give the department a chance to deal with him effectively.

AN OLD BOYS' REUNION.

Peterborough's City Council, in considering the advisability of sponsoring an old boys' reunion here next year, are bringing to the fore an enterprise that The Examiner has always favored.

It is many years since such a reunion was held in Peterborough, and there is a feeling that the time is ripe for another home-coming of old boys and girls on a scale in keeping with modern ideas of a celebration.

Scattered all over the Continent are old residents of Peterborough.

Many of them have not been back in the old home town for years, some perhaps never since they left.

Most of these voluntary exiles would be glad to come back and take part in an old home week, welcoming the chance not only to renew acquaintances with scenes long held dear in memory, but also of meeting old friends, many of whom, like themselves, would be in Peterborough for the celebration.

Peterborough would like to welcome back her sons and daughters from far and near, not only for their own sake, but to show them that while they have been away the city has not stood still.

There are many changes we would like them to see, and no better opportunity presents itself than is made possible through an old boys' reunion.

It is to be hoped the Council will find the scheme feasible when it is taken thoroughly under review in September.

THE IRISH INVASION OF SCOTLAND.

From time to time, during the past few years, a wail has been heard from Scotland that the land of Bruce and Wallace, of John Knox, Burns and Scott, was not only on the decline, but actually threatened with extinction. The cause assigned was neither race suicide, an industrial blight, an excessive loss of population by emigration, nor a decay of the national spirit. The source of the trouble which, according to all accounts, menaced the very existence of Scotland as a nation, proud of its traditions and racial characteristics, was to be sought in the intrusion of an alien race, people of Irish birth, who had acquired a domicile, and, as it seemed, an undesirable measure of control, in the land o' cakes.

The situation has now become so acute, in the view of many patriotic Scots, as to demand the immediate attention of the British Parliament. Municipalities have been roused to the need for something being done to stem the Irish flood. Presbyterian pulpits have resounded with declamation against encroachments upon the faith and doctrine established by John Knox. Books have been written to awaken the Scottish people to a realization of the danger that confronts them. And the other day a deputation proceeded to London to lay the situation before the Home Secretary and the Secretary for Scotland.

The problem thus presented is a complicated one. Here is a country which, since the present century began, has lost by emigration and the war over a half a million of her people. During the same period, it is estimated that she has received considerably more than that number of Irish immigrants, with the result that to-day at least one-fourth of the population of Scotland is of Irish birth or extraction. The invasion began in a comparatively small way by the crossing of navvies and harvesters from the southern parts of Ireland to assist in constructional work and farming operations. It reached its peak during the years of the war and the Irish troubles, and has continued, to a lesser extent, since the formation of the Free State.

From the Scottish point of view, the conditions created by the influx from the land of Erin give cause for uneasiness, if not alarm on several grounds, patriotic, social, economic and religious. The national spirit and sentiment, so long the pride of the Caledonian race, is regarded as in danger of being weakened, if not destroyed. There is complaint that the Irish invaders are largely drawn from the lower classes of the "Green Isle," and form an undesirable element, whose criminal tendencies and mean standards of living constitute a burden upon the local authorities. On the economic side, it is contended that they are over-crowding the labor market, and competing on terms that enable them to obtain employment which the Scots themselves cannot get. And, what to the sons of Scotia is, perhaps, the matter of deepest concern, is the religious aspect, the growth of Roman Catholicism in the home of Presbyterianism.

Racial antagonisms and creed contentions are always to be deplored, and it would be unfortunate indeed if the situation which has developed in Scotland were to give rise to either. To assert, as did one of the Kirk members of the deputation which made representations to the Government, that the invasion was "part of a larger policy to inoculate the Scottish nation with Irish," or to suggest that it had any political or religious significance, is to allow bigotry to outrun common sense. A truer statement of the case would have been that the Irish have flocked, and are flocking, to Scotland because it seems to them a desirable country to settle in, just as, three centuries ago, the Scots invaded Ulster, and as the Celts, Saxons, Normans and Scandinavians migrated to the land north of the Tweed in prehistoric times.

The problem, which confronts Scotland is not as much one of racial or religious ascendancy, as of assimilation. The Irish are there, presumably, to stay. They cannot be ejected, and it is doubtful whether means can be devised to check the influx which continues to add to their number. Dr. Johnson once remarked that it was next to impossible to "unscottify" a Scot. Perhaps it might be as difficult to "Scottify" the Irish, in which case there would seem to be no other course open than to endeavor to facilitate the development of a people blending the best qualities of both races.

Already there are signs pointing in that direction. Scots-Irish youths are crowding into the universities. We hear of Scots-Irish scholars, authors, artists and even members of Parliament. And it may well be, as one Scots writer suggests, that the Irish invasion constitutes "a point of departure" toward a Scottish renaissance.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Joe Wright will probably be willing to admit that the marathon is not the only endurance contest at the Olympic Games.

Canada's political leaders are just "warming up," to use a baseball phrase. They should be ready to go when the next election is called.

Three regattas were held in the Peterborough district yesterday. It is about time these aquatic contests were producing a champion paddler.

The fact that Ontario undertakers have been holding a convention in Peterborough will doubtless prompt the Belleville Ontario to suggest that the morticians chose an appropriate place.

Personal liberty will soon be only a meaningless phrase. A Toronto ball fan was arrested for throwing pop bottles at an umpire. Or was it because he missed the target?

Sunday motoring, declares the St. Catharines Standard, is no longer a pleasure, but a risk. And not a good insurance risk, the Standard might have added.

Cervonne's Band is returning to the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition this year. The local management believe in keeping the entertainment features at a high level, and this Pittsburg musical organization won general favor last year.

HAS THE POOL OF SILOAM BEEN RE-DISCOVERED?

So many people have been benefitted in the past by the waters of Catchacoma that an investigation was determined on and brought to a head by the recent reports in The Examiner of cures effected. The result is that the Black Pool as it was called in ancient times has been rediscovered. Other pools or springs there may be but this one is the original home of hydropathy and it looks it. Iron and phosphates are plainly there in abundance and it is fully expected that government analysis will show that the miracle behind them is radium emanations. The Pool of Bethesda of Holy Writ was venerated as a divine gift and if Rheumatism, Arthritis, rheumatic fever and kidney as well as blood diseases yield to this the Black Pool of Catchacoma will rival Siloam and Bethesda in popular esteem. No attempt will be made to monopolize the waters but it is understood that the famous pool's whereabouts is known as yet only to a few. Enormous yields of huckleberries, raspberries and wild strawberries characterise this year but all one hears talked about amongst tourists and the few natives of this district is the Black Pool. It is a small spring and one that is soon "pumped out" but it is hoped that other waters in the same neighborhood will show similar constituents. The Buckhorn road is now through to Haliburton, thanks to the recent agitation at the Board of Trade of Peterborough and the City Council who so impressed upon the government this spring the necessity of giving tourists and business generally an opening and from the north that the government put on a force of men last month and now motorists may come and go from our north or south via Buckhorn with comfort and speed. It is now possible for the people of Gooderham to reach Peterborough in two hours and return with supplies the same day. Much credit is due Mr. Hugh Cochrane of Catchacoma for putting this upper Buckhorn road in its present respectable condition.

The Question Box

E.R. Q.—Can you tell me the history of Bowling Green, New York? Is it a fact there was once a statue of King George III on the spot?

A.—In the middle of the 17th century the triangular piece of land known as Bowling Green (New York), was a Dutch market and the scene of an annual cattle fair. Later it was leased as a bowling green to fashionable residents whose houses almost surrounded the little park. South of the green was Fort Amsterdam. Today it is like an oasis in a land shorn of its natural beauty. Bowling Green was the scene of a great demonstration against the stamp Act in 1765. Five years later there was erected in the park a leaden equestrian statue of King George III. and the grass plot was inclosed with an iron fence which had been imported from Britain at a cost of $4,000. But the statue of the British monarch did not last long. In 1776 a patriotic mob pulled down the leaden effigy and broke it into fragments. These were shipped to Connecticut, where they were converted into 42,000 bullets. However, the iron fence remained intact, except for its royal crowns, which had been broken off the posts, until about ten years ago when it was disturbed by subway excavators. Half the fence was missing several years, but the lost part finally was found in Central Park in a pile of junk and was sent back to Bowling Green.

GOD'S MINUTE.

Like as a father pitieth His children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear Him. For He knoweth our frame: He remembereth that we are dust. * * * But the mercy of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear Him.—Ps. 103:13, 14, 17.

Dear Father, Thou hast given us the great gift of a new day. May it be unto us a Father's house of love where we shall serve, not as slaves, but as freemen; not as strangers, but as friends; not as aliens, but as sons and heirs.

As children come to their mothers when wearied, or conscience-smitten, or grieved by their fellows, so may we come to Thee in any hour of need. As the confidence and love of our parents gives us strength for duty, much more may the knowledge of Thy confidence and Thy love for us enable us to bear each burden and trample each temptation under foot.

And may we have such intimate companionship this day with Thy Son, our Saviour, that truth and cleanness and gentleness and hope shall abide in us until the twilight falls, and we lie down to sleep again beneath the shadow of Thy wings. Amen.

DANIEL RUSSELL, D.D.

A Thought

EVERY DAY.

Write it on your heart that every day is the best day of the year. No man has learned anything rightly until he knows that every day is Doomsday. Today is a king in disguise. Today always looks mean to the thoughtless, in face of the uniform experience that all good and great and happy activities are made up precisely of these blank todays. Let us not be so deceived; let us unmask the king as he passes.—Emerson.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Aug. 9.—A steady market with slightly easier prices on the lower grades as the only feature was the situation yesterday. Prices remained about the same as Tuesday with tradin all. An exception was the calf market which was strong with choice calves selling at $14-$14.50 and $15 being asked for fancies.

The cattle market opened slow with trading at a minimum. Buyers were indifferent and seemed more content to sit on the fences at the Union stock yards and discuss the weather than trade. A total of 2,000 cattle remained unsold from Tuesday but if prices are reduced to a good clean-up is expected. Receipts were but 200, the best cows selling at $8-$8.50, plain at $6, and bologna bulls at $6 being the only changes over Tuesday's prices:

Hogs were steady and strong, prices ranging from $14-$14, depending on the quality.

Sheep and lambs were steady with a few slightly lower prices on lambs. The lamb market is considered strong in view of the dumping of 2,000 animals on the market over the week-end.

Receipts were as follows: Cattle 700, (2,000 remained unsold), calves 470, hogs 1,400, sheep 2,098.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Que., August 9 (Canadian Press). — With the exception of a small demand for barley and oats, the export trade in Canadian grain here yesterday was dull. In the local market there was some demand for American No. 3 commercial yellow corn and sales were made at $1.10 per bushel ex-store. The trade in Canadian Western oats was fair and prices were unchanged.

Prices for all grades of spring and winter wheat flour were well maintained under a good demand from all sources.

Extreme dullness marked the trade in all lines of millfeed, but the undertone to the market was firm. Standard grades of rolled oats were unchanged under a fair inquiry.

The demand for all grades of eggs continued good, and prices were firmly maintained at the late advance. The receipts were 899 cases.

The inquiry for butter was confined to odd lots to meet immediate wants and the undertone was inclined to be easier. The receipts wer 16 packages.

The cheese market was very quiet, with no demand over the caole and very little from local buyers. The undertone was easier and prices were reduced a fraction. The receipts were 2,761 boxes.

A moderate trade was done in imported beans and prices were unchanged.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Aug. 9. — (Canadian Press). —Facing an estimate that surplus wheat in export countries this season will total 318,000,000 bushels more than last year, wheat values collapsed yesterday. The tumble carried the wheat market 33 cents a bushel under prices of a year ago and to the lowest level since 1924.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled 1⅜c to 2⅜c net lower for the day, with corn varying from ⅛c

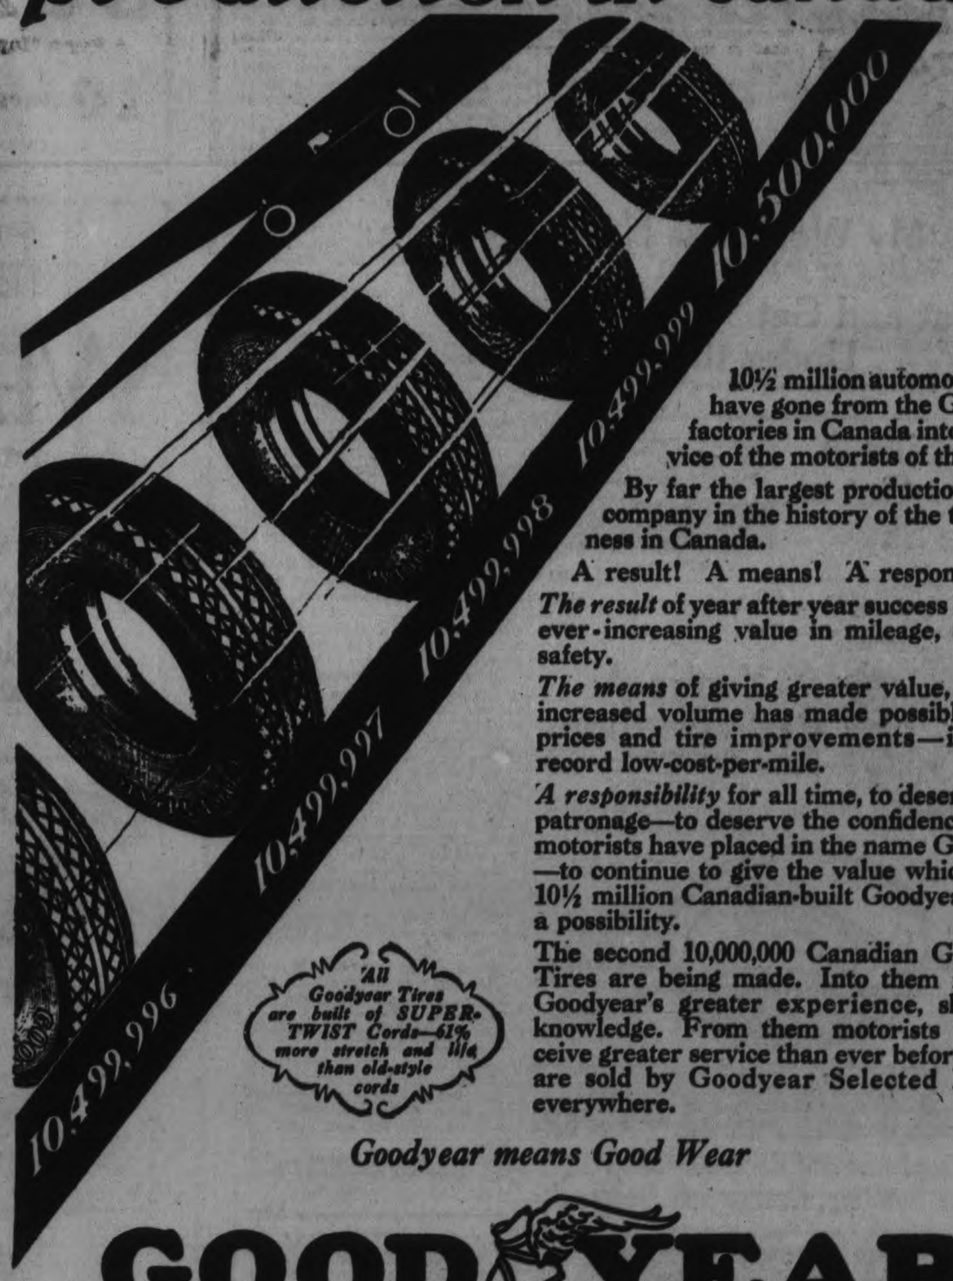
10½ MILLION
The largest total tire production in Canada



10½ million automobile tires have gone from the Goodyear factories in Canada into the service of the motorists of the world.

By far the largest production of any company in the history of the tire business in Canada.

A result! A means! A responsibility!

The result of year after year success in giving ever-increasing value in mileage, comfort, safety.

The means of giving greater value, because increased volume has made possible lower prices and tire improvements—in short, record low-cost-per-mile.

A responsibility for all time, to deserve such patronage—to deserve the confidence which motorists have placed in the name Goodyear—to continue to give the value which made 10½ million Canadian-built Goodyear Tires a possibility.

The second 10,000,000 Canadian Goodyear Tires are being made. Into them is going Goodyear's greater experience, skill and knowledge. From them motorists will receive greater service than ever before. They are sold by Goodyear Selected Dealers everywhere.

"All Goodyear Tires are built of SUPER-TWIST Cords—61% more stretch and life than old-style cords"

REPORTS TO CITY COUNCIL

Property Committee.

The Property Committee reported as follows:

The report of the insurance company on the inspection of the boiler in the City Building was left with the Chairman of this Committee to take the matter up with the City Trust with the view of having the repairs made.

Your Committee left the letter from the Local Board of Health requesting the City Council to appoint a full time Medical Officer of Health, and the letter from the Peterborough Medical Society expressing the desirability of the retaining of the present laboratory facilities to be dealt with by the City Council.

Your Committe left the matter of purchasing new furniture for the City's Clerks Ofifce and a clock for the outer office to the Chairman of the Committee with power to act.

Railways and Parks.

The Railways and Parks Committee reported and recommended as follows:

That the matter of space in James Stevenson Park for a bowling green, regarding which a letter was received from the Peterborough Bowling Club be left with the Chairman of this Committee to meet representatives of the Club and have an agreement prepared.

We recommend that the Chairman and City Engineer have a gate placed at the Monaghan Road entrance to Jackson Park in memory of Mrs. Charlotte J. Nicholls.

We recommend that the matter of a terrace around the monument in Confederation Square and changing the sidewalk as required be left with the representatives of the Council on the Memorial Committee.

The Board of Works reported and recommended as follows:

That Frank Scarrizzio who was unable to work for ten (10) days when his hand was injured by a jar while working on sewer construction, be paid his wages for the ten (10) days he was off work.

That a final notice be given to Fitzpatrick and Geraghty and E. F. Mason to remove their gasoline pumps.

That notice be given of the intention of the Council to construct a sidewalk as a local improvement on the south side of Murray Street from the Monaghan Road to the eastern limit of Lot 67 Registered Plan No. 123, under section 8 of the Local Improvement Act.

That a letter from R. C. Braund in regard to the grade and steepness of the approaches of a sidewalk be referred to the Chairman of this Board and the City Engineer to investigate and report.

Finance Committee.

The Finance Commitee reported and recommended as follows:

That the City Treasurer be authorized to purchase a Remington Typewriter at a price of $180.00 less $43 for the old machine.

That no action be taken on a letter from Peck, Kerr and McElderry in regard to interest on arrears of taxes regarding which they wrote on behalf of the St. Andrew's Church Estate.

That a copy of a commitment of Wesley George Bayliss to the Children's Aid Society be received.

AUTO RUNS 59 MILES ON GALLON OF GAS

Automobile engineers who worked for years in an effort to reduce gasoline consumption have found the solution in a marvelous invention that fits all cars. An actual test made by one of the engineers showed 59 miles on a gallon of gas. Thousands of car owners have already installed this new invention. They not only report amazing gas savings but are also surprised to find quicker pick-up, instant starting, smoother running motors and disappearance of carbon. E. Oliver, 999-2540 S. Third St., Milwaukee, Wis., for a limited time is offering a free device to those who will help introduce it. He also needs men everywhere to make over $100 weekly in their own territory taking care of local business. Write him at once for free sample and big money making offer.—Adv.

HANDLING OF EGGS ON FARMS

Quality Depends on the Way Eggs Are Handled on Farm.

BALANCED RATION.

The inferior quality of eggs and the causes of deterioration may usually be traced to someone's carelessness. It has been found that more than two-thirds of the loss of quality occurs before the eggs reach the market. More attention must be paid to the producing and handling of eggs on the farms.

To begin with, only strong, healthy stock should be kept. Hens that lay small or poorly shaped eggs should not be used as breeders because size shape and color of an egg is inheritable.

Provide Clean Quarters

The laying house should be well ventilated so the eggs will not be affected by foul air, nor chilled or overheated. The floor, dropping boards and range need to be kept clean, because hens with dirty feet are bound to soil the nests and eggs. Allow one running foot of nest space for every four to five hens. Change the nesting material frequently, for dirty eggs have the keeping qualities impaired.

The loss in quality of eggs on many farms is a direct result of improper handling. To begin with, eggs should be gathered regularly. During hot weather and when extremely cold they ought to be gathered at least twice a day. Any eggs that may be soiled should be separated from the rest and cleaned with a damp cloth. They may be sold for immediate consumption. Pick out the checks and leaks and use them at home. Hold the market eggs in a rather moist, cool, clean place. Avoid storing them where they may absorb odors.

The ideal way to market eggs is to market them every day, but that is not always convenient. It is advisable though to market them at least once a week, for the quality decreases with eggs every day they are held, especially in hot weather.

In handling eggs avoid unnecessary jarring, as the membranes are easily ruptured, which permits rapid evaporation. Not only that, but a broken egg in a case may mean the loss of an entire layer, or more.

Feed Determining Factor

To produce eggs of desirable quality, you must feed the layers a balance ration, made from clean, wholesome ingredients. There is no safer way to feed your hens than to use a good commercial mash. An egg mash put out by a reliable concern has been thoroughly tested before it is placed on the market. It is always the same, and you know it properly nourishes the hens and allows for maximum production.

Eggs from hens that are properly nourished are more nutritious and will demand a premium on markets where the consumer has been educated to their food value.

Stomach Trouble

People who have never had Stomach Trouble seem to think it nothing serious. They say, "Oh it's just a touch of Indigestion." But you can't get rid of serious Stomach Trouble that easily. It is a very, very serious condition and causes an enormous amount of suffering. Mr. Alex. Krenbrenk, of Dundurn, Sask., knows this very well. "For the past year," he writes, "my stomach has caused me a great deal of trouble. Constant indigestion made me feel as if there was a lump of lead right in the pit of my stomach, and cramps just about doubled me up. I lost weight and my nerves were all on edge. I felt tired all the time and had not the strength to do a decent day's work."

"One of my friends told me to try Tanlac and I want to say that it was just what I needed. I am now on my third bottle and feel my old healthy, vigorous self again. My appetite is fine and I digest my meals without the slightest trace of indigestion—the heavy lump and cramps are gone for good—and I sleep fine. Tanlac did me so much good that it is a pleasure to recommend it." Tanlac is Nature's roots, herbs and barks, blended into one big, bracing tonic. It costs less than 2c a dose—and your money refunded if it does not give perfect satisfaction. Get a bottle at your druggist's today.

VOLCANO RUINS ENTIRE ISLAND

Villages Burned, With 1,000 Deaths—Seaboard Is Submerged.

IN EAST INDIES.

BATAVIA, Java, Aug. 9 (Canadian Press).--According to reports transmitted by the Regent of Timor, nearly the entire Island of Paloewen, in the Dutch East Indies, has been destroyed by an eruption of Rokatinda volcano on August 4 and 5. Six villages were destroyed by fire. The death toll was believed to be nearly 1,000.

Six hundred persons were injured when hit by fragments thrown out of the crater. Further casualties were caused by submersion of the whole seaboard of the island through... an earthquake accompanying the eruption.

KEEN CONTESTS FOR ALL PRIZES

Annual Regatta at Chemong Park Proves Most Successful Event.

MANY ENTRIES.

CHEMONG, Aug. 9.—Sunny skies, warm weather and a good breeze contributed greatly to the success of the Chemong Park regatta on Wednesday afternoon which was attended by a large crowd of spectators and a goodly contingent of young people from the cottages and the surrounding resorts to enter the competition The races were good and the number of entries quite up to the standard but the west wind which was such an asset to the sailing races was a decided handicap in the paddling events. The regatta committee were good-natured enough to arrange the races to suit the wishes of the contestants and no one was crowded out of any event.

The Dinghy sailing for the Kawartha Lakes championship drew nine entries and no prettier sight can be imagined than this race. The open course gives the spectators a chance to see the entire race and with glasses the race could be accurately followed. The lead was easily between Dixon and Gliddon for first place but the former lost the advantage at the buoy just at the finish of the first gap. Gliddon got the lead and held it, winning the race easily with his team mate second. One of the boats capsized and had to be towed in but no one was in the slightest danger. The winners of Juniper events loomed large on the prize list of the Chemong regatta. For the paddling events, the FitzGeralds, Halls, and Ridpaths were all well to the fore.

The men's tandem canoe had seven entries and the men's single canoe had nine entries which made a good race with keen competition. The wind made the course difficult but no one seemed to mind.

A strong effort was made by some of the ladies for a ladies' tandem canoe race, but the judges insisted on three entries, and only five girls were available, so the matter was dropped.

The long swim was a real event, although the entry list was disappointingly small. It was won by Don Fitzgerald in 18 minutes 39 seconds, with Ross Thompson a few seconds behind. Ian Redman and Elmer Trethewey, fourteen-year-old lads, entered the race also, and finished in good time and showed a plucky spirit in competing with the older boys.

The tilting was an exciting competition in which the process of elimination weeded out the list of contestant till only two were left and the finals lasted more than half an hour, each occasionally gaining a slight advantage which, however, was too slight to count in the knock-out. Douglas Hall and Reeves handled the tilting poles, while Herb Bradburn and Mr. Dunford were the paddlers. The skill of the paddler means a great deal, and both men stuck to their post bravely. Finally as Hall was dealing what really was a knock-out to his opponent, he lost his balance and was defeated at the very moment when he had a certain victory. It was a dramatic finish to what was the most exciting event of the entire program. It recalled the time, about six years ago, when Emmett Sheehy and Harold Knapman tilted for more than an hour in the finals at the Chemong regatta.

There were no contestants in the sea flea race, and only one for the open motor boat, and when this craft (the Ventura III) started on an exhibition canter round the course it developed engine trouble and was finally towed in by an outboard motor, givng an object lesson of the old story of the lion and the mouse. The "Ventura" was a handsome boat, very high powered and was a pretty sight as it sped through the water.

The Peterborough Canoe Challenge Cup for the Dinghy race was won by Reg Dixon with Otto Gliddon second; thus the honors were divided in this class between the two popular favorites. It was decided to postpone the men's single canoe race for Chemong Park residents only till Wednesday next, when it will be held as an adult event with the children's regatta. The cup is at present the property of Alan Haiderman, and is a handsome trophy donated by J. K. Hughes.

Following the children's regatta in the evening will be a special regatta dance with favors and a first-class orchestra. The children's regatta will be held on Wednesday, August 15th.

As a climax to a pleasant afternoon C. H. Ackerman, of Peterborough, with his hydroplane 6 CATZ, circled over the lake and finally alighted on the water near the club house like a giant silver dragon fly. It was not an advertised event and came as a delightful surprise packet, a reward to contestants and spectators alike. After a few minutes' rest on the lake the plane rose and disappeared again over the tree tops, leaving behind a pleasant memory.

The prizes were presented in the pavilion in the evening at the regatta dance, which was attended by a capacity crowd. During the presentation special mention was made of the boys from Chemong Park, who have won prizes and honorable mention at the regattas at Juniper Island and Sturgeon Point, viz., Reg. Dixon, Otto Gliddon and Ross Thompson. Real sportsmen, the boys have won not only trophies but friends at these places, where they always receive a hearty welcome and an invitation to return. Mrs. Gordon Matthews presented the prizes, with J. E. Patte acting as announcer.

U. S. SCULLERS ENTER FINALS

Doubles Pair Defeats Austrians and Will Now Meet Canadians.

OLYMPIC RESULTS.

SLOTEN, Holland, Aug. 9—(Canadian Press).—Charles McIlvaine and Paul Costello, United States doubles scullers, beat the Austrians, Losert and Fiessl by two length in the semi-finals of the Olympic regatta this morning. The Americans will meet Joe Wright and Jack Guest of Canada in the finals tomorrow.

The Americans' time was seven minutes, 2.2-5 seconds. The Canadians, who had a row, covered the course in 7.23 2-5.

The only other rowing event today was won by the Swiss four oared shells with coxwain, which defeated Poland and entered the final against Italy.

Smillie Advances

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 9.—(By W. H. Ingram, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent)—Ray Smillie, Toronto, advanced another notch in the 147 pound class of the Olympic boxing tournament to-day, when he outpinted Usuda, Japan after three fiercely fought rounds.

Canada Wins Swim

Canada won the second elimination heat of the 800 metre relay in the Olympic swimming today. Great Britain was second. Both teams qualified for the finals.

CARRICK OUTPOINTED.

AMSTERDAM, August 9 (Canadian Press). — Don Carrick, Toronto, was outpointed by Avendane, Argentina, in the quarter finals of the Olympic light-heavyweight boxing division here to-day.

The Argentine won the second and third ronuds by a substantial margin after holding Carrick even in the first. The result was a surprise, as the Toronto boxer was considered one of the most promising prospects for the title in the light-heavy division.

George Kojac, United States, won the 100 metre backstroke swimming championship to-day in the Olympic water sports. Walter Lauffer, United States, was second.

Denmark won the Olympic championship race for six-metre yachts today, the Danish craft Hihi showing the way in two hours twenty-three minutes forty seconds. Norway was second, and Esthonia third.

BIRTHPLACE OF ORANGE ORDER

The celebrations of thousands of Canadian Orangemen on July 12 recalls the fact that the birthplace of the order was Dan Winters' house, "The Diamond", where the first Orange lodge proper in Ireland was organized and where the first meetings were held. This organization took place on September 22, 1795, in the County Armagh, Ireland. This picture shows the historic cottage.

ASK MINISTER TO MAKE TOUR

Deputation Will Call On Hon. Charles Dunning in September.

SUGGEST VISIT THEN.

The decision to postpone seeking an interview with the Hon. Charles A. Dunning, Minister of Railways and Canals, until after his return from the Geneva conference, some time in September, has been reached by the deputation representing the Trent Waterway Association and communities along the Trent Waterway. A conference held recently between President James Dutton of the Chamber of Commerce, J. J. Duffus, past president, F. D. Kerr, K.C., director of the Trent Waterway Association, and J. Wells Fraser, first vice-president of the same association, resulted in their deciding against present action on the part of the deputation, which was to have interviewed the Minister of Railways and Canals, relative to the completion of the Severn River division of the Trent Waterway. The minister is shortly to leave for Geneva, in company with the prime minister, and it was felt that in September, should the Hon. Mr. Dunning consent to inspect the waterway, he would have more time and would view the waterway in all the glory of early autumn.

The case for the completion of the Severn division has become much stronger this season owing to the increase in water travel and the fact that several boats have reached the marine railways in that district, either en route to, or from the Georgian Bay, and have been forced to turn back because of restrictions governing the railway that would not affect the gates which would replace it.

pool farmer does not know what price he is to receive for his wheat until this final statement is given.

Pool Prices Given.

After 7c. was deducted for handling charges the pool farmers received the following prices for top grades:

No. 1 and No. 2 Red, $1.25½.
No. 3 Red, $1.21½.
No. 4 Red, $1.19½.
No. 5 Red, $1.17½.
No. 2 Mixed Red and White, $1.23½.
No. 3 Mixed Red and White, $1.19½.
No. 4 Mixed Red and White, $1.17½.
No. 5 Mixed Red and White, $1.15½.
No. 2 Mixed Smutty, $1.16½.
No. 3 Mixed Smutty, $1.14½.
No. 4 Mixed Smutty, $1.12½.
No. 5 Mixed Smutty, $1.10½.
Tagged Wheat, $1.05.

Under the ordinary methods of marketing grain grown in the Peterborough District up to now, wheat is taken by the mill or elevator in the condition in which it comes from the threshing machine and is usually sold as "milling wheat." The 1927 crop was not up to the usual standard, containing considerable wastage and very little of it was free from smut. In order to have the wheat in condition to grade even No. 3 or 4 it had to be cleaned very thoroughly, a process which amounted to a loss of weight equivalent to about 5 cents a bushel.

It is the opinion of several men conversant with the grain business with whom your correspondent has talked that conditions in Eastern Ontario make it necessary for the farmers to understand the situation very clearly before organizing along the line of the Western Ontario Wheat Pool.

On inquiry from the local grain dealers and farmers it is found that the local price paid for mill run of 1927 crop sent to the elevators or the mill door ranged from $1.20 at the low of the season to $1.50 in the month of June.

GOLF NEWS

The golfing men of Port Hope invaded the stronghold of the Peterborough Players yesterday bringing with them 15 players. The match resulted in a win for Peterborough as the score below will indicate. The day was a most beautiful one for the contest and the Peterborough Golf Links were never in better condition. Port Hope was entertained by a supper at the Golf Links which concluded with the usual speeches of felicitation and humor and the Peterboro club will be playing the return match at Port Hope on the 29th of this month.

The Peterborough golfers will journey to Oshawa on the 15th of this month and Captain A. J. Reynolds will be very glad to hear at once from any players wishing to take in this game, which is usually the best of the season.

year," said he, "and we earnestly hope that your wisdom, gained of experience, will be available to the association and its executive during the coming years. Certainly the year 1928 will go down as one of the most successful in the history of the Association. Will you please accept this token of our appreciation?"

To Secretary Moffat—"We, as members, and as an association, have appreciated the services rendered by you and regret that you will not be continuing in office. Let us hope that we may meet on terms of friendship and understanding during the years to come."

The recipients asknowledged the gifts—pen desk sets—in short but sincere manner, each expressing pleasure at having had the opportunity to render service, and confidence in the newly elected executive. In turn, the new permanent secretary, Mr. O'Hagan and the president-elect, John Comstock voiced their common desire to enlist the support of past officers and members of the association.

A comprehensive, and entirely authoritative address on the subject of "Communicable diseases" by Dr. Gordon Jackson, Director, Communicable Diseases, Department of Health, Toronto, was an educational feature of the Wednesday afternoon session of the Funeral Directors who gathered in the conference room at 2 p.m. Organized to be of special interest to the Funeral Directors, Dr. Jackson's address touched on the various means of transportation and methods of prevention of diseases and at its conclusion, the speaker was the recipient of warm words of congratulation.

A report of the Committee re District clubs and a discussion of district organization and work preceded a discussion of the advisability of an amendment of by-laws to provide for district work on the basis of grand lodge and District lodges

PILE SUFFERERS

Can You Answer These Questions?

Do you know why ointments do not give you quick and lasting relief?

Why cutting does not remove the cause?

Do you know the cause of piles is internal? That there is a stagnation of blood in the lower bowel?

Do you know that there is an internal remedy discovered by Dr. Leonhardt and known as HEM-ROID, sold by McDermid & Jury, Bond's Drug Store and all druggists with guarantee of money back if it fails?

HEM-ROID banishes piles by removing the cause—stagnation of blood in the lower bowel. This simple home treatment has an almost unbelievable record for sure, safe and lasting relief to thousands of pile sick sufferers, and saves the needless pain and expense of an operation.

CHEESE WITHOUT PIE

Most households use cheese as a kind of condiment to add flavor to otherwise insipid dishes, or to be eaten in small quantities with crackers or pie near the end of the meal. You may have heard the saying that "A pie without cheese is like a kiss without a squeeze! Cheese need not be simply a garnishing in our diets, as it is quite a wholesome form of protein when used in the right manner.

The most easily digested cheeses are those from which the cream has been partly removed. Cottage cheese is very wholesome, and is often used by vegetarians as a substitute for meat. Cheese should always be accompanied by raw green vegetables as it is very concentrated and needs this type of food to provide the needed bulk and vitamins. Whole milk is slightly alkaline forming, but when we separate it into the curds and the whey, the curds are acid forming and the whey is alkaline forming. Since the latter is thrown away, it should be replaced by the greens.

Cheeses are manufactured in an almost endless variety of shapes, colors and flavors, each part of the world having its own particular fancy. The art of cheese making seems to be almost universal, as every race has found that milk in the form of cheese can be kept a long time and is very handy to carry in traveling. Even the Japanese, who are too crowded in their picturesque islands to raise cows, have a kind of cheese manufactured in much the regulation manner by souring soy bean milk.

All cheeses are subject ed to some type of bacterial, enzymic, or molding action. The variations in these are largely responsible for the distinctions of taste that are noticeable in the cheeses of different lands.

In some cheeses such as the Camembert, the mold is almost entirely confined to the rind, and the ripening process is caused by the absorption of the enzymes produced on the surface; in other cheeses such as the Gammelost, the fungi grow all through the cheese and actually absorb the casein to such an extent that instead of eating cheese flavored by the mold, one eats the mold flavored with cheese.

The sizes of the cheeses vary greatly, some of the smaller varieties being only a few ounces, while the larger types will even reach two hundred and twenty-five pounds. The art of cutting the larger cheeses, so that they will always present a fresh and unspoiled surface for a long time, is considered quite an accomplishment.

Next to cottage cheese, the most important is Cheddar or American cheese. Cut cheese may be protected from drying by covering the cut surface with oiled paper or a cloth wet with brine and standing in a cool place. wheat bread is quite a wholesome one being the one exception to the rule not to combine proteins and starches. As I have already stated, some raw green vegetable should be eaten at the same time. Celery, spinach and lettuce make the best combinations. Try chopped cheese as an addition to your combination salad. I am sure that you will like the flavor.

Questions and Answers.

Question: Mrs. A. asks: "Will you please print in your interesting column what will remove a mole? Also, what causes little white spots to form on my hands? Will they spread? What will cure those I now have? Are they symptoms of anything serious?"

Answer: I would advise you to consult a physician who is skilled in using the high frequency spark or the electric needle for the removal of the mole The white spots on your hands are caused by some form of acidosis by which the skin pigment is destroyed. They will not spread if you correct your diet and use other hygienic measures for improving your general health

Question: Hopeless writes: "I am a young woman 25 years of age, five feet, three inches tall, and weigh ninety-one pounds. I have tried everything on earth to put on weight. Was on a milk diet for three months and took on two pounds. I have consulted several doctors and they all claim I am perfectly well. One doctor advised me to remove my appendix and that would sharpen my appetite. I've done so, and no success. I walk from three to four miles per day, and very seldom do I feel hungry, and then, if I take a drink of water, my appetite is gone. Please advise me what to do."

Answer: You may be perfectly healthy and yet only weigh as much as you do. However, the average thin woman of your type is usually unable to put on weight because of a systemic poisoning which she gets from a sluggish colon. One of this type usually has adhesions holding these organs down. When the adhesions are broken loose by manipulative treatment the organs may be brought back to normal position through exercising. The patient will then soon begin to gain weight without any stuffing di—

CHAPTER XXXVI
JENNIFER DECIDES

Then very gently Gaunt raised her head from his shoulder and kissed her lips.

"Do you love me, Jennifer? Do you really love me?"

"With all my heart and soul."

"And yet you won't come away with me?"

She hid her eyes against him.

"I can't, I can't! Something in my heart won't let me," she whispered despairingly. "It wouldn't be right. I know it wouldn't be right."

"You did not say that, or think it, a year ago," he said, as he had said before.

"I know, but now things are different, or they seem different," she tried stumblingly to explain. "I think perhaps it's since I saw more of life, since I've known women like Dolores and Buddy and . . ."

"And Edith," he supplemented cynically.

Jennifer went on, not heeding the interruption.

"They seem to think nothing of love and marriage and faithfulness, they're just all empty words to them. They laugh at me and call me old-fashioned because I won't do as they do. Oh, it's not that I condemn them!" she broke out in distress. "Don't think that, but it's just not the way I see life, not the way I want to live. I suppose, if I were like them, I should go away with you to-night and think nothing of it. I suppose I should not even mind when you grew tired of me and left me . . ."

"I should never do that. Do you know me so little?"

She moved restlessly in his arms.

"The things I see happening in other women's lives every day might easily happen in mine."

"When I have loved you for so long? Ours is not just a passing attraction."

"I suppose everyone thinks that at the beginning," Jennifer said sadly.

She drew gently away from him and sat up.

"And so you will send me away and marry Chesney," Gaunt said. He spoke from the very depths of bitterness.

Jennifer turned her head away.

"If it will make you any happier I will not marry him," she said faintly.

He gave a sharp exclamation.

"It is only my selfishness that can ask or hope for such a thing." He took her hand and kissed it many times.

"All that is best in me wants you to be happy, but there is a devil of jealousy in my heart that craves to be told you will never belong to any man if not to me."

"I shall never love any man as I love you," Jennifer whispered, "but sometimes it's lonely, Nicholas."

He laughed mirthlessly. "My God, don't I know that?"

"We shall have to go on hoping," Jennifer said with an effort. "I don't quite know what for, but perhaps some day . . ."

"I've told myself that sort of thing every day since I married Edith and nothing has ever happened."

"Don't talk like that."

"It's true, so why shouldn't I?" he said defiantly. "I never had any affection for her, I was a fool to be driven into such a marriage. More than six years ago now, Jennifer, and I've thought of you every day and loved you always."

She had no answer to give, and presently he said with suspicion: "You tell me nothing about yourself, why you are living here, or what you have done in the last eighteen months. What has become of old Gurney, and why did you leave him?"

"I had a little money left me; an uncle who died left me some, so I gave up work for a little while and tried to enjoy myself."

His jealous eyes wandered round the room.

"It must have been a good deal of money if you can afford to live here."

Jennifer shook her head, smiling a little. "I'm afraid I'm living on capital. It's silly, I know. Mr. Gurney wanted me to invest it, but I wouldn't."

"And when it is gone?" Gaunt asked.

"I suppose I shall work again," she answered.

But there was a shivering apprehension in her mind as she thought of the future. She had spent money recklessly during the past eighteen months, and she knew that her capital must be greatly diminished.

"If you will only let me help you it will give me such great happiness!" Gaunt broke out vehemently. "Why won't you, Jennifer? Nobody has a greater right to help you than I have."

She flushed, and the quick tears sprang to her eyes. "I just couldn't, dear, that's all," she told him.

He rose to his feet angrily.

"You will not let me do anything for you. I suppose if you were dying you would not send for me, in case Mrs. Grundy should see me coming in at your door."

She tried to laugh.

"Oh, Nicholas, I am not so foolish as that."

"You are more foolish than that," he declared, "because you are throwing away happiness for us both, for the sake of a scruple."

"It is far more than a scruple," she maintained firmly, though the tears were wet on her face, "I don't believe happiness ever comes of doing—what you want me to do. I am afraid to try it, anyway."

"You mean that you don't trust me?"

She raised her sad eyes.

"Must we go all over it again? Don't let us quarrel. Let us try and be happy just for this last evening."

"You are very sure it will be the last," he said harshly.

She made no answer. In her heart she was very sure. Not again would she allow herself to suffer as he had made her suffer to-night. As soon as possible she would go away. If necessary, she would put the whole world between them.

The clock struck suddenly and she found herself mechanically counting the strokes: "Nine, ten, eleven, twelve!"

So late! She started up in agitation.

"You must go. It's past twelve o'clock."

He laughed recklessly.

"What does it matter? No one will be any the wiser if I stay till daylight."

Her face quivered.

"But you will go because I ask you to," she said.

Gaunt took her in his arms, looking into her face with passionate eyes.

"You are very cruel to me, Jennifer," he said. "You would not be so cruel if you knew the unhappy life to which you are sending me back."

She closed her eyes against the pleading of his. "And do you think mine is any happier?" she asked.

She felt his lips on hers.

"Then let us stay together. Life is so short. What difference will it make in the end? And I have been so long without you."

In her heart Jennifer said, "That is your fault," but her lips could not form the words.

She kept telling herself that in a little while he would be gone forever, and that in the years to come she must have no more bitter words with which to reproach herself or grieve over. But her own despair frightened her. With his arms still around her she could cheat herself into a sense of false security, but when he was no longer with her, how would she feel then? Every moment of every day she would long for him, for the sound of his voice and even the angry jealousy of his eyes. With all his faults he was the one man in the world for her. She set her standard by her own needs and Gaunt supplied them all.

"Can you send me away now, Jennifer?" he asked.

She nodded; she could not trust herself to speak. He kissed her again as he had never kissed her before, save in dreams.

"Come with me and I swear that I will love you faithfully to my death and after," he said against her lips.

Jennifer broke into bitter sobbing, thrusting him from her.

"Oh, go away, go away!"

She was almost beside herself with pain, and yet she knew that nothing he could say would ever break down her determination.

LONDON WEEKLY CONTINUES STORY

Truth Wonders Whether Larkin's Successor Will Inherit His Office Furniture.

LONDON, August 9. — Canadian Press Cable.—In view of the denials by the Hon. P. C. Larkin, Canadian High Commissioner in London, that he would be the next Canadian Minister in Washington in succession to the Hon. Vincent Massey, the following in to-day's issue of Truth, a weekly publication, is of interest to Canadians.

"Hon. P. C. Larkin will be much missed in London, which he left last week. He has been very popular, even for a millionaire. In that character he will be less conspicuous at Washington. I wonder whether his successor as High Commissioner will inherit his office furniture, said to be the richest in London; and his Turkish carpet, one of the finest in the world."

MANY FINE CATS FOR LOCAL SHOW

Peterborough Fanciers Have Promises of Prominent Breeders To Show Here.

Last year's Cat Show at the Made-in-Canada Exhibition was such a success and a real attraction for the big Fair that it is to be repeated and promises to greatly exceed in size and possibly quality of felines that of 1927.

Early as it may seem an energetic campaign among the Cat fanciers of Toronto, Hamilton, Buffalo, Detroit and all Ontario points has been going on for some time. Definite promises of high class exhibits have been obtained from these centers, the fact that the show is held under the auspices of the Cat Fanciers Association of America being sufficient reason for the visit of all fanciers who are able to attend.

Locally, a lively interest in high bred cats has sprung up, and many fine individuals have been imported or secured from breeders and given the care that is fitting them for show in any company. Thursday and Friday, October 18 and 19, are the days set apart for the Cat Show and as these are the two most important days of the week's exhibition, thousands of Peterborough citizens will be given an opportunity to see the cat aristocracy of the Province and nearby States. Peterborough owners of fancy cats need not fear outside competition, as there are classes for professionals, amateurs and novices, where the quality of Puss may be tried out before venturing to show against veteran exhibitors. Mrs. T. Thrush of Hamilton will act as judge.

"SALADA" Factories are famous for their spotless cleanliness—only the purest, freshest, most delicious tea obtainable is sold in "SALADA" packets. Black, Green or Mixed Blends—Four Grades—75c to $1.05 per lb.—Ask for "SALADA".

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

To-days Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE BAD CAT

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Once upon a time Mr. and Mrs. Robin built their nest so high up in a tree, and out so far on the end of a swaying branch, that when it was finished Mrs. Robin said:

"Now no cats can climb up and get my little birds when I hatch them out of the pretty blue eggs."

"True enough!" chirped Mr. Robin. "That is why I picked this tree. At the bottom grow bushes with such sharp thorns that no cat can scramble through them to reach the trunk of the tree to climb up."

"The only way for a bad cat to reach our nest will be to stand on a stepladder or climb up on something else that is high from the ground under the hanging branch on which our home is built," said Mrs. Robin. She could not chirp or sing like Mr. Robin. It is only the daddy bird which sing, you know. The mother birds are too busy hatching out the eggs and, later, too busy feeding their little ones, to learn to sing. Of course the daddy bird helps with the nestwork, but not very much. Though he is very good at pulling up worms.

Well, anyhow, Mr. and Mrs. Robin made their nest in such a way they thought no cats could ever get up to it.

The bad cat tried to get up the tree.

Soon Mrs. Robin laid four pretty blue eggs and a few weeks later four tiny birds, with very big mouths, always opening for worms, were hatched out.

Then, indeed, Mr. and Mrs. Robin were very happy and very, very busy. Still Mr. Robin found time to sing his cheer up song every morning and night when he rested from pulling worms out of the grass for his hungry little ones. And as he sang he said:

"We are so happy because no cats will get our little birds!"

Now it happened that near the robins' nest lived a bad cat. I call him a bad cat though perhaps he did not know any better. He had no home—nobody to give him warm milk or tender meat to eat, and so this cat was always hungry. He was hungry most of all for tender little birds and he meuowed and and growled, saying:

"I'm going to get those four little robins in the nest!"

But though the bad cat tried to climb the tree he could not get near enough the trunk to stick his claws in the bark and scramble up, because of the thorn bushes at the bottom. Several times the bad cat tried to get up the tree but each time the thorn bushes pricked him and with a yowl he slunk away.

"Ha! It is well we built our nest here," said Mr. Robin.

The bad cat tried to jump up from the ground to reach the nest, but he wasn't tall enough and could not jump high enough. But once when Uncle Wiggily stopped his automobile sedan under the nest the bad cat purred:

"Ha! Now I see a way to get up to that nest and eat the little birds. If I can climb up on top of Uncle Wiggily's auto when he parks it under the robins' tree, I will be high enough so that I can easily stand on my hind legs and claw out the little birds."

Watching his chance, the bad cat, one day, saw Uncle Wiggily's car stop beneath the tree so the top of it was close to the nest. Then the bad cat climbed up on the mudguard and from there he maaaged to claw his way to the roof of the auto, and now he was close under the nest. It was as if he had used a stepladder to get to it.

But just as the bad cat was going to reach up and claw out the little robins who could not yet fly,all at once the father and mother birds came back with their beaks full of worms. They saw the danger and, dropping their worms, the robins cried:

"Help! Help! Yip! Yip! Yip! Oh, will somebody drive away the bad cat!" The robins flew at the cat, but he was not afraid of them and in another moment would have had the little birds.

But Uncle Wiggily heard the yipping. Hopping out of his bungalow he saw the cat on top of his auto, close to the hanging nest. In an instant the rabbit gentleman jumped into his car, started it moving and so carried the cat past.

"Mew!" howled the bad cat.

"I am sorry to spoil your meal, but you can't have the little robins," said the bunny gentleman. "I will give you some beefsteak."

Which he did after the cat, who decided to turn good instead of being bad, had jumped down off the top of the auto. So the little robins were saved and that night Mr. Robin sang a song for the bunny rabbit.

LYRICS OF LIFE

AFTER DARK

When dark is getting really dark,
Too dark to call it day,
When people light the cars they park,
Or put their cars away,
The mothers go around the house
And pull the curtains down,
Yours in your house, ours in our house,
And ev'ry house in town.

Then one by one the windows light,
You only see the shade,
And yet you know the rooms are bright
And all the suppers made
And children sing around the house
Because their daddy's there,
Yours in your house, ours in our house,
And daddies ev'rywhere.

Of course I like the skies of blue,
But when the shadows fall
I like it best, I really do,
The nicest time of all.
For there we are in our own house,
On rainy nights like these,
You in your house we in our house,
As comfy as you please!

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

FRIDAY, AUGUST 10, 1928.

(Copyright, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Good and evil planetary influences are read in the horoscope for this day by astrologers who find that benefic aspects are slightly dominant.

It is a day when the mind should be clear and the perceptions acute. It should be a favorable time for making important decisions.

One of the drawbacks to the sharpened wits of this rule of the stars is likely to be a tendency to recognize faults and weaknesses among associates or among members of one's family.

There is a promising sign for aviation which is to attain new popularity before winter adds to the difficulties of air flights.

This is a mildly auspicious day for business and brokers should be especially careful.

There is a sign supposed to awaken the gambling instinct in women as well as men. Games of chance will be popular and marriage will be among them.

Again a sinister aspect appears to govern agriculturists, but it may be merely a warning against severe autumn storms.

Real estate is something to be bought, but not as a speculative venture, while this configuration prevails.

A malefic aspect seems to govern certain drugs and to affect cosmetics. Physicians will prescribe little medicine and women will use less paint, the seers foretell.

Inclination to destroy old traditions will be rampant at this time when workers and the people who have known poverty will benefit greatly.

Industry may be affected by unexpected demands for products that bring added prosperity.

Warning is given that there may be increase of heart trouble, fevers and other maladies with the coming of autumn.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have a year of prosperity which they hinder by anxiety and fear. These subjects of Leo should remember that they have the Sun for their governing planet.

Children born on this day will probably have successful careers, but they will do best alone and should avoid partnerships. They may be intense in nature and inclined to have too many love affairs in their lives.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY TROUBLE COMES IN BUNCHES

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

Trouble always comes in bunches. "It never rains but it pours," and similar expressions are based on the common observation that when a man makes a mistake it is likely to be followed by many more.

At any aviation camp they will tell you that if one man has an accident it is likely to be followed by a bunch of accidents. It seems to effect the nerves of the whole camp. The man expects trouble and sure enough it is forthcoming. Trouble never disappoints one who is looking for her.

No doubt the loss of confidence and the general attitude of expectancy helps to bring about the disastrous result. All this is based on the fundamental psychological law that an idea, a strong fear or expectancy materially effect the muscles and nerves despite every conscious effort you might make to the contrary.

Trouble comes in bunches because we sometimes magnify the little things into troubles to get the thrill of self pity. The negro spiritualist song expresses it in the phrase "Nobody knows de troubles I've seen." There is a tendency to magnify our ill luck in order to excuse failure and incompetency and to get the compensation of self pity.

Troubles come in bunches because after a severe jolt one is less able to carry on as normal. He falls below par mentally, physically and emotionally. No one knows this any better than a professional boxer. After stopping a hard punch with his chin he gets wabbly and trouble piles up fast not through any mysterious bunching of trouble, but because he is weakened by the hard blow and is less able to carry on.

The chief reason why trouble seems to come in bunches is that the first blow weakens the man so that he falls an easy prey to whatever may come his way.

decline to ¼c advance. Oats, ¼c to 1c off, and provisions unchanged to 25c down.

Likelihood of a bearish government crop report to-day as to domestic wheat added to the effect of extremely optimistic wheat crop advices from Canada. Authoritative advices were at hand that the Canadian crop is now in a condition well above the average of the last five years. Moreover the area planted to wheat this year in the Canadian prairie provinces is figured as 23,567,900 acres, showing an increase of 9.95 percent over 1927 and establishing a new record. On top of this came a statement from a British industry that export countries will probably have a surplus stock of 1,106,000,000 bushels, whereas world import requirements are placed at only 27,000,000 bushels more than last year.

Demoralized wheat market conditions at Liverpool yesterday tended further to bring about general selling here, especially as word was received that stocks of wheat at Liverpool are larger than a year ago and that arrivals of wheat in European continental countries are very large. Under such circumstances, lowest prices of the day in Chicago were made shortly before the close, but buying to collect a profit for previous sellers rallied the market somewhat in the dealings at the finish.

Fine weather for corn growth weakened the price of new crop deliveries of corn, December and March reaching the lowest level yet this season. September delivery of corn, however, and the cash corn market were firm. There were intimations of further export business in new crop corn, November, December and January shipment. Receipts of corn in Chicago today were only 57 cars.

Deliveries of oats sold yesterday at a new point for the season, largely as a result of the bearish action of other grain.

Provisions were easier, paralleling the course of hog values. Bulges in the cotton market had little effect.

BUTTER AND EGGS

TORONTO, Aug. 9.—A slightly firmer feeling featured trading in the butter division of the local wholesale product market yesterday. While there were no price changes announced at the close of the trading session, some brokers were asking as high as 39 cents a pound for fancy lots, or ¾ of a cent above the ruling quotation. No sales were reported at this figure, however.

Canadian egg markets are firm and some advance in prices has been reported from different centres. American markets are unchanged. This egg market is unchanged to-day. Dealers are buying from country shippers at extras, 37-38c; firsts, 35c; seconds, 27 to 28c, delivered. B.C. eggs are offering at, extras, 36, firsts, 34c, f.o.b.

Some receipts of American eggs are reported locally and a good demand for them is in evidence. Dealers point out that it is profitable to ship eggs from the United States to Canada on the present rising market. A fair supply is reported, but a shortage is predicted before the end of the present week.

WEDDING BELLS

LUCAS—PERDUE.

(Examiner Correspondence)

DOWNEYVILLE August 9—A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock at St. Luke's Church, when Ruby Perdue, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Perdue, was united in marriage to Leslie Lucas, son of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Lucas.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Galvin. Miss Loretta Harrington played the wedding march and at the offertory, Mrs. Patrick Perdue, cousin of the bride, sang "Rosewig's Ave Maria."

The bride wore a costume of biege with large hat and shoes and hose to match and was assisted by her niece. Miss Mabel Perdue, of Rochester, N.Y.

Mr. James Lucas assisted his brother as best man.

Immediately following the ceremony the bridal party motored to Lindsay where dinner was served at the Benson House, and afterwards they left for Toronto where they will spend a brief honeymoon and will afterwards reside in Detroit, Michigan.

OBITUARY

MICHAEL GEARY.

The death occurred in Ennismore this morning of Michael Geary. Mr. Geary has not been in the best of health for some time, but retired last night feeling about as usual. Death came in the early hours of the morning quite unexpectedly. He leaves to mourn his loss a sorrowing wife and several brothers and sisters. Funeral announcement will be made later.

MRS. GILLESPIE.

A large gathering attended the funeral of the late Mrs. Gillespie of Keene, who passed away on Wednesday, August 1 at the home of her brother in South Monaghan. The service was held at the Presbyterian church in Keene and was conducted by the Rev. John Riddle of Centerville. The chief mourners were her brother, George Wood, and her sister, Mrs. Robert Neims; also her neices, Mrs. Alex Stewart, Mrs. William Davidson, Mrs. N. Brakenridge, Mrs. D. Brakenridge, Mrs. Wesley Manley.

The pall-bearers were: George A. Gillespie, Alex. Huston, Harry Stewart, William Renwick, William Stewart, Harry Short. Interment took place in Keene Cemetery.

Canada has, it is estimated, 100,000 square miles of coal-bearing lands. year, will last for 5,000 years.

GERALD POTTS WINS MARATHON

Mrs. J. Cook and Agnes Wight.

Girls' swimming race — Laura Wight and Agnes Wight tied for first.

Mixed canoe race — Agnes Wight and Jack Griffin; Marguerite Garneau and Otter Scriver.

Outboard motor race—Mr. Davis with Puff Ball Inn boat. High powered boat disqualified for not following the course. Henry Pollock, Trent River, second.

Men's double canoe race—N. Garneau and Thos. Wight; Otter Scriver and a friend, second.

Ladies' swimming race—Alice Scully; Agnes Wight. (100 yards).

Fancy diving — Francis Ruttan, Morley Horsman.

Men's long dive— William Sedgewick, Clifford McInroy.

Ladies' long dive — Alice Scully wins after third attempt, with Agnes Wight a close second.

A novel event was the race between the horse and the bull. The bull won with its owner coming ashore on its back. This was an easy victory for the bull, because the horse was of the land variety and not a seahorse. Nor did it seem to be troubled with sea fleas. It refused absolutely to have anything to do with the event. There was some doubt among certain parties directly concerned as to the exact definition of horse sense.

There was no inboard motor boat race and the two sea fleas filled in the gap by staging an impromptu event, a one mile race for the prize for the scheduled event.

The ladies' one mile swim was the last event of the day and ended with two sisters finishing in first place. They were Agnes Wight and her sister Laura.

The judges for the sports were D. Walterhouse Toronto; H. F. MacNicol, Havelock, and George VanVolkenburg, Seymour West. Harold B. Wood was the official announcer and kept the big megaphone warm all afternoon. W. C. Inkster started the events without any trouble and kept the program running with a minimum of delay. The gate receipts will be in the neighborhood of three hundred dollars. This is considered the largest funds yet received at a regatta for the price of admission charged.

Just as the last event was finishing, there came sailing serenely down the ship canal a luxuriously appointed steam yacht of generous and beautiful proportions. It was the Nereid of New York State and her passing marked the end of a practically perfect afternoon of aquatic sport.

Late in the afternoon there was dancing in the pavilion on the south side of the river and in the evening both pavilions were opened, one for round dancing and the other for the old time squares. Old and young intermingled to dance the closing hours of a perfect day at one of the leading resorts of the district. The prizes for the various events and the handsome silver trophy for the marathon swim were presented at the pavilion on the north side of the river during an intermission in the dancing.

Clearing Elevators

Mr. Boyd states that old stocks in terminal elevators were being moved out with every speed to make way for the new crop. There are left at the lake-head bins approximately 23,000,000 bushels, while interior elevators have disposed of practically their entire stocks he said.

While Mr. Boyd was unwilling to make any estimate of the new crop he admitted it would not surprise him if it exceeded 500,000,000 bushels.

now and the prices are very high. They are paying from $70 to $100 for two-year-olds and from $30 to $50 for year-olds, which are the highest prices paid since the war. Hogs are also coming up. Little pigs are selling for $12 a pair.

SPRING WHEAT GOOD.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

DOURO, August 9. — Owing to the continuous rainfall the farmers are somewhat delayed in the harvest, and the fall wheat which was a very good crop in places, is in a bad condition at present. The spring crop is still growing and promised to be an abundant harvest. It has not as yet been hurt by the heavy rain. Early potatoes and vegetables are also reported to be an excellent crop.

Canada has, it is estimated, a million square miles of standing timber.

No Aches at 87!

"I am in my 87th year, and am in excellent health, and it is due to the daily use of your Kruschen Salts, which I take every morning directly I get up. I have never an ache or pain. My friends are astonished when I tell them my age, and I do not forget to assure them that it is the daily use of your Kruschen Salts that have brought it about. With best wishes." L. G. G.

Original letter on file for inspection.

What a lesson there for the younger folk! What Kruschen can do for a man of advanced age it can do ten times as surely for you. Start the "daily dimeful" to-morrow, and prove it for yourself.

Kruschen Salts is obtainable at drug and department stores in Canada at 75c. a bottle. A bottle contains enough to last for 4 or 5 months—good health for half-a-cent a day.

COMPLAIN ABOUT PARKING.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 9.—At the regular meeting of the Seymour township council on Tuesday afternoon there were several matters of importance discussed and dealt with. The tax rate for the coming year was struck with the following items, County rate 15.5 mills T;ownship rate 13 mills; General school rate 7 mills; High School debenture rate 4.8 mills; Maintenance rate 2.8 mills and the various rates required by the trustee boards within the township.

Two residents of Trent River approached the council to complain that cars were being parked at Trent River in such a manner that they could neither get in to nor leave their own property. The council suggested that signs be placed ordering no parking and that if these failed, the police courts might be tried. John Ingram asked for information on the weed act and its enforcement and the clerk was instructed to notify the ratepayers through the medium of the Campbellford press. The by-law setting the tax rate was presented by Councillor Allan.

In reply to a letter from Sir Henry Drayton, the Clerk was instructed to forward a copy of the by-law passed by the council February 6, 1928. This was with reference to fines not being payable to the township treasury unless there had been an officer appointed under the L.C.A. After brief consideration permission was granted the Game Protection Club on Trent River to open the pavillion there provided the claim by the amusement tax officer was settled.

There being no further business, the following accounts were ordered paid: Sawyer-Massey, Power Maintainer, $2700.40; D. H. Brown, $12.50; Ernest Haig, $60.00; Harry Grills, $7.80; Hector Arnold, $5.00; George Atwell, $2.50; Ally Parry, $12.85; Mrs. Lasher, $2.50; Peter Stephens, $2.00; Imperial Oil Co., $50.30; Clem. Bayes, $11.40; Peddlar People, $80.39; H. Seaborn, $39.75; E. Brunton, $117.00; A. Brunton, $107.00; H. Saunders, $100.30; D. J. Petherick, $109.25; Alex. Green, $107.00; Jos. O'Brien $11.25; John Dorie, $109.25; John Grills, $385.65; John Conley, $46.75; Hewson Gibson, $46.00; H. Rutherford, $45.15; Wm. Woodbeck, $23.05; Melleville, $105.20; Jas. Greenfield, $44.25; Alex Tinney, $46.25; Harold Simpson, $37.50; Angus Brunton, $2.50; Ernest Haig, $15.75; Alfred Barnum, $2.50; Victor Irwin, $7.20; W. T. Allan, $30.00.

Mr. Wilmot Kingston, of Bronte, Halton County, is visiting his father, Mr. Paul Kingston, and other relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. George Luiry spent Monday with friends in Campbellford.

Mrs. James Sarles returned on Monday from Detroit after a three weeks' visit in that city.

DRAIN WORK NEAR FINISH

owing to weather conditions. It will probably be quite late in the fall before the paving, which is to extend the whole length of King, Tupper and Regent streets, is completed.

Any formal opening will probably be deferred until next year, when the municipality celebrates its fiftieth year year since incorporation. Richard Howden, a well-known resident here for many years, was the first reeve.

Civic Fathers

The civic fathers, since incorporation, include: Richard Howden, 1880-81; William Bowden, 1881-82; Alex. Ferguson, 1883-1896; W. S. Pickup, 1897-98; Squire Russell (reeve for 3 months in 1902; resigned on account of illness); W. S. Given, 1902-1909; J. C. Kells, 1910-1913; R. J. Doak, 1914-1917; G. E. Burnham, 1918-1919; W. T. Wood, 1920-1928.

Crops Damaged

Reports show serious damage to crops in this section, owing to weather conditions, several fields of hay having been out so long the grain will not be worth the drawing in. Burning the field over has been resorted to in some instances. Alsike, particularly, is a heavy loss to farmers who grow it extensively; from five to eight hundred dollars is the estimate placed on the loss sustained by land owners in this district.

Fall wheat is reported as sprouting in many cases; and those who have early peas and barley cut, and have been obliged to leave them in the fields for a week, ten days, or even two weeks past, report such grains as practically a total loss this season.

There is a danger of rot among the potatoes, and a strong recommendation is advanced to have the early variety dug as soon as possible to avoid loss financially, and from the home consumption viewpoint as well.

Fruit-growers have lost many quarts of berries, currants, and cherries, because of the wet weather, the ground being red with the quantity washed off, when over-ripe, by the continued and heavy rains. One man mentions two hundred boxes of berries as the estimate placed upon his loss, and others are in proportion according to the amount of land given over to the cultivation of small fruits.

W. S. MEETS AT OMEMEE

Members of Trinity United Church Society Hold Regular Meeting.

WORK DESCRIBED

(Examiner Correspondence.)

Omemee, Aug. 9.—The Missionary Society of Trinity United Church met in the Sunday school room on Thursday afternoon for their regular meeting. There was a splendid attendance present. Mrs. H. Lamb, the first vice-president, presided. Miss Edna Morcombe read the Scripture lesson from Matthew XX, after which the reports of the secretary and treasurer were heard, and correspondence read.

Mrs. S. D. Vaughan and Mrs. G. Haygarth were appointed a program committee for the next three months, and Mrs. J. Bushnell consented to be responsible for the next missionary topic in Sunday school. It was decided to hold a sewing meeting at the parsonage on Tuesday afternoon, August 14th, in preparation for the annual bale. Committees were appointed to purchase material required.

Following a hymn, prayer was offered by Mrs. S. D. Vaughan. The devotional leaflet, entitled "Jesus' Standard of Greatness," was read by Miss Lillian Race, followed by a pleasing piano solo by Miss Jane Earle.

Leaflets on "Missionary Work and Its Workers" were read by Mrs. R. H. Williamson, Mrs. C. Rutherford, Mrs. I. H. Fee, Mrs. C. Elliott, Mrs. J. Bushnell, Misses Madeline Gray and Elsie Day.

Mrs. R. Poast closed the meeting with prayer. Refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. B. Pogue, Mrs. I. H. Fee, and Mrs. Robert Wilson.

45 MILL RATE SET AT STIRLING

Council Forced To Put Up Rate Four Mills To Meet Heavy Demands.

HALL NEARLY PAID FOR.

Stirling, Aug. 9.—The village council held the most important meeting of the year on Monday evening at which they levied the rate of taxation for 1928. The total assessment, including real property and business tax, is $ 447,130.-89, and after due consideration it was decided the rate should be 45 mills on the dollar, divided as follows:

County rate	12. mills
Town debenture rate	7.40 "
School debenture rate	3.55 "
High and public schools trustee rate	14.90 "
Electric light debenture rate	1.80 "
Town rate	4.35 "
Library	1.00 "
Total	45.00 mills

This is four mills in excess of 1928, due to the demand for the county and school rates being that much greater than last year. The taxes are to be collected in two instalments, the first due and payable on or before September 15th, 1928, and the second on or before December 15th, 1928. In the discussion it was brought out that the new community building had cost $29,-685.15 to date, of which $2,461.63 was still unpaid, but provided for. Good progress is being made in the work on the street pavement. Forms are being laid for the curbing and gutters. In the maintenance of the highway between here and Belleville and towards Marmora, those in charge are doing their work well, as these roads are in a better condition than for some time past.

Parking space for the motor-cars will have to be provided outside the town on Saturday nights, if the number continues to increase, as was evident last Saturday night, a record crowd having gathered here with their almost innumerable motors.

The prize-lists for Stirling Fair are printed and will be mailed this week to all the members and others who wish a copy. Write the secretary for one.

The electric storm on Saturday afternoon was somewhat severe near Anson station. Albert Dunkley's house was struck by lightning, the telephone being torn from the wall; and just across the road, at Mr. Rowe's, an apparent ball of fire passed through their house, but did no damage.

A return game will be played in the local diamond next Saturday evening.

"Its Better!" Says a George Street woman

"My grocer praised Rinso, so I thought I'd try a package and see if it was as good as he said. It's better! Rinso makes such rich, safe suds that when I take the clothes out of the washer they're whiter and newer-looking than ever. Even the most soiled pieces become spotless with only a tiny bit of rubbing. No wonder I have the clothes on the line so early now. Rinso is great for cleaning dishes, floors and sinks, too! No wonder I'm getting all my friends to use it!"

Mrs. ——
George Street, Peterborough.

Science gives you a whiter wash—and saves you hours of hard work as well

WHEN Science said, "Here, in Rinso, is a way to make clothes white with no boiling and little or no rubbing," women were skeptical. It seemed too good to be true. But once they tried Rinso they joyfully agreed that science was right. Rinso brought them a glad freedom from wash day toiling and and gave them clean, white, fragrantly-fresh clothes such as every woman loves.

Rinso makes rich suds which soak out the dirt and grime. No boiling, just a gentle rub here and there and clothes are whiter than scrubbing can make them. Hours are saved, clothes last longer, work is made lighter.

Science is waiting in every package of Rinso to give you the surest wash day help the world has ever known.

Evening Examiner Fashion

A Modish New Frock

Charmingly graceful is this attractive one-piece frock suitable for afternoon or evening wear. In View A contrasting material is effectively used for the front and back jabots, insets on the long sleeves, and the shirred tunic at each side which achieves the modish uneven hemline by extending below the edge of the skirt in front. In View B the frock is fashioned of one material and the sleeves are omitted. The neck and armholes are bound and a wide crushed belt fastens at the side. No. 1631 is for Misses and Small Women, and is in sizes 16, 18 and 20 years. Size 18 (36 bust) requires 3¼ yards 39-inch, or 2 yards 54-inch plain material, and 2⅝ yards 39-inch, or 1½ yards 54-inch contrasting. View B requires 5⅛ yards 39-inch, or 2¾ yards 54-inch material.

Every woman's desire is to achieve that smart different appearance which draws favorable comment from the observing public. The designs illustrated in our new Fashion Book are originated in the heart of the style centers and will help you to acquire that much desired air of individuality. Price of the book 10 cents the copy.

Parisian girls are now wearing their names on their knees. The names are embroidered in colors on the flesh-colored stockings, and, with skirts at their present length, leap to the eye when the wearer sits down.

The reason why batters should be well beaten and left to stand some time before eggs are added is that the grains of flour may have room and time to swell.

A SIGN THAT FAILED.

By Louis Raybold.

Brent Davis stood on the curb, hands in his pockets, eyes lifted to the sign suspended above the plate glass windows and narrow entrance below.

DAVIS RADIO STORE
Radios Supplies

Looked pretty good to him and represented every cent he had been able to lay his hands on even to the nest egg that had lain untouched so long waiting for Patty Winslow to say "yes." The opportunity to buy out a bankrupt stock had been too good to miss and now Brent felt that his feet were squarely planted on the high road to success.

There was no other radio store for blocks around. There was—

His eyes swung from the glittering sign to a vacant building three doors above. He whistled softly.

Backed up against the sidwealk was a truck from which two men were laying a plank to the doorsill preparatory to unloading whatever the truck contained.

Idly Brent watched them. Then his whole countenance changed. They were taking in radios! And boxes that to his accustomed eye unmistakably contained batteries and other radio equipment.

Of all rotten luck! A competitor on the very day he had opened up business. If that wasn't a bad sign he didn't know an inauspicious omen when he saw one. With bitterness in his heart, he flung one last look at the sign which a moment before had given him such pleasure. Then, striding into his store, he slammed shut the door.

He and Patty threshed the matter out that night, both agreeing that only by excelling in advertising, salesmanship and window display could he hope to win out.

"It looks," said Patty thoughtfully, "as if one of you would have to go to the wall. It will be a case of the better man winning."

"Don't forget old Lady Luck!" advised Brent gloomily. "She has a way of interfering with men's best laid schemes."

Unfortunately, Patty, although all sweet sympathy for Brent in his business perplexities, shied away like a startled faun at any approach on Brent's part to sentiment and, at the close of the evening, Brent went home laboring under the impression that she was waiting to see how his venture turned out before committing herself.

And for several weeks it really looked as if failure were to be his portion. Customers dribbled in even as they did three doors above but so far from bringing him any return on his investment they barely managed to pay his running expenses. How his rival was prospering he had no means of knowing but Brent fancied the other's experience tallied with his own.

He had sought no meeting with him and it was only a very narrowly averted tragedy that finally brought about the contact.

Standing idly in his doorway waiting for a trade which did not materialize. Brent had heard a scream and had dashed out of the store in time to see a huge van stop short with a hideous squeal of brakes. Then, out of a knot of people, gathered in an infinitely brief space of time, stepped a young fellow with a small, blue-rompered bundle in his arms.

The man was deathly white, but the bundle stirred and lifted a golden head.

"Daddy, did you get my ball?"

In a few minutes, after the crowd had scattered, he told Brent about it shakily. "Out of my sight a second—if the truck had come an inch further! You see, I've got her down here at the store to keep an eye on her while my wife is at the hospital. If anything had happened to her—"

A nice young fellow, this rival of his. Brent found himself thinking how much worse it would be if he were running a losing business with Patty sick and a small Patty to care for.

Right then and there Brent made a decision that was influenced partly by his own good sense and partly by a wish to do another fellow harder pressed than he a decent turn. There was little doubt but what the neighborhood would support one radio store. He would sell out at once before his liabilities increased and let the man with a family have his chance.

Hardest of all was telling Patty. Would it forever ruin his hopes of marrying her?

While he told her that evening, he could get no clue from the expression of her face. When he had finished, he looked at her sadly. "I shall never ask you to marry me now," he declared, "until I have made good."

And then he got the surprise of his life for Patty, who was a slender little thing, ran over and got into his lap. "You won't have to, darling," she said with her arms about his neck. "Now is the time you need me and I never loved you more!"

But later she became serious. "I don't suppose," she said slowly, "that you and this other person could make a go of it together, pooling your your resources and having a common overhead?"

Brent regarded her for a moment without speaking. Then, "Why, Patty," he said, "that's not such a bad idea. I hadn't thought—by jiminy!"

And that is how that very successful firm got its start whose sign you can read any day above their store.

START SALT MEAT IN COLD WATER

Salt meat should be put into cold water, while fresh meat should be put into boiling water to cook. One exception, however, is when making soup. Then the fresh meats should be put into cold water and brought very slowly to a boil. Allow 20 minutes for boiling each pound of fresh meat and 30 minutes for each pound of salt.

Butter that is too hard to spread can be softened by turning a heated bowl or pan upside down over the butter dish for a few minutes.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

I WAS READING the other day in a country magazine a letter which a country housewife has written about city people visiting their country cousins on Sunday. Just landing in, without a word of warning. She started off by telling of the very busy season of the year and everyone being dead tired on Sunday, and had just finished lunch when in comes a car-load of eleven persons from the city.

• • • • • •

Because of the extreme heat, no baking had been done on Saturday, and consequently it was a rather embarrassing situation for the hostess. Her one complaint was, "If they had only let me know."

• • • • • • •

I wonder how often this sort of thing occurs around Peterborough. Not so often, I think, as in former years, for now we find ourselves packing our lunch and hiking off to some new-found spot by the lake-shore or river. It is more interesting, isn't it, to go exploring, finding new spots in which to spend the day?

• • • • • • •

Every Sunday morning suggestions fly around as to where we shall spend the day. But even if we decide to spend the day with country friends, don't you think that our visit would be made more welcome if we telephoned them to tell them of our intentions? After all, they are the main people in the show anyway, aren't they? They say they wouldn't hurt our feelings for the world, yet deep down in their hearts I sometimes think that they feel like giving us one lively kick, or locking the door in our faces.

• • • • • • •

We can't always feast off our friends, so wouldn't it be more thoughtful of us, and I am sure our hostess would appreciate our thoughtfulness greatly, if we were to take along a lunch basket, too. It certainly isn't any fun for a tired housewife to see a car-load arriving and raking her brain trying to plain the meal for the day. We must remember that farm girls and women have feelings as well as we, and we certainly wouldn't like it very well if some dozen or so persons landed in on us for a meal without warning. I think we might be even worse off than our country folk, for we know their pantries are usually well-filled in comparison to some of ours where we run out or telephone for sufficient foodstuffs to do a meal.

• • • • • • •

This lady in mention went on to say that she would like to say to some of the city folk who were planning to visit in the country on Sunday to see what could be done about making arrangements early in the week—the earlier the better—and give the hard-working farmer's wife a chance to get her breath before plunging into the task of entertaining and feeding you. "We are delighted, too," she says, "to have our friends from the city, but a little thoughtfulness in the matter by them would greatly relieve the embarrassment of the housewife in the busiest time of the year—the summer."

Peterborough is certainly away ahead of Paris in the way of quilted handbags. Just yesterday, I was reading that Paris was announcing the arrival of a new quilted handbag. But surely I've noticed them in Peterborough for quite a long time. They are really quilted, too, and one was made of patchwork, just small pieces joined like the old-fashioned quilts, worked in colored thread and covered with a fine gold net. The other one was of black satin, finely quilted with black thread. Both of these were on attractive silver frames with a chain or cloth handle.

Little sun togs have been invented which tiny tots may wear in the backyard at play or as bathing suits. They are not much more than very short athletic "trunks," plus a bib in front of very porous material and straps across the back, as on overalls. Surely nothing more suitable could be made to expose every possible inch of the body to the violet ray, and yet it covers all that it is necessary to cover

From the drapery shop we learn that a popular form of window shade is made from glazed chintz. It can be bought by the yard and made by the housewife herself. The better qualities are sunfast and can be taken down and washed and starched stiff enough to roll well. Glazed chintz can be washed off like oilcloth.

Instead of tapestry for walls some ingenious women are painting scenes on velvets. White paint on black velvets makes a rich hanging. The outline of a bird, of a head of a woman or even a scene are used as designs. The deep pile of the velvet gives a very soft and rich appearance to the painting. These hangings are stretched on walls just as tapestries are.

Just a Joke

WORTH WHILE

A shy young man had been calling on a certain young maiden for some months, but as he was bashful, his suit progressed slowly. He was earnest and eligible; all he wanted was a start.

Finally the girl decided to help things along a bit, and pointing to a gorgeous bunch of violets in the young man's hand, she said:

"Oh, Oliver, I'd give any man a kiss for those."

The exchange was made, and suddenly Oliver seized his hat and made a wild dash towards the door.

"Where are you going?" asked the astonished girl.

"The florist's," came the delighted response, as the young man disappeared

The Art of Attraction

No. 17.

A lady who writes often for the Saturday Evening Post had a very likeable little story recently which revealed two secrets in feminine ammunition. One was the ability to laugh and frown. The idea was to be able to smile at most times, but to be able also to have a very engaging frown and an atmosphere of potential anger that would incline a man to do his utmost to ward off the approaching smtor. For the friend or business associate, writes this person, you utilize the level glance directed to the eyebrows of your masculine companion. For the flirt, there is the indirect, coquettish glance from beneath lowered lids that quickly rise and fall. And then there is the look of the infatuated maiden who is compelled by superior magnetism to reveal her inner soul. "But this is only for engaged couples," remarks the careful narrator.

Lumps of camphor placed about the haunts of mice is another effective method of keeping them away. Pieces of gum camphor laid near books on the shelves will protect them from mice. Fill holes that are suspicious of rats and mice with putty mixed with mustard and broken glass.

TRAVEL-LOG.

FOREIGN LANGUAGE HORSES

I sometimes wonder in Norway whether the horses which pull the little stolkjarre up and down the many hills about the fjords, understand foreign languages. I had been sitting outside the hotel, smoking my pipe and musing on the beauty of the fjord stretched out lazily below me, when the little carriage drove up with my baggage, and I clambered up in front, and in a few moments we came to a hill. Now in Norway, when a long stretch of up grade has to be climbed, the tradition of the ages, never to be violated, is that the passenger get out and walk, and if he is generous hearted also push. In the more frequented regions there is often a sign post at the foot of the hill, on which in three or four languages, passengers are so directed to spare the tough little animals. But the queer thing is that, when the horse gets to one of these signs, he turns his head and looks at it, as if he were reading it and automatically stops and no amount of persuasion can urge him forward. I wonder what would happen if some facetious tourist were to change the languages on the sign to some lingo that a Norwegian horse had never learned?

Hastings Win Fourth Game Of Play-Offs

LOCKIES BREAK IN THE 5TH TO LOSE 9-1 COUNT

Allow in Eight Runs in Latter Part of Game to Lose Decision.

TEAMS EVENLY MATCHED

Deciding Game of Series Will Be Played on Saturday Afternoon.

The Hastings baseball team advanced a step nearer to the championship of the county section of the East Peterborough League on Wednesday when they took the fourth game of the five game series from Lockworks, of Peterborough by a 9-1 count, while playing on their home grounds before a red hot crowd of boosting fans. The game, a seven-innings fixture, started at 5 o'clock in the afternoon and for a while looked like another tie struggle, with both teams clinging to and trying to add to their single counters. The break came in the fifth when, of seven Hastings batters, four reached first on three hits and an error, three runs being scored. The sixth was a repetition of the fifth, only more so, for the entire home team batted, five runs being scored on a double by Baker, a triple by Ibey, singles by Harrington and Forbert and errors that put Scriver and Lemoire on the paths.

It was after 5.30 when Umpire McCarney, of Peterborough, sent the boys into battle, with the visitors taking the first session at the plate and for the next few sessions both pitchers got off extremely lucky. The support was not air-tight and the stations were cluttered on several occasions — neither moundsman was overly steady and yet, with the exception of a single counter by Hastings, the fans saw no scoring for four long frames. Ibey got into trouble first in the fourth when he allowed three men to populate the sacks after two were out, but he took a hand from the fans when he whiffed Ralph for the third out. Ralph had his troubles coming in the following frame. A nice catch of the Peterborough pitcher's long fly in the seventh, was another bright spot provided by Zufelt.

Hastings Takes Lead.

The two teams entered the battle on equal footing, each having a win, a loss and a tie to its credit, but their defeat in this, the fourth game of the series, put the Peterborough representatives in a do or die position for the fifth and final game. A Lockworks' victory will tie up the round again— but Saturday will be plenty of time to talk of that.

Though neither team was overly strong with the willow, the hometowners made a show of artillery work in the final frames of the Wednesday game that brought their total hits to 10, including the two and three baggers. This superiority however, was balanced.

First Innings.

Lockworks at bat—Connors walked and stole the next two bags while Green and Black were fanning. Ralph and Barry also drew free passes, but Westbrooke followed the example of Green and Black.

Hastings— Baker drove to centre field, Stevenson flied out to Westbrooke, Harrington hit through short, Cowell was out when he hit to Black and Ibey was automatically out when he bunted on a third strike. No runs, 2 hits, 1 error.

Second Innings.

Jobbitt ied out to Forbert. Smith did likewise to Scriver and Hunt singled to third. Connors also reached the initial sack, by a free ticket, but Green was caught on a bunt. No runs, 1 hit, no errors.

Zufelt flied out to Barrie; Forbert was thrown out, Ralph to Black and Baker was thrown out at first by Hunt after Scriver had singled safely and Lemoire had reached first on Black's error. No runs, 1 hit, 1 error.

Third Innings.

Black was thrown out, Forbert to Harrington; Ralph ied out to Stevenson and Westbrooke whiffed after Barrie had reached first on a pass. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Stevenson was safe when Westbrooke overthrew first base; Harrington was out, Hunt to Black; Cowell struck out and Ibey was thrown out at first by Westbrooke. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Fourth Innings.

Jobbitt got on when Stevenson failed to handle his drive cleanly; he advanced to second on a sacrifice bunt by Smith and came home for the Lockworks' only run when Hunt hit to right field. Connors was safe when Baker took his hit and with Forbert's assistance trapped Hunt between second and third. Forbert made the put-out. Green was safe on Stevenson's error and Black got on when he was hit by the pitcher. Thus with three men on, Ralph came to bat with a chance to win himself a comfortable lead. He struck out. Two hits, no runs, 2 errors.

Zufelt was thrown out at first by Hunt; Forbert was out when Ralph collected his hit and threw to Black, and Scriver struck out. No hits, no runs, no errors.

Fifth Innings.

Barrie went out, Ibey to Harrington; Westbrooke struck out and Jobbitt flied out to Stevenson.

Lemoire struck out. Baker singled through short and Stevenson struck out. Westbrooke muffed Harrington's drive, Baker scoring. Cowell walloped one to centre field that drove in Harrington. It was a clean two bagger, Cowell taking third on the throw to catch Harrington at the plate. He, too, scored when Ibey hit through third. Zufelt was thrown out, Westbrooke to Black. 4 hits, 3 runs, 1 error.

Sixth Innings.

Smith led out and Hunt struck out, but bases on balls were given Connors and Green. Black struck out to end the belated rally. No hits, no runs, no errors.

Forbert singled, Scriver got on when Ralph failed to entirely capture his drive through the box, Forbert going to second. Lemoire was given a life on Barrie's error and the bases were full. Baker poled out a two-bagger scoring the three of them. Stevenson was thrown out, Barrie to Black but Harrington singled. Cowell hit to Black, but Ibey came through with a beautiful crash to the outer gardens, scoring Baker and Harrington. Zufelt was thrown out by the pitcher. 5 runs, 4 hits, 2 errors.

Seventh Innings.

Wood Captures Kent Trophy At Bewdley

VIEWS ON SPORT

K. of C. and C.G.E. will meet tonight in softball fixture at Confederation Park. Harrison and Teco to-morrow night.

Owing to the fact that the Lock Works hardball team played in Hastings last night, taking away some of the players on the softball team, the game between the Lockies and De Laval in Confederation Square was postponed.

Because Bethany defaulted their remaining game with the Cognawagas for to-night a sudden death game between the Cogs and Crescents will be played at the Exhibition Grounds to-morrow night at 5.30 sharp to break the tie for second place in the city section of the East Peterborough League.

The winner of this tilt will enter the play-off with the present leaders of the league; the first game to be played on Monday night.

A Marmora youth won the distinction of being the first amateur champion swimmer of the Trent Waterways by virtue of his winning the five mile marathon swim at Trent River yesterday. Overcoming the early lead set by his competitors and fighting his way through the weed beds and against a choppy sea, this lad captured the $50 trophy offered as first prize which he must win again next year in order to retain permanent possession. The winner's time was 3 hours and 10 minutes.

The spectators at the Bewdley regatta were given an extra thrill yesterday when Bob Carter with his "Canada Flyer" took a spill at the first turn in the sea-flea race. The driver had his hand cut in the upset and owing to the fact that the motor was cracked in the spill, he had to drop out of the race.

* * * * * *

Carter's upset made the way clear for Wood to capture the Kent trophy, donated by the Kent Tourist House. Many of the spectators were disappointed at the outcome of the race, as they believed that Bob could have given Wood a real tussle for the cup.

Hastings' win over the Lock Works last night makes the fifth game between these two teams the deciding one of the series. With Hastings having two wins, a loss and a tie to their credit, a victory, for the locals would tie up the round. As a result of the changes in the city section program of the E.P.L. this game will be played on Saturday afternoon, instead of Friday night, at the Exhibition Grounds.

LARGE CROWD WATCH EVENTS AT REGATTA

Water Sports Outing at Bewdley is Great Success.

BAND CONCERT HELD

Short Addresses Given by Dr. W. J. Robertson and Hon. Mr. Maybee.

A crowd of approximately 2,500 attended the Bewdley Regatta on Wednesday afternoon. A perfect day for such sports with a cooling breeze that just seemed to be made to order, greeted those who had spared no pains in getting the events ready and drew a large crowd. A spanking breeze from a northerly direction made the sailing course perfect and a test of real seamanship angles. The white sail of the dinghies angles. The white sail of the dingies in the first event on the blue water against a perfect blue sky was a picture that caused comment from many of the spectators.

The ever interesting crab race which always draws a hand from the spectators was made more interesting by the stiff breeze that was beneficial to the sailers but detrimental to the chabbers. The wind was a better judge of the direction that the frail crafts should take than many of their skippers who took a weird direction for a race which is supposed to be the shortest distance between two points. Many of them believed in the old saying that the longest way around is the shortest way home but that did not win the race.

Sea Flea Racing

For a while there was only one hydroplane on the water which made sparks almost fly from the surface, this was D. Wood's new boat. Later near the end of the day Canada Flyer, belonging to D'Arcy Carter and brothers, driven by Bob Carter made its appearance. Appearing in a stream of spray it bumped over the waves to the regatta. A race was then on for the Kent Cup, but after a demonstration of some real speeding while getting the motors tuned up they jockeyed into position and were off; while making the first turn at a fast clip Canada Flyer overturned throwing Bob into the lake cutting his hand in the upset, but he soon appeared and hung on to the craft until help came. The motor was salvaged but was found to be cracked. The upset gave the spectators a real thrill, everyone crowding to the edge of the wharf fearing for the worst and were relieved to see Bob's head appear.

Another interesting feature was the race between Dr. Glionnas big power boat and Woods' hydroplane. The hydroplane lead the larger boat all around the course making an interesting race.

Captures Kent Cup

Bob Carter's upset made the way clear for Wood to capture the Kent Cup which was donated by Kent's Tourist House at Bewdley. Many were disappointed at the outcome of the race as they believed the smaller boat of Carter's could have given the larger fellow a real run for his money. The races were all well contested. The gunwale race over a choppy course was well run as there were no upsets over the lengthy course and all paddled well.

Capable Committee

Rev. James Crissall was chairman of the whole regatta. Dr. George Glionna, was chairman of the events committee and worked hard to put this aquatic day across. The rest of the committee were: W. Purdy, C. A. Leggett, E. Sidey, while Mrs. Glionna and Mrs. Harry Goss were the amusement committee.

Mrs. Richard Morton the president of the Women's auxiliary of St. Anne's church was in charge of the supper furnished by the ladies auxiliary.

The judges were Mayor Roland Denne, W. E. Cooper, Mayor of Cobourg and R. Edmonds, mayor of Port Hope. The starters were T. D. McGraw and H. Mitchell.

Made Gala Scene

The park at Bewdley was the scene f many booths, fish ponds, fortune telling booths and fancy work booths all were a scene of a thriving ladies auxiliary. Special mention must be made of the supper that was served on long tables under the trees. One lady said that she did not know how many they had served but that they had served more than they had anticipated, sending out for more supplies.

This did not end the day. The Kilties band from Cobourg arrived at supper time to furnish music during the evening and Al Stagg's Orchestra from Port Hope was on deck with its lively tunes. A short program was featured after when Al Stagg's orchestra played a selection and Hendry and Smith supplied a little Scotch dance for the party and votes of thanks were given by Mr. William Dixon on behalf of the village and by Rev. J. M. Crissall on behalf of the church. His Worship Mayor Roland Denne was slated to be chairman and Mrs. Denne presented the prizes to the prize winners

Addresses Given

Dr. W. J. Robertson gave a short general address, reminiscences of Northumberland and referred to the fact that legislation is becoming more and more non political, referring to the liquor control act, old age pensions, education, public health and the agitation against the establishment of township schools as ample proof. Hon. Mr. Maybee spoke along general lines. After this short program all enjoyed dancing in Kent's restaurant to Al Stagg's orchestra.

For the day Bud Squires and Rev. Crissall acted as announcers and Wally Rye anchored his Strathmore off the wharf and placed it at the judge's disposal.

The prize winners were:—

Dingy sailing, once around 1½ mile course—Roger Archibald, R. Amys.

Crab race —Roger Archibald, J. Dobbin.

Men's single canoe race—D. Sidey, W. Rye.

Inboard motor boat, single cylinder —R. Archibald, Richardson and Stull, tied.

Boys swimming, under 12— M. Green, B. Skinner.

Boy's single skiff — J. Dobbin, J. Austin.

Ladies swimming race— Mrs. Bingierdoff, S. Squires.

Men's tandem canoe—W. Rye and Roger Amys; S. Dobbin and Moore.

Single skiff race for ladies — S. Squires, J. Kennedy.

Boy's tandem canoe, — R. Amys and Jack Dobbin, P. Amys and Barton.

Gunwale race—Roger Amys, Roger Archibald.

Boy's swimming, 18 and under— F. Forbes, J. A. Moses.

Mixed tandem canoe—C. F. Haultain and Miss E. Haultain; W. Rye and Annie Amys.

Men's swimming—W. Williams, R. Archibald.

Race between hydroplane — D. Wood; power motor—Dr. Glionna.

The hydroplane led the larger boat over the course and crossing first over the finish line.

Hydroplane C. class— D'Arcy Carter and brothers. Bole Carter driving Canada Flyer and D. Wood's hydroplane, ran for the Kent Cup.

D. Wood wins the cup as Carter turned over.

LEAFS WIN FROM BEARS

Defeat Newark 2-1 in Straight Eleven-Inning Game.

READING WINS DOUBLE

NEWARK, N. J., August 9. — Canadian Press. — Toronto defeated the Bears again here yesterday in a straight eleven inning game 2 to 1. Cote doubled in the eleventh followed by two sacrifices produced the winning run. The Leafs got their first run in the opening round on Sheedy's triple followed by Alexander's scratchy double which bounced over Kingdon's head.

Wins Double.

READING, Pa., August 9. — Canadian Press. — Reading took both ends of a double header from Rochester here yesterday 15 to 2 and 4 to 1.

The Keys slammed out 22 hits in the first game, which was featured by a triple play completed by Rochester. With three men on base in the third inning, Hawks lined to Gelbert, Hubbell was doubled off second and Walsh was erased at first for a threeply killing. Lautenbacher, with a shut out in sight in the second game, weakened in the seventh with two out and the Red Wings scored their lone run. Wilbur Hubbell, former Philadelphia National pitcher, gave the Red Wings only six hits in the first game.

MENIE BEATEN BY GLEN ROSS

Rawdon Softball League Leaders Suffer 14-3 Loss on Tuesday.

BURNBRAE, Aug 9. —(Examiner Correspondence)—After a most successful season in which one victory after another seemed to follow as a matter of course, the Menie softball team looked good to pull down the championship of the Rawdon League for another year, and the 14 to 3 defeat administered to them by the Glen Ross aggregation at Stirling on Tuesday night came as a real surprise to their supporters. Two weeks of idleness told the tale, as the Glen Ross players have been playing almost every night and so were in A1 shape. The Glen team defeated Bethel 16 to 9 in the sudden death game to decide second place and with this victory over Menie under their belt can be relied upon to work hard for the next game and the cup.

When Glen Ross visit Mewie on Friday evening the home team, with their backs to the wall, are bound to put up a stiff fight. Eagleson always pitches his best games when the case looks hopeless and with the rest of the players backing him up, the locals may sew up the series and make another game necessary.

On Tuesday evening the Menie players seemed unable to get in their usual heavy stock work, but Friday is another game and the season's records show that Menie batters have hammered the offerings of Smith and Pierce just as hard and often. Friday evening's game promises plenty of excitement and a record crowd is assured.

CRESCENTS AND COGS TO PLAY

Sudden Death Game Friday Evening, Winner to Meet Rays in Play-off.

Bethany sent word yesterday afternoon that in view of their defeat by Crescents on Tuesday, which put the team out of the running, the majority of the players would refuse to leave their farm work to play Cognawagas this evening, and it would be necessary to default the game. This development creates a tie between Crescents and Cognawagas for second place, and the teams will play a sudden death game at Exhibition Park, on Friday evening, commencing at 5.30 o'clock. The game will be seven innings, and, if tied, will continue until called by the umpire-in-chief.

The winner will enter the play-off with Raybestos, the first game to be played on Monday evening.

As a result of the change in these games, Hastings will play the Lock Works here on Saturday afternoon instead of on Friday evening.

SMELTERS LOSE TO BELLEVILLE

Bay of Quinte Crew Win 1-0 Decision At Deloro.

TIGHT CONTEST

Belleville won from Deloro by one lone counter in a Central League fixture played at the latter's home field yesterday, the score standing 1-0 in favor of the Bay of Quinte crew.

Playing through six full innings without a score on either side, Scott tallied for the victors when Regan mussed up Green's grounder.

The line-up:

Belleville — Scott, 3b; Weir, 2b; H. Mills, 1b; Green, rf; W. Mills, c; Blakeley, ss; Ross, cf; Hagerman, lf; Wronke, p; Gibson, p; Weir, lf.

GIANTS GAIN ON CARDINALS

Defeat St. Louis 10-5 to Win Eight to Seven Edge Over Leaders.

HOMERS FEATURE

NEW YORK, August 9. — Canadian Press. — The Giants made it two out of three from the leading Cardinals here yesterday winning the last game of the series 10 to 5. The victory gave the Giants an eight to seven edge over the Cardinals in games for the season, and reduced the St. Louis margin to four and one-half contests.

The home team piled up an early lead of ten runs, knocking out both Willie Sherdel and Harold Haid.

Travis Jackson and Bill Terry each hit a homer with a man on base while six hits were bunched for as many runs in the fourth.

The Pirates finished their second eastern invasion by defeating the Robins 4 to 3, to clean up the three game series and run the Pittsburgh string to seven straight. All three Pirate victories here were by one run margins.

Ray Kremer not only held Brooklyn to eight hits but collected two of the twelve Pittsburgh safeties and a sacrifice fly, driving in two runs. Kremer was steady throughout and brilliant in the pinches. The home team used three pitchers, McWeeny, Elliott and Petty.

Boston increased Cincinnati's losing streak to eight in a row when the Braves took both ends of a double header, at Boston, winning the first game 6 to 3 and the second 12 to 1. Delaney and R. Smith pitched admirably for Boston.

In the first game Everett Purdy crashed into the right field pavilion wall and became unconscious. He was chasing a long drive off Sisler's bat. He did not regain consciousness for five minutes and was removed from the field where he was placed under observation for possible head injuries.

The hitting and fielding of Sisler featured both games.

The Phillies made a clean sweep of the series from the Chicago Cubs by winning the final game 4 to 3. A rally in the eighth tied the score for the tail enders and Lerian's sacrifice fly to Stephenson with the bases filled in the ninth decided the game.

Chuck Klein, the Phillies' new right fielder, hit a homer with one on in the first. Gabby Hartnett hit a home run for Chicago in the third inning.

Elwood English, Chicago shortstop, injured his leg in trying to stretch a single into a double in the first inning and was carried off the field.

SERPENT MOUND MEET SUCCESS

Keen Competition in Every Event—Gate Receipts Very Large.

LADIES PROMINENT.

Serpent Mound regatta, on the banks of the beautiful Rice Lake, proved to be a huge success yesterday afternoon. Although the numerous other regattas effected the size of the entry list the competition was every bit as strong as in former years and the gate receipts were much larger. The ladies played a big part in all the events and put up just as strong competition as did the male sex.

The outboard motor races proved the big feature of the day. Three boats were entered in the race. Bob Goodfellow with his Peterborough Canoe boat and Johnston motor, ran away with all the heats. Goodfellow proved to be the best navigator and made the turns in fine style. Second place went to Bob Carter in his Canada Flyer, driven by an Evinrude engine, and third place was given to J. Rockwell in his Bat and Son, driven by a Johnston motor. Forty-two miles an hour was the highest speed obtained by Goodfellow in the race.

The surf riding was much enjoyed by all the spectators with Marion Comrie and Jack Melling of Toronto giving splendid exhibitions.

In the morning a softball game was played between the Sixth Line girls and Keene with the former winning the silver trophy by the score of 8 runs to 7.

Keene and Roseneath clashed in a baseball game with the home team winning handily 19 runs to 5. The Keene boys were too much for the visitors all the way through. The game was played up on top of the mound and errors were numerous. E. McCarthy hurled a wonderful game and only allowed the visitors to score in three innings. Dunnette, who started and finished for Roseneath was hit hard and his team mates gave him very poor support in the field. Roddy relieved him in the eigth but was wild and filled the bases only to call Dunnette back to the mound. The line-up:

Keene—Robertson, c.; J. McCarthy, s.s.; O. McCarthy, 2b.; Weir 3.b.; M. Robertson, 1b.; Hall, r.f.; E. McCarthy, p.; Whaley, m.f.; Fletcher, l.f.

Roseneath—Eddington, l.f.; Wilson, c.; C. Lapp, 3b.; Roddy, 2b.; H. Lapp, m.f.; Brown, r.f.; Leach, s.s.; Gillespie, 1b.; Dunnette, p.

Umpires—Crowe and Renwick.

Roseneath .. ..130000100— 5

SPORTS FEATURE AT OTTAWA FAIR

Saturday, Aug. 25, Will be Sports Day—Good Program Drawn Up.

Sports, track and field will take their proper place on the program of the Central Canada Exhibition this year at Lansdowne Par. At a meeting of the Exhibition Association, which was attended by George Pushman and Cecil Duncan, president and secretary respectively of the Ottawa branch of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, held last night, it was decided that the afternoon of Saturday, August 25, be reserved for a complete program of athletic events which will be open to athletes male and female, of Ottawa and district.

This sports day, which promises to be a big feature of the exhibition program, will be entirely in the hands of the A.A.U. of C. and the intention is that it will be an annual affair.

It is generally admitted that more athletic meets are necessary in the Capital in order to bring to the front the many capable performer that there are in Ottawa and district. Competition is necessary to develop the talent and it is the intention of the Exhibition Association, as well as the local amateur athleitc authorities, to make competition possible.

The events on the program are open to all athletes of Ottawa and district. It is known that boys and girls, as well as the older athletes, have been training in a mild way during the summer in many of the surrounding towns and also in the Capital and it is expected that they will all meet in competition on the sports day at the exhibition this year.

All entries are to be mailed to Mr. R. George Pushman, chairman of the Ottawa and District Athletic Branch, and addressed in care of the Central Canada Exhibition. It is necessary that intending competitors send in their entries at an early date as it has been decided that no post entries will be accepted.

A new departure in connection with this program is the horse shoe pitching contest, which will be open to all.

The complete program follows:

Ladies.

100 yards open. 100 yards (novice), 440 relay.

Boys 15 Years and Under 100 yards, 440 yards realy, high jump.

Boys 17 Years and Under, Open

100 yards, 220 yards, 440 yards, 880 yards relay, high jump, broad jump.

Open Events.

100 yards, 220 yards, 440 yards, 880 yards, 1 mile, high jump, broad jump, pole vault, javelin, 16 pound shot put, 120 low hurdles, discus throw.

Bicycle events.

Horse shoe pitching contest.

Outboard motor boat racing.

TWO CANADIANS STILL IN RUNNING

Glionna Eliminated From Boxing Competition By South African.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 9.—(By W. H. Ingram, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent)—Vincent Glionna, Toronto bantam, lost on points to Isaacs of South Africa in a bout at the Olympic boxing tournament today.

The result leaves two Canadian Boxers, Ray Smillie, Welter weight, and Don. Carrick, light heavy weight both of Toronto, in quest for the Olympic honors.

The results of yesterday's bouts in which Canadians took part were:

Ray Smillie, Toronto, defeated Lenehan of Ireland (welter).

Vincent Glionna, Toronto, defeated Ziglarski. Germany (bantam).

Gorny, Poland, defeated Fred Volkert, Montreal (feather).

Apell, France, defeated Frank Martin, Montreal (flyweight).

Kjallander, Sweden, defeated Honore Chevrier, Ottawa (middle).

The second elimination series proper commences to-day, and the attendances at the boxing pavilion, which is right at the entrance to the Olympic Stadium, will be up to capacity. So far 6,000 have attended the night sessions, and about half that number the afternoon bouts.

So far the fighting displayed has been largely of a slugging nature, which comes naturally to most of the amateurs who are in the present series. As it progresses the boxing will become more scientific, and a lot of surplus energy will be worked out, tending to make the fighters cannier and more scientific in the semi-finals and finals.

Smillie to-day meets Usuda of Japan, and if he can put his opponent away the chances of at least two of the Canadians reaching the final (Smillie and Carrick) are extremely good.

CRICKET

St. Edmunds C.C. of Toronto defeated the Peterborough Club on Civic Holiday by 56 runs. The game was played in Toronto. St. Edmunds batted first and lost three good batsmen for 10 runs, and it looked as if the Peterborough team were going to dispose of their opposition cheaply. Greenwood and Brown soon put a different aspect on the game, the former hitting away at practically every ball, and aided by an element of luck and the small boundaries scoring rapidly, while his partner played steadier and more correct cricket. These two players brought the score to 89 before Thorpe got Brown caught near the wicket. A few runs later Greenwood played a ball from the same bowler on to his wicket. The remaining batsmen failed, all being clean bowled by Thorpe, who had the fine analysis of 7 wickets for 28 runs. This is the first match this season that this bowler had been used, as an injured shoulder prevented him from bowling.

Frank Dyer also bowled well, capturing the other three wickets for 26 runs. Thanks to Brown and Greenwood, St. Edmunds' total reached 107 runs.

Peterborough started their innings with Dunkerly and Imming, with the score at 7, the former was caught. Gore was next man in, and was playing nice cricket, when in attempting a big hit was caught in the outfield. Thorpe partnered Imming, who, although not scoring many runs, was playing the bowling nicely. The score mounted to 24 when Lister bowled Imming. The next 4 wickets fell rapidly, three batsmen being clean bowled by Lister, who was bowling magnificently. He was making the ball break sharply from the off, the wicket suiting this type of bowler. Thorpe was eighth out at 49, after batting well for 26 runs. The score finally reached 51. Unfortunately, Peterborough batted in a very poor light. Lister claimed 7 wickets for 16 runs.

The Peterborough team was hospitably received by the Toronto club, and a pleasant day was enjoyed by all.

CANUCK BOXER LOSES DECISION

Kjallander of Sweden is Victor Over Canadian at Amsterdam.

MIDDLEWEIGHT CLASS

(By W. H. Ingram, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent.)

AMSTERDAM, August 9. — Honore Chevrier, the Ottawa middleweight, lost the decision to Kjallander of Sweden, in a middleweight bout in the Olympic boxing tourney last evening.

Chevrier was warned several times for holding during the fight, which was generally a fierce battle. After a mix-up at the opening, the Swede carried the fight to the Ottawa man, landing straight jabs. Chevrier did not seem to worry about conserving his strength but the Swede fought carefully.

In the second round both sparred, and then mixed it up with the referee continually breaking them apart.

Neither one landed many solid blows but both worked hard. Honors were even in this round.

In the last round the two started punching viciously, with head and body blows about equally divided between them. Both got in uppercuts in a mill in the centre of the ring. They were again milling after a clinch when the bell rang.

HAREMS IN TURKEY FILLED WITH WIVES? NO! WRITERS' DREAM

Paul Sloane, Director of Comedy "Turkish Delight," Makes New Discoveries

Solomon had his thousand wives, Mohammed had six and the wealthiest Turk has all he can do to support one.

Harems filled with winsome wives exist only in the fancy of fiction writers. The greatest Turkish harem never had more than four wives in it.

Director Paul Sloane discovered all this while preparing to film "Turkish Delight," Irvin S. Cobb's humorous story of Mohammedan home life, now playing at the Regent Theatre.

The law of the country they found, forbade a man marrying more than four women. He could, however, buy as many slave girls as he desired or could afford to keep. According to the rules of conduct set down by the Prophet Mohammed, if a man did not get along with his first wife he could marry three more.

And if he didn't like any of them, he divorced them by dropping three stones in front of them and reciting this phrase: "You are no longer a wife of mine."

The procedure was easy enough, but the cost was high. The cost of keeping a Turkish wife, Sloane said, is far more than maintaing an American bride. A decent Turkish gentleman is expected to supply his wife with at least a dozen slaves and servants.

That is the main reason why less than a hundred Turks in Islam have more than two wives apiece.

Instead of paying alimony, the Turks have to give their ex-wives a sizeable sum agreed upon when they cast the three fatal stones. The bride stipulates the amount in her marriage contract.

"Turkish Delight" features Rudolph Schildkraut, Julia Faye, Kenneth Thomson and May Robson. The picture is said to be packed with laughs.

Join the Fire Department! It is only the price of admission to the Regent Theatre where the Adventure Chapter play, "The Fire Fighters" is running every week. This takes you through all the thrilling life of the flame extinguishers and deposits you at the end of each episode gasping and amazed back into your seat. The chapter play stars Jack Daugherty with Helen Ferguson and imposing array of supporting players under the direction of Jacques Jaccard.

CONFERRING WITH GOVERNMENT

Conferences are now in progress between representatives of the ruling Indian princes and of the secretary of state for India. At present only about half of India is under direct British rule, while the rest is made up of a hundred so-called independent states. It is said that the rulers of the native free states seek to create a federation which would recognize some central authority as a first step to a large union, which it is hoped would embrace British India as one of its units. The four spokesmen for the reigning princes are: (1) the Maharajah of Kashmir, who won considerable notoriety as Mr. A. in the Robinson blackmail case; (2) the Maharajah of Patiala; (4) H. H. Sir Jagat Singh and (5) the Maharajah of Hajpipla. They are conferring with a committee of Englishmen headed by Sir Harcourt Butler.

AUTO INSURANCE RIGHTS LIMITED

Policy Holder Should Read All Clauses Over Carefully.

Last year 21,000 men, women and children lost their lives in automobile accidents in the United States, and ten times as many were injured. Contests for right-of-way at crossings speeding, driving on the wrong side, failure to give proper signals and "cutting in", in the order named, caused that alarmingly casualty list. Motorists are being driven to insurance for protection, and more than fifty percent now have automobile "coverage" in one form or another.

But automobile insurance does not cover every kind of accident nor protect the policy holder in any and all circumstances. Before the motorist goes spinning blithely over the highways, warns Carl Helm in the September issue of Popular Science Monthly, he should know about the "exclusion clauses" in his policy—little "ifs", "ands", and "buts" that may some time cost him dear.

Remember this: Report to your insurance company every accident that may happen to you, regardless of whether damage is done. Make the report in writing and immediately. Failure to do so may render your policy void.

A business man, "hitting it up" to keep an early appointment, collided with another car. He left his damaged machine at the scene and took a taxicab. Hours later he remembered to telephone his insurance company. The company was "awfully sorry, but—!" He had not made a prompt report and he had left his car unguarded for hours, without waiting for the garage man or the insurance adjuster to arrive. Either omission, he learned, was sufficient to nullify the policy.

Theft policies do not by any means, cover theft in any and all circumstances. Insurance companies specify, for example, that they will not be legally liable for theft by any person or persons in the assured's household or in his service or employment.

In case of accident, be careful about assuming blame or offering to "fix things up." The policy does not prohibit you from arranging and paying for first aid treatment or "immediate surgical relief." But it does specify that your voluntary contributions shall stop at that point unless you are prepared yourself to stand the entire expense. Even after you have made the proper reports and compiled with all the rules and regulations, you are required to help the insurance company fight your battle if it asks you to. If requested, you must assist in preparing evidence and rounding up witnesses.

Through failure to read carefully his auto insurance policy, more than one motorist has burdened himself with debt for years to come.

ITCHY ECZEMA ON BABY'S FACE

Broke Out in Watery Pimples. Cuticura Healed.

"Eczema broke out in watery pimples on my baby's face. It itched and burned so badly that she scratched, and her face was covered with sore eruptions. When she scratched the eruptions they used to bleed something dreadful. She used to fret and cry awake nights. It caused disfigurement for a while.

"I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after using it I purchased two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, and in five weeks she was completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. Clifford Pacey, Westfield, N. S.

A clear cold soup . . . a club sandwich . . . a slender glass of "Canada Dry"

LUNCHEON in summer is always a problem. Appetites lag. The weather is uncomfortable. "Why," you wonder, "did I ever invite anyone on a day like this!"

It isn't really as bad as that. Serve cold foods. Cold boiled ham, for instance. Or a club sandwich. Start off with a clear soup—cold. And accompany your luncheon with a slender glass of "Canada Dry."

This is a delicious ginger ale, especially in hot weather. It has a thirst-quenching dryness to it. It has a mild and mellow flavor which gives zest to the simplest meal. It is made from finest quality Jamaica ginger and other absolutely pure ingredients. By a secret method of carbonation "Canada Dry" retains its delightful sparkle long after the bottle is opened. And it mixes well with other beverages. Order "Canada Dry" today.

Mine Market Weak With Trading Quiet

TORONTO, Aug. 9 (Canadian Press).—Weakness continued to characterize the trading on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange at today's session. The volume of sales was small and with the exception of a few issues no large turnovers were registered. Sudbury Basin in heavy trading continued to decline, capping yesterday's drop of 35 with a decline to-day of 30 to 7.00. Jackson Manion was another heavy seller and was down two at 97. Noranda, after selling below 51.00, closed with a drop of 30 at 51.75. Wright Hargreaves dropped five to 3.25 and Hollinger with a low of 8.75 closed unchanged at 9.00. Howey slumped 11 to 99. Teck Hughes at 9.20 was down 13.

Toronto Shares Firm With Gains Fractional

TORONTO, Aug. 9 (Canadian Press).—Firmness was the prevailing note on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day, with the majority of the issues registering fractional gains. Steel of Canada was an exception with a gain of 8¼ to 175. International Nickel remains the heaviest trader and scored an advance of 1¼ to 96⅞. Brazilian was unchanged at 52½, and Cockshutt was down a quarter at 23½. Massey Harris, with a large turnover, advanced two to 41.

The curb section was weaker than the listed, but showed improvement over yesterday. British American Oil was unchanged at 38. Walkers, after an active session, was up a fraction at 51⅝. International Petroleum dropped a half to 38. Carlings was down ⅝ at 26c.

Wheat and Corn Gain Following Liverpool

CHICAGO, Aug. 9 (Canadian Press) Wheat and corn scored sharp gains in price to-day, owing largely to an unlooked-for upturn in wheat quotations at Liverpool. Much buying was based on opinions that the United States Government crop report this afternoon might not prove as bearish as expected. Opening ½ to 3⅝c up, Chicago wheat rose a little further, and then receded somewhat. Corn started ⅛ to 2⅛c higher and later showed additional gains. Oats were firm.

Opening prices were: Wheat, September 113, December 118¼. Corn, September 94, December 74⅛. Oats, September 37⅝, December 40⅝.

Industrial Outlook in Western Canada

Trade expansion in the West for the Fall and Winter months of this year shows promise of an advance in volume over the early part of 1928 and latter half of 1927. Conditions appear to be stabilised and the generally good crop situation nas induced activity in construction and other development work. The outlook is sufficiently satisfactory to engender confidence in the trader looking to marked improvement in all lines of business, says Agricultural and Industrial Progress in Canada, a monthly review published by the Department of Colonization and Development of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

There is noticeable activity throughout the West, all cities telling of expansion in industries and improvement in building programs, while employment is at a much higher level than has hitherto been the case. There is a steady, if not very large, influx of new people to the land, resulting in the opening up of new agricultural areas. The Canadian Pacific Branch line construction work is in progress, country largely settled, and drawing additional settlers, covering as it does considerable areas in Saskatchewan and Alberta.

It looks to be a record-year for construction throughout Canada, with the half-year percentage increase for the Prairie provinces as 12.9 per cent, and British Columbia 7.7 percent over 1927. The building program does not include any structure of magnitude in the West and is largely found in expansion of existing industrial buildings, housing, farm improvements, railway construction work of greater volume so far as industrial plants are concerned, plus investments in important power projects, which if not consummated this year will ensure a satisfactory commencement in 1929. Possibly the outlook for necessary construction work in the West and the apparent readiness of capital to find outlets in this class of investment, is one of the factors in determining the prospective continuance of satisfactory employment and development of industry relating to all lines of building products. This situation appears to be general, not only on the Prairies but in the Coast Province, and should extend over the next few years. There must also be a continuing and an increasing amongst the road building programs in all provinces; the tendency to open up territory renders this inevitable. Programs for municipal work, which have been kept to a minimum during the last few years, must be extended as the result of increase in population in Western cities, the extension in building and increase in industrial development; necessarily the building of new branch railway lines creates new towns and villages a very considerable number being established during the last two years, with additional new villages and towns of importance during the present year to be opened up. Activity throughout the West is so generally applicable to all lines that it is difficult at the moment to be specific in relation to any developmennt that can be considered inactive, though in some cases volume could be increased.

Given good climatic conditions in August, suitable to Western harvest requirements, the agriculturiests of the West should be in a position to assist very materially in the further development of industry in the Prairie Provinces.

Mining Briefs

A Special Service to The Examiner

TORONTO, Aug. 9.—The diamond drill at Abana, on the east side of the dyke, which cut through an enrichment at 600 feet depth is being carried further and within a few days is expected that the second rich ore body, opened up on the 300 foot level has been penetrated at the lower horizon. The company has developed or proven by drills four important ore bodies so far, two on each side of the diabase dyke.

Hollinger is the highest yielding stock on the Canadian mining list. At the current price it yields nearly 15 per cent. In view of the fact that the company has met current assets of $13,568,000 and that officials have intimated that the dividend would not be reduced even if not earned this year, the stock has attractions.

Backfilling in the mine that should have been done long ago, as ore was drawn from the mine, continues to hamper production, both as to volume and millheads. This is a temperary condition, as Hollinger company has some $60,000,000 ore reserves from which to draw.

A salient factor that remains, however, is the drop last year of $6,000,000 in ore reserves. While new developments in the Schumacher section and continued developments at depth in the older sections of the mine make up this loss in time? If Hollinger demonstrates that it can produce in the neighborhood of $15,000,000 annually and keep adding to net ore reserves, the shares at to-day's level are a buy.

If Jackson Manion at 250 level, which is now being developed, secures anything like the results obtained at 125 foot depth it will be a big thing. This mine has one of the finest showings in the north country on the surface and these conditions held at 125. Suppose they persist at 250 and at deeper levels to be opened up? Jackson-Manion is worth watching. The property obviously has great promise.

Crown Reserve Mines has proved up to the No. 2 vein on the 300 foot level, according to a wire from the north to-day. No names have been made yet.

Bidgood Mines is reported today to have run into some very rich ore in the raise from the 600 to the 400 foot level.

Lake Shore has opened up in vein south of the main system, which shows 6 feet width of ore, with values running $75.00 to the ton.

One fails to find a reason for the severe break in Sudbury Basin and its big neighbor, Treadwell-Yukon, other than general market conditions. If rumors regarding Sudbury Basin had anything to do with the decline, then an upward movement appears warranted, as there was nothing to them. It has been pretty conclusively indicated that Sudbury Basin for some 3,000 feet at least has the extension of the Errington ore zone. More ground farther west is being proven.

As for Treadwell-Yunon, results at No. 2 shaft indicate that the company is likely to repeat the performance at No. 1 shaft, where near those workings some $18,000,000 in ore was developed. No. 3 shaft is being sunk to prove up equally good, if not better, indications. No. 1 and No. 3 shafts are 12,000 feet apart and between them an enormous volume of ore has been indicated down to 900 feet depth. The mill is giving satisfactory results and will be enlarged.

Kirkland Lake Gold Mines has signed an agreement with Chaput-Hughes Mines with respect to new exploration work on the latter property. Diamond drilling has commenced into the Chaput-Hughes property from the Kirkland Lake Gold workings at 2850 feet.

In addition to a good length of medium grade ore, Kirkland Lake Gold has opened up 80 feet of high grade material at 2850 feet. The winze has reached 2925 feet and a station is now being cut. From this a new level will be opened up.

BELLEVILLE TO PLAY PETES ON SATURDAY HERE

League Leaders Will Provide Opposition in Most Important Game.

PETES NEED WIN.

Must Take Fall Out of Invaders To Keep in Race.

The withdrawal of Kingston from the Central Ontario League race removes an obstacle from the path of the Petes and leaves the battle for second place to Oshawa and the home talent.

It also makes it possible for the battle with Belleville, postponed on account of the rain since June, to be played here on Saturday afternoon, and accordingly Peterborough fans will have a chance to look over the League leaders at James Stevenson Park.

Walter Gerow's men have not lost a game since they were beaten here on Dominion Day morning, and have been running through all opposition with the throttle wide open. However, the Petes have taken their measure three times this season and realizing that they must win Saturday to keep in the race the home talent are ready for the battle of their lives. Belleville will not help them any to qualify for the finals and will have their strongest lineup in action here Saturday, and the Petes have to be prepared to meet the League leaders at their best. If they salt this fixture away the local crew will have a royal chance of figuring in the play-offs.

The game should be one of the best of the year.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of little Jimmy Yeotes, who passed away one year ago to-day, August 9, 1927.
Short and sudden was the call ..
Of one so dearly loved by all;
The blow was great, the shock severe,
We little thought his death so near,
And only those who have loved can tell
The pain of not saying a last farewell.
From one who loved him dearly and shall never forget him—Alice Gunn.

BRITAIN NOT DECADENT.

Next Ten Years Ought To Be Most Striking in Empire Development.

LONDON, Aug. 9 (Canadian Press Cable).—"I am going back better pleased than ever that I am a British citizen," declared Premier G. Howard Ferguson, of Ontario, to the Canadian Press. He is returning to Canada aboard the Empress of Australia, sailing on Saturday.

The Premier has been in Britain and Europe studying migration possibilities, the educational systems and agriculture since early in June.

"A man is a fool who says the Old Country is decadent," he said. "The next ten years ought to be the most striking in the whole history of Empire development."

Premier Ferguson, who travelled extensively through the British Isles, said he found conditions in Scotland and Ireland greatly improved since his last visit. "I can see a distinct advance everywhere in interest in overseas," he declared. "The pressure of the unemployment problem will bring of itself a greater consolidation of imperial sentimcnt and imperial forces generally. Canada wants particularly people of her own stock. We do not seek to get only the cream of the population as some people assert (referring to Ramsay MacDonald's statement in Quebec). We want a fair average of healthy citizens who are prepared to endure hard work. The Western wheat fields are not the only spot where settlers are needed. In Ontario we have room for twenty-five millions of the right sort."

PLAY-OFF GAMES BEGIN SATURDAY

Royals Go To Kingston and the Kiwanis Juveniles To Oshawa.

The first play-offs for the champions of the City League will take place on Saturday, August 10th. The Kiwanis Juveniles will travel to Oshawa to take a fall out of the Motor Town, while the Royals in the Junior series will go in the opposite direction and will test their strength against the Limestoners in Kingston. The dates for the return games have not yet been definitely decided upon, but after Saturday a more definite arrangement will be made. A number of fans are preparing to travel with each team as the leagues this year have created a lot of interest and the supporters are all anxious to see the lads win.

Wedding Bells

JACKSON—BEX.

A wedding of interest to many friends of the bride, who formerly lived in Peterborough, took place in Miami, Florida, recently, when Miss Connie Bex, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Bex, of that city, became the bride of Edward J. Jackson, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Jackson, of Detroit. The ceremony took place in Bryan Memorial Church, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion with tall baskets of roses arranged against a background of ferns with crepe myrtle and ferns wound in the altar railings. Rev. Schuyler E. Garth officiated. Mrs. Roy A. Perry played Mendelssohn's Wedding March, and played during the ceremony, "I Love You Truly." The bride wore a lovely gown of white georgette over satin, and her veil of tulle was caught with a bandeau of pearls. She carried a shower bouquet of roses and ferns. Mrs. M. A. Lacroix was matron of honor and only attendant. Her gown was of yellow georgette with picture hat to match, and she carried a bouquet of yellow roses and ferns. Mr. Perry acted as best man. A buffet luncheon was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bex to the relatives and a few intimate friends following the ceremony.

The bride has been much entertained previous to her wedding and was guest of honor at a miscellaneous shower given by Mrs. M. A. Lacroix and a shower by Mrs. L. M. Martin and Mrs. Roy A. Perry.

Mr. and Mrs. Bex are close friends of Mr. and Mrs. Gatfield, Rubidge Street.

The Dion Thresher
IS THE ONLY ONE IN CANADA SOLD WITH A
Self-Feeder
Invented and Patented in Canada.

This Self-Feeder is a very exceptional improvement peculiar to the Dion Threshing Machine. It is of the lands type. The Feeder is equipped with two regulators—one to control the speed, the other to limit the quantity of grain in the Feeder. The whole is so scientifically combined that when the cylinder speed of the Thresher runs down, the feeding stops automatically, thus allowing time for the cylinder to recover its normal speed. All this is done without any attention from the operator.

Children Near Death

Two Pulled From Lake By Woman

Mrs. G. Dwyer Wades Into Lake When Little Ones Are in Danger.

OFF CRESCENT STREET.

Children Visiting in City Overbalance While Playing Near Shore.

The story of how two little children were saved from almost certain drowning in Little Lake at about 4:45 on Thursday afternoon was told The Examiner by an eye witness who gave full credit to Mrs. Dwyer, of 45 Crescent street, for a plucky rescue.

It appears that the small son and daughter of Mrs. Dwyer were bathing in front of their home, and with them were two [illegible]ren, James and Jack Sweeney, who are visiting in the city from Toronto. Suddenly, little Jack Sweeney was seen to fall backward, regain his footing and then fall again. His plight was perilous, but Mrs. Dwyer, realizing the danger from where she sat on the bank, jumped into the water and, wading in, brought the little fellow to safety. Almost at the same time, little James Sweeney, aged about three years, toppled backward off a log upon which he had been sitting and when picked up by Mrs. Dwyer, was almost completely exhausted.

The youngsters were hurried from the water and to-day are none the worse for the near fatalities.

Former Operator is Given Parole

WASHINGTON, August 10 (Canadian Press). — A parole for William V. Dwyer, convicted in New York of violating the national prohibition law, was approved yesterday by Attorney-General Sargent. Dwyer is serving two years in the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta.

Dwyer's parole was approved after he had paid a $10,000 fine, and on recommendation of the Prison Commission, which reported that the prisoner was very ill.

Dwyer was formerly operator of a Montreal race track.

First Weddings in Western Ontario Churches Are Held Many Decades After Their Erection

LONDON, Ont. — Two churches in Ontario have established rather unique records. Elmwood United Church, at Cargill, is one, and Thornhill United Church, at Thornhill, is the other.

Here are the two items:

Elmwood United Church has established somewhat of a record as a marriageless church. The first marriage ceremony performed in that church since the edifice was erected more than half a century ago was just the other day. The principals in the event were Dr. C. R. Rudolph, of Hillsdale, Ont., and Miss Pearly Agnes Wilson, of Hanover Ont. Rev. R. Young, pastor, officiated.

The first wedding in the Thornhill United Church since its erection more than seventy years ago, will take place this month, whn Miss Pauline Billerman will be married to James W. Cowie

Late Hubby Steps On Tack; Divorced

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 10. Annabelle Finn didn't want J. Harrison Finn to stay out late. So when J. Harrison stayed out late he took off his shoes before going upstairs.

One night he came in and found the stairs sprinkled with tacks. He learned this when he stepped on several, falling downstairs as a result. This he related to Judge Samuel R. Blake, who awarded him a divorce.

Kiwanians J. J. Turner and E. H. Wood Tell Fellow Members of Trips.

WILL PURCHASE BOAT.

Dr. Jack Craig Obtains Gift From Club For Bowmanville Boys' Farm.

That there are just as capable speakers among the ranks of the club as outside was demonstrated at to-day's luncheon of the Kiwanis club, when Dr. Ed. Wood provided a highly interesting verbal report of the Kiwanis Motorcade to Kirkland Lake, during which the charter night of the Kirkland Lake club was attended, and J. J. Turner, equally as entertaining told of his recent visit to the Old Land. His travelling companion, J. J. Fitzpatrick, was his guest at the luncheon to-day.

There was an encouraging increase in the attendance to-day over last week, and with George Liddle at the piano, plenty of lusty choruses resulted. Last week the chief speaker was Rotarian Father Paul Costello, and at to-day's luncheon, the Rotary club was represented by its president-elect, W. R. Morris. He, too, was a guest of Mr. Turner. Other visitors were J. E. Burnham of St. Petersburg, Fla., C. E. Canfield of Pittsfield, Mass., and J. W. Thain of Toronto.

Congratulations.

While introducing his guests, Kiwanian Turner also took occasion to congratulate John Comstock upon the signal honor this week conferred upon him—that of the presidency of the Ontario Funeral Service Association, of which he was first vice-president last year. A fine imposed upon him by President Joe John he immediately paid on condition that it be given to the new baby girl, recently arrived in Art Moffat's household. Jim Geraghty's booster prizes went to Mark Bredin, Walter Kidd and Frank Dawson.

Harry Boyle was given a minute in which to remind the members of the Inter-club picnic at Cobourg next Wednesday, the Peterborough contingent to leave the Empress Hotel at 1.30 in the afternoon. Harry Huffman was also on his feet speaking of the District convention, of which he spoke last week. The convention is being held in Kingston September 24 and 25, and proper reservations should be made within the near future.

Will Present Boat.

The purchase and presentation of a boat to the Bowmanville Boys' Farm, was a subject broached by Dr. Jack Craig, in which the members concurred. While the exact type of boat to be purchased has not yet been decided upon, in all likelihood it will be a skiff, built in Peterborough. Dr. Craig reminded the club of the splendid help given by the boys at the Made-in-Canada Fair held last year.

In connection with the 1928 Made-in-Canada Fair, he reported genuine progress for although there had been little said about it to date plans have been going into effect and the booth space in the armouries is being allotted rapidly. Dr. Craig urged the Kiwanians to get busy boosting the fair. Of the musical festival, he said that widespread interest had already been evidenced, while the cat show has provoked enquiries from the Buffalo and Detroit clubs, as well as numerous private cat fanciers.

President Joe John, who presided throughout, introduced the speakers of the day, referring briefly to their long travels. Dr. Ed. Wood was the first speaker.

Dr. Wood.

"It was the most enlightening trip I have ever made and you are missing a lot by not seeing that country. We, of the motorcade left here on Wednesday at 8 a.m. and motored to North Bay, encountering the worst roads between here and Orillia. We stayed at a newly-opened hotel there. There were eighteen men, women and children who went from Southern Ontario out of 200 expected. In other words, the motorcade was a failure in point of numbers.

"From North Bay to Timagami we motored on the Ferguson Highway through virgin forest, counting twen-

MORE RUNNERS ALONG BORDER

Rum Fleet at Bridgeburg Now Consists of 16 Loaded Boats Waiting For Fog.

GUARDS INCREASED.

BUFFALO, N. Y., August 10. — Canadian Press. — Rum Row across the Niagara River at Bridgeburg, Ontario, grew to larger proportions early to-day. A fleet of sixteen loaded boats now is lined up waiting favorable conditions for the dash to the United States shore. Four large motor boats were members of the flotilla.

The United States coast guard, aware of the increase in the Canadian fleet, put on new crews during the night and prepared for a long siege.

Grand Island in the Niagara River, is proving a haven for the rum runners for the distance around the island is so great that the border patrolmen are unable adequately to cover the territory. In consequence the runners are able to throw off their cargoes there and await foggy weather for the transfer across the United States channel of river.

Two Investigators Ordered To Inquire Into Circumstances of Passenger Plane's Nose Dive to Death.—MacBrien Denies Report That It Was Overloaded.

GRAVENHURST, Ont., August 10 (Canadian Press). — The five Americans injured when the six-passenger amphibian airplane crashed on the rocks with the loss of two lives yesterday, will all recover, it was stated at Calydor Sanitarium to-day.

The body of Robert Erving, 18-year-old Pittsburgh youth, who was instanly killed when the plane fell nose first near Beaumaris, Lake Muskoka, will be taken to Pittsburgh, but no arrangements have been made for the burial of Pilot Charles Haines, of Miami.

Had Been Notorious Bootlegger.

(Special to The Examiner.)

MIAMI, Fla., August 10. — The death of Pilot Charles E. Haines in the crash at Beaumaris, Ontario, brings to a close one of the most varied and colorful of careers. His life in Florida was quite in keeping with the spirit of romance which pervades the atmosphere of this southern coast line. Some of the ancient buccaneers, brave men with their own code, have their counter part in the daring, courageous, laughter-loving modern army of aviators and speed boat captains who regarded tolerantly or even with admiration by an indulgent populace, have made violation of America's prohibition laws a jest rather than a crime.

It is true that the humor of the business of playing hide and seek with the prohibition navy and the coastguard airmen among the palm-fringed Florida keys is sometimes shadowed with tragedy. It was so in the case of Haines when he shot and killed a Miami policeman in mistake for a hi-jacker recently, but the attitude of a whole population toward the rum-runners is well illustrated by the fact that a jury of his peers acquitted him of a charge of murder. The spirit of fair play asserted itself when it was proved that Haines, after his arrest, had been maltreated frightfully by the dead officer's fellow-officers.

A wartime airman with an honorable record and decorations honorably won in the great adventure with the American Army flying corps, Haines came here after the war, married and established his home. The spirit of adventure strong within him, and restlessness born of the stress of war, urging from the quiet paths of peace, Haines blithly entered the popular pastime of running rum from the Bahamas. He owned three airplanes before he was through with the "game," operating one himself and the others operated by pilots of equal daring and skill.

The fact that he was a rum runner is no reflection upon his capacity as an aero pilot. Indeed, quite the reverse in this case, for it takes a pilot of extraordinary skill to outwit, outdistance and befool the air patrol fleet of the United States Florida coast guards.

Haines laughed at them all, did his "business" with an engaging openness and early in the spring of this year attracted the jealousy and cupidity of the hijackers, to whom the rum runner is as the sparrow to the hawk.

He was attacked and robbed of valuable loads of liquor several times, mostly as he was nearing his home with it in his automobile.

He tolerated it as all part of the game for a time, but the worm will turn, and Haines did, too. He heard that hi-jackers had planned to relieve him of a load on one bright night, and ambushed himself in the tall grass near his home. The adventure came. A car rolled up to his driveway. It spilled out men and Charlie

Grain Vessel Runs Ashore Below Montreal—Two Others Follow in Fog.

LINERS DELAYED.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 10—(Canadian Press)—Liners in the port today, including the C.P. Duchess of Atholl, the Cunard Alaunia, and the Anchor-Donaldson liner Athenia, were unable to sail on schedule time with nearly 2,500 passengers as a result of a collision in the river 30 miles from Montreal at Varennes, where it is believed the steamers Aldebaran, Innerton, and Illingworth are ashore, the latter blocking the channel, and shutting Montreal away from the sea temporarily.

The agents of the three unfortunate steamers, Thomas Harling and Sons of Montreal, are as yet in ignorance as to the true state of affairs, they state, and will not get anything definite until they receive word from the tugs and the surveyor who is accompanying them to render assistance if possible. The three ships left Montreal this morning for Europe with full loads of grain as a result of the heavy demand for that commodity which has become apparent in the past few days.

After clearing Montreal almost at the same time with the Illingworth in the van, the ships ran into dense fog near Varennes. The Illingworth grounded and before she could issue any warning to the other downbound vessels the Aldebaran fouled her, carrying away a few plates on the bows and loosening her anchor and cable.

Ananias the Second Finds Lying Pays, Crawls from Under Crime Confession

LOS ANGELS, Cal. Aug. 10.—When Earl Hodgerson was arrested charged with possessing a quantity of narcotics asserted to have been found in his trunk, he confessed that the drugs belonged to him according to testimony introduced during his trial before Superiar Judge Aggeler.

But Hogerson took the stand in court and refuted the confession with the statement that he is a notorious liar, with such success that the jury hearing his case was unable to reach a verdict and Judge Aggeler discharged them and ordered a retrial.

Dr. Benjamin Blank, county jail physician, was the first witness called by Grant Cooper, Hodgerson's attorney, in an attempt to repudiate the confession.

"Hogerson is a narcotic addifct is he not?" Attorney Cooper asked the physician.

"Yes," was the reply.

"And all narcotic addicts are liars, aren't they?"

"Most of them are," Dr. Blank replied.

Hodgerson was then called to the stand.

"You're a narcotic addict, aren't you?" his attorney asked.

"Yes," Hodgerson answered.

"And a great liar?"

"Well, Dr. Blank says I am, so it must be so."

At this point Clifford Crail, deputy district attorney in charge of the case, offered to stipulate that Hodgerson is a liar and further questioning was waived by Attorney Cooper.

According to the prosecution Hodgerson is an escaped convict from the Missouri penitentiary.

Detective Who Never Sleeps' Dozes in Car; Thief Helps Himself To Spare Tire and Gas

HELENA, Mont., — Captain J. M. Adamson, known by the sign that once adorned the back of his large touring car, as J. M. Adamson, Detective, the Man Who Never Sleeps, dozed off the other night. It broke the habit of 61 years, and it was costly. While Capt. Adamson slept someone stole the spare tire from his automobile and drained the gasoline tank.

Immediately following the theft, the captain purchased a mattress—a luxurious mattress. It was not intended merely to secret his wallet beneath or to use in pressing his trousers. Capt. Adamson has removed the first sign from the back of his automobile. In its place he put a placard bearing the legend: Capt. Adamson, Former Detective, Sleeps Day Times So He Can Meet Prominent People at Night.

'WIFE' OF SUGAR MAGNATE SAYS HE DUPED HER WITH MOCK PRIEST

Enters Breach of Promise Suit Against 'Husband' of Five Years.

SUPPLANTED BY CHUM.

News of Deception Broken When Raid Catches Him at Hotel With Other Woman.

NEW YORK, August 10. — Charging that she was tricked into a fake marriage with him and was deserted when after a time he fell in love with her best girl friend, Senorita Raquel Albert has brought suit for $250,000 against Don Jose Casanova, multimillionaire banker and sugar magnate of Cuba.

Prior to bringing suit, Senorita Albert instigated a raid on Casanova's apartment here which resulted in charges of white slavery being preferred against him when the young woman she accuses of having won him from her was found with him after they had come together from Havana. The couple had booked passage on a liner to Europe.

Casanova has left for the continent without filing a reply to the suit. His side of the story has not been told and is awaited with interest.

Behind the prosaic wording of the petition in the Cuban beauty's suit is a far more interesting story, one which she proposes to tell at the trial unless Cosanova legitimatizes her union with him. Ignoring the fact that under Cuban law that union has some semblance of legality the young woman charges breach of promise.

Would Warn Others.

Senorita Raquel, through an interpreter (for she speaks English but alightly) told the story of her romance with the millionaire for a purpose, she says—that other girls contemplating marriage "may learn the bitter truth, that to trust a man is to invite him to commit treachery."

The senorita is Spanish born but was taken to Cuba by her parents when 6 years old. There she was placed in a convent to remain ten years. Emerging she became a student of music and art and eventually was sent to New York for a period of grand opera and visits to museums. It was on this trip that she met Casanova, who spends much of his time here.

"It was a fateful visit," the senorita said. "Almost his first words to me were 'You are heaven on earth to me.' He was most persistent with his attentions, showered me with gifts and made my stay in New York a most pleasant one. He even moved to the same hotel that he might, he said, be near me, sleep under the same roof, breathe the same air.

He Was Ardent Lover.

'Perhaps a more ardent lover never existed than Casanova when he was courting me those four momentous months in this city five years ago. He used superlative terms in proposing marriage. The first day he met me he begged me to marry him. Only after many months of wooing did I consent to become his wife."

The young woman returned to Cuba with her chaperon, the wife of a Cuban senator, and Casanova followed. He was introduced to her family and again made her many presents. Her engagement ring was a sapphire, surrounded by diamonds, in the shape of a heart.

"When the time for our marriage came, Jose insisted upon a quiet ceremony, took charge of all arrangements himself and provided for a religious union only to take place in my mother's home," continued the young woman.

"I was on Jan 1, 1924, that we were married, or I believed we were. At an improvised altar in my home with my mother, my younger sister Becky and three witnesses, Jose and I were united by a man he brought to the house in clerical garb and who was introduced to us as a priest. He left immediately after the ceremony and I never saw him again. Jose and I went to the home he had provided until he should erect the $150,000 home in the country he had promised me for my very own, al-

Heavy Rains Cause Breakdown of Surface of Lindsay Road.

MANY DETOURS.

LINDSAY, Aug. 10. — Motorists who use the highway between Lindsay and Peterborough are having their troubles, following the recent heavy rainfalls. The stretch of highway between Hill Head and Reaboro was, this week, closed to traffic, as the road went completely to pieces.

The Dufferin Construction Company, which has the contract on the Peterborough-Lindsay highway between Omemee and Fowler's Corners has made splendid progress. The grades have been cut down and the road widened as far as water trough hill.

Many motorists in order to reach Peterborough from Lindsay and at the same time avoid the detours, are motoring as far as Newcastle and tapping the Port Hope highway.

Australian Wins Single Sculls Championship From American.

SLOTEN, Aug. 10 (Canadian Press) —Joe Wright and Jack Guest, representing Canada in the final of the Double Sculls of the Olympic Games here to-day, were defeated by the United States pair.

Paul Costello and Charles McIlvaine, Penn A. C., Philadelphia, were the United States' representatives.

In winning the United States' first championship of the Olympic rowing regatta, the American double sculling combination beat the Canadians by a margin of six lengths.

Pearce Wins Singles

Bob Pearce, Australian rower, won the Single Sculls Olympic championship to-day, defeating Kenneth Myers of Philadelphia. The Australian star won by five lengths. He appeared more exhausted at the finish than Myers, but quickly recovered.

Pearce out-rowed Myers from the start, jumping into a length lead in the first 150 metres with long, sweeping strokes and adding steadily to his advantage.

Myers fought gamely to hang on during the first half of the race, but at the 1,500 metre mark was already trailing by a length and a half.

Pearce's more powerful strokes quickly settled the outcome during the last half, the Australian doubling his advantage within the next 500 metres and passing the finishing line fully five lengths ahead.

In the final for pairs with coxswain, the Swiss Schohlin brothers beat the French Marcelle brothers by two lengths.

Italy Wins Title

SLOTEN, Aug. 10 (Canadian Press) —Italy won the first of seven Olympic rowing championships to-day, defeating Switzerland by seven lengths in the four-oared shells with coxswain, while Germany took the second championship in the pair oared shells without coxswain, defeating Great Britain.

U. S. Eight Wins.

The University of California, representing the United States in the eight oared rowing competition, defeated the English eight in the final for the championship to-day. The Golden Bears' margin of victory over the powerful Thames Rowing Club crew was three-quarters of a length.

California took an early lead in the race and held it all the way. Their time was six minutes, 3 1-5 seconds.

Cambridge University won by a half length in the fours without coxswain championship final, being timed at 6 minutes, 36 seconds, to the United States' quartette's 6.37.

Mummy's Quiet Rest Disturbed By X-Ray

MONTREAL, Que.—After reclining many years in peace and quietness, Hawara-el-Maktaa, the Egyptian mummy at the McGill Stratcona Museum, has been the subject of an X-ray photograph taken by E. Lionel Judah, curator of the McGill museums. The embalmed body of the lady arrived at McGill in 1897, clad comfortably in mummy wrapping, being presented to the University by Sir Thomas Roddick. It came from Fayoum, Egypt—one of three mummies at present "at home" in the Strathcona Museum.

One mummy is that of a princess elaborately bound in the choicest of linen and another is that of a commander roughly bound and embalmed with bituminous pitch instead of spices. The lady's mummy, which was partly unwrapped in order that X-rays could be taken more rapidly, shows that medium condition of rank between the other two, it was stated at the museum. The wrappings of linen are not nearly as fine as that used for the princess and the speciment shows more of a bituminous pitch than of a spice embalming.

There is no gold placed directly on the face as there is in princess mummy, but there is a gold leaf mask covering the whole upper part of the mummy, with a face painted on it, for which vegetable dyes have been used. All these things indicate that Hawara-el-Maktaa was a lady in comfortable circumstances, it was explained at the museum.

The X-ray photograph reveals a normal human skeleton. Unquestionably the specimen is that of a woman ranging in age between 25 and 40 years. The arms are folded across the breast, whereas, in the two other specimens at McGill, the arms are bound close to the sides Hawara-el-Maktaa had an excellent set of teeth; her bones were well knit, and there is no evidence of fracture often seen in this kind of X-ray, Mr. Judah pointed out. The plate of the skull shows a peculiar shaped window, through which the brain was probably removed for the embalming.

The X-ray has been found useful in the study of mummies, because so much information may be obtained thereby without material injury to the subject. If all the wrappings are removed, the body rapidly decomposes, but in the use of the X-ray photography they do not have to be removed to obtain the information wanted, and the risk of decomposition is obviated.

Wise Golfer Is Calm; Cursing Injures Health

ALBANY. — The "golf widow" can obtain scant support in her struggle against the attractions of the game from the attitude of experts of the New York State Health Department.

They believe that while golf may be abused, "it would be a national calamity for the false idea to prevail that there is anything intrinsically dangerous in the game for those in normal health, or even for those whose health is impaired, if they are guided by competent medical advice."

The department has a set of rules for golfers which, if followed, will reduce to a minimum any danger which may exist from the exertion of the game. Here they are:

"If your physician advises against golf, don't play.

"Don't rush between holes. You won't hold up anyone if you walk steadily at a moderate pace, and your game will not suffer thereby.

"Choose fairly level courses if possible, and take hills very slowly.

"Take time to digest a light lunch. Heavy eating has nothing to recommend it, except sociability.

"Don't continue the game if you feel dizzy, weak, or otherwise unfit.

"Don't lose your temper. It won't help your game, your health, or the work of your caddy.

"After the game and the shower, protect yourself from drafts and cold winds.

"If you must play in the rain, change into dry clothes after a shower and get a hard rubdown immediately after you come in.

"During the off-season a moderate amount of indoor golf is a valuable form of exercise and will keep you hopeful for an early spring."

The department advises a medical examination for all golf addicts, but adds that the golfer himself must use his own judgment regarding his physical limitations.

Referring to the occasional death of a golfer during a game, it is pointed out that some players "over-golf," by playing 18 to 36 holes of golf under a blazing sun or in a heavy rain, rushing from one hole to the next, and completing the day's "recreation" thoroughly exhausted.

Sawmill Destroyed By Fire

HEAVY LOSS SUFFERED BY LUMBER FIRM

Nearly Million Dollars Damage Done in Fire at Hawkesbury.

CAUSE UNKNOWN.

Second Time Plant Has Been Destroyed in Past Three Years.

HAWKESBURY, Ont., Aug. 10 (Canadian Press).—The big saw-mill of the Hawkesbury Lumber Company here, covering about two acres was completely destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon and a lath mill nearby also fell a prey to the flames. The mill itself gave employment to 100 men and its loss will also throw out of work some 300 others. No definite information could be gained as to the loss until there had been a check-up, but the office of the company intimated that the early estimate of a million dollars would be somewhat high.

The fire started in the lath mill. A belt slipped off and the friction caused a spark which ignited the shavings. In a moment there was a roaring fire and it had soon spread to the big mill. Both mills were of wooden construction, being one story high, with the exception of a filer's room which formed a second story over a portion of the big mill. The fire developed so rapidly that there was no opportunity to save the big mill, known as Number 3, nor the lath mill and accordingly the efforts of the fire fighters were concentrated on protecting Number 2 sawmill, which is somewhat smaller than No. 3, and another smaller one.

Forces Unite

The company's own fire-fighting apparatus joined with the town fire brigade and apparatus from the International Pulp Mills to bring the flames under subjection. Several times No. 2 mill blazed up, but each time the fire was quenched. There was not much lumber lost as there was comparatively little in the mill and the lumber yards themselves were some distance away. The flames did not reach them.

For a time it looked as if a portion of the town would be wiped out and the cottagers hurried their furniture to the streets.

However, none of the houses was burned. The heat of the big mill burning was terrific, and with a fairly strong wind blowing, for a time the situation was exceedingly critical.

Had Double Shift

The big mill was working night and day handling this season's cut, all of which had already been sold, an official of the company stated. The fire is a heavy blow on the town and will greatly interfere with the operations of the company for the rest of the season.

This is the second big fire the Hawkesbury Lumber Company has suffered in the past three years, the former entailing a loss of about a million dollars.

No one was injured in yesterday's fire, although many of the workmen had to leave tools and other belongings to hasten away so rapidly did the flames spread. At 6 o'clock last night, the fire that started shortly before 3 o'clock was still smouldering but definitely under control.

esn't Want Divorce, esn't want Divorce, Blames Hollywood for Discord in Family

LOS ANGELES, August 10. — Although Tom Mix, cowboy film star, declares he has given his wife, Mrs. Victoria Forde Mix, approximately $820,000 in a property settlement with which she may establish a home in Europe if she desires, he is confident she will not divorce him.

Discord in the Mix household preceding Mrs. Mix's departure for Europe a month ago, the millionaire actor ascribes to the "papier mache and tinsel" of Hollywood.

Some of his wife's friends, he said, caused quarrels and unhappiness. Mix to-day said he knew, however, that their mutual love for their small daughter Tomasina would bring them together again. He said:

"Mrs. Mix's rfiends were not my friends. I tried to be a good fellow and play host, but I got nothing but nervous indigestion for my efforts. So when they came to my house I would be absent.

"I could have stood it all and flattered the beautiful women and kissed their hands, as other men do, but it was not in my make-up."

The property settlement made about a year ago gives Mrs. Mix $500,000 in cash, clothing and jewellery valued at $270,000, and $50,000 for a home abroad the actor said. He added:

"When she told me she wanted to go abroad I told her she could have anything that would make her happy—even a divorce. But I am sure she doesn't want a divorce and that she will come back to the home that is always open to her. Not a word was said about a divorce when I kissed her good bye at the train."

IMPROVEMENT IS SHOWN IN CROP PROSPECTS

United States' Report Forecasts Bigger Yield Than Last Year.

GOOD GROWING WEATHER.

Fruit Crops, Especially Apples, Promise Substantial Increase.

WASHINGTON, August 10 (Canadian Press). — A marked improvement in crop prospects during the month of July, particularly in the Great Plains area extending from Texas and Central Colorado to Montana, was noted yesterday by the crop reporting board of the Department of Agriculture which forecast yields per acre about four per cent. above the average of recent years.

Nearly all the grains and especially wheat and corn shared in the general advance due to excellent weather in most sections. The corn forecast of 3,030,000,000 bushels, based on the conditions on August 1, is an increase of 11 per cent. in the department's production outlook of 2,736,000,000 bushels on July 1.

Produce Large Crop.

The wheat crop "has demonstrated a remarkable ability to overcome a poor start and produce a large crop," the report said, estimating the combined production of winter and spring wheat at 891,000,000 bushels compared with the July 1 estimate of 800,000,000 and last year's harvest of 873,000,000. Since August 1, the report said, hail damage in Montana exceeded a million bushels but despite this the outlook remains much more favorable than last month's report indicated and far outstrips the five-year average of 808,000,000 bushels.

An example of the upturn in the wheat prospects was the observation that "spring wheat on July 1 was much below average condition, but on August 1, was much above average condition."

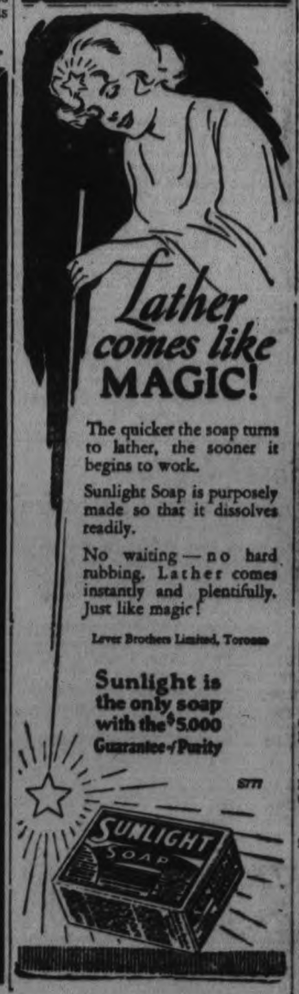
The fruit crops "are developing about as was expected a month ago," the department said, noting particularly promising citrus fruit prospects on the Pacific Coast. The apple crop forecast was for 178,970,000 bushels, a substantial increase over last year's very short crop of 124,455,000 bushels, but about ten per cent. below the five-year average production.

LEAGUE ADVISED OF KELLOGG PACT

Britain Brings Anti-War Treaty Officially Before Nations.

GENEVA, Aug. 9 (Canadian Press). — Great Britain officially brought the Kellogg outlawry of war pact before the League of Nations to-day by transmitting copies of its two notes to Washington on the question.

The League also was informed by Britain that the signature of the Kellogg treaty will not involve a conflict with her obligations resulting from membership in the league.



CHAMBERLAIN TAKING REST

Cushendun As Acting Foreign Secretary, Will Sign Kellogg Compact.

CRITIC ASSAILS ITS TERMS.

LONDON, Aug. 10. — While the British Foreign Office still declares unofficially that there is no mystery behind the Anglo-French naval agreement, it it still declines to publish the text.

It states, furthermore, that early publication is extremely unlikely, as Britain wishes the United States and other powers concerned to have adequate time to think the matter over and reply to Sir Austen Chamberlain's communication of the terms of the Anglo-French "compromise."

Meanwhile, the situation has been complicated by Sir Austen Chamberlain's illness, which is attributed to overwork and will necessitate a long rest. Lord Cushendun, the British representative in the Council of the League of Nations, has in consequence been appointed Acting Foreign Secretary. He instead of Sir Austen will sign the Kellogg compact for the outlawry of war in Paris on Aug. 27.

Treaty Again Criticised

That the Kellogg compact as interpreted by Mr. Kellogg himself and modified by French and British representations has been twisted from the treaty originally intended to prohibit resort to war "into an agreement which gives its signatories the unqualified right to declare war on their own unsupported assertion that it is a war of self-defense" is the editorial allegation of The Manchester Guardian to-day.

The Guardian maintains that in its present form the Kellogg compact is as a peace instrument far inferior to the League Covenant.

"No one will suppose that either M. Briand or Sir Austen Chamberlain was consciously disloyal to the Covenant" it says. "Yet they have gone out of their way to give the Kellogg pact an interpretation which if applied to the Covenant would destroy it.

"Mr. Kellogg" continues the Guardian "proposed a pact to renounce

YOU'D BETTER USE THAT ANCIENT CAR, IN FAR ROCKAWAY

FAR ROCKAWAY, Aug. 10.—Magistrate Farrell hearing traffiv cases in Far Rockaway yesterday, determined the fines imposed on offenders in accordance with the value of their automobiles.

Several drivers of ancient dilapidated cars received suspended sentence, while owners of more expensive cars were fined varying amounts. In parking cases middle priced cars drew one dollar fines, while expensive cars drew two dollars.

One speeding defendant, asked the make of his car, replied that it was "one of those small fellows."

"What year?"

"1922."

"Sentence suspended."

PAVING WORK IS SPEEDED UP

Sewer and Water Connections Rushed After Stormy Session of Council.

AT CAMPBELLFORD.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, August 10. — Following the stormy session in the Council Chamber on Monday night, the Bank of Montreal corner has been cleaned up and the trenches filled in without further delay. The Grand road is open from end to end for traffic and parts of the Havelock road connecting link are open to traffic. The surfacing crew is at work from the far end and is making rapid progress towards the intersection of Church and Queen streets. Part of the intersection and all the street south have already been surfaced. The four sewer and water connections which caused such an uproar in the council chamber are being rushed to completion.

On the east side of the river no surfacing has been done. Front street north, north of the part where the concrete base has been laid, is still closed to traffic, and the road in a rough condition. Part of Mill street is open where the base has been laid, and Front street south, and the remainder of the portion of Mill street to be paved are still barricaded. Curb lines have been laid out on these streets, and it is expected that concrete will be poured there to-day. The excavator has almost completed its work on these streets.

CHURCH SOCIAL AT LAKEFIELD

Many Attend Annual Outing in Connection With St. Paul's and St. Mary's Churches.

SEVERAL BOOTHS.

(Examiner Correspondence)

LAKEFIELD, August 10.—The annual social in connection with St. Paul's and St. Mary's churches was held on the Exhibition grounds on Wednesday afternoon and evening and was largely attended in spite of regattas and various other counter attractions which the era of motor cars has brought within reach. The tea was served in the exhibition hall and was indeed a feast of good things, with attentive waiters and abundance of delectable viands. Mrs. J. A. Johnston, Mrs. Joseph Maloney and Miss J. Maloney were the convenors of the food committee for St. Paul's church, Lakefield and Mrs. Carroll and Mrs. Joseph Ayotte for St. Mary's church, Young's Point.

The grounds were lighted by electricity and four large booths were erected, all doing a rushing business along various lines. Misses E. Kennedy, C. Young, A. Quigley and Mr. F. Carroll were in charge of the refreshment stand where ice cream, soft drinks and candy were sold.

Two of the other booths were devoted to the games which draw a crowd and hold them with fascinated interest, one was in charge of Messrs. Darcy Hill and Maurice Meade and the other with Messrs. Pluard and Bernard Allen in charge.

The fancy booth was in charge of Mrs. Elmsley, Misses Kearney, L. Garvey, Fortier and Veronica Johnston. Mr. Battisby of Campbellford ran the wheel of fortune for the fore part of the evening but was relieved by Mr. Thomas Turcott of Peterborough. Mr. W. MacPherson assisted at the wheel.

The social was honored by the presence of His Lordship the Bishop of Peterborough; Rev. Fathers Finn, Carroll and Maloney were oresent and Rev. R. T. C. and Mrs. Dwelley of St. Aidan's Church, attended also Visitors from Peterborough and the neighboring country and a large number of village people thronged the grounds and spent a very happy evening for aside from the entertainment it was a re-union of old friends. Financially the success is assured and rewards the workers for the great parochial effort which means weeks of preparation and at least two full days' hard work. The spirit of co-operation was in evidence everywhere and contributed largely to the gratifying results.

Messrs. G. J. Elmsley and Walter Young sold tickets at the gate and Messrs. D. Garvey and R. Maloney took tickets at the hall.

The collectors for the fancy booth which went over the top with a record success were Mrs. A. G. Lawless and Mrs. George Charlton.

The ladies of the two parishes and the young girls assisted by several of the young men constituted a corps of efficient waiters at the supper tables.

Rev. J. J. Garvey was here, there and everywhere, welcoming visitors, encouraging and helping the workers and chatting with old friends who united with his parishioners in thankfulness for his restored health.

The drawing for the silver tea service, the hundred pound sack of sugar and the hand embroidered centrepiece were postponed till a later date as the lateness of the hour made it inadvisable to have the drawing at the close of the social. The results of the drawing will be announced later.

CATCHER OUT FOR SIX WEEKS

(Examiner Staff Correspondence).

CAMPBELLFORD, August 10. — Gloom and sorrow have replaced the usual gayety of the soft ball players and fans as the result of an accident last night which resulted in a broken leg for Leo Bush, catcher for the Outlaws. The incident happened in the first part of the ninth innings when a runner was dashing against time and the ball for the home plate. Leo was standing with one foot on plate and watching the ball which had been thrown to him. The next thing the crowd saw was that he was lying prone in the dust and unable to rise. There were no medical men on the sidelines and a spectator's car was quickly volunteered to removed the injured boy.

Examination by a medical doctor revealed the fact that the large bone below the knee, the tibia, was fractured. The doctor said last night that Bush will be unable to use his foot for from six to eight weeks.

RETIRED BARRISTER HAS LOST MEMORY

Goes to Grist Mill and Found Wandering Hours Later.

BELLEVILLE, August 10. — George G. Thrasher, a well known lawyer, who resided for some years at Stirling Village, on Wednesday had a harrowing experience in that he suffered loss of memory. He had of late been assisting a relative, Floyd Thrasher of Thurlow Township, upon the farm and on Wednesday was sent to a mill with a team and wagon to bring home a grist. He started home but evidently became confused and drove to Marmora, Madoc, Crookston and other places, a distance of at least 40 miles. Yesterday he was found near Stirling Village, leading one of the horses. The other horse attached to the wagon was found in an exhausted condition. Thrasher was taken to the home of Floyd Thasher, where he is under medical attention.

GRANDMOTHER'S DAY IS OBSERVED

Millbrook W. I. Members Hold Picnic at Home of J. L. Byam.

MILLBROOK, August 10.—The local branch of the Women's Institute held a delightful picnic outing, in the form of a "Grandmother's Day", on Wednesday on the beautiful lawns of Mr. J. L. Byam's residence Bank street, when more than sixty members and visitors were in attendance.

The district president, Mrs. T. A. Skitch, of Baliieboro, was present and gave an inspiring address ,her theme appropriately centering round "Grandmothers' and Mothers' Problems."

In her preliminary remarks, after referring briefly to the significance of the Institute motto, "For Home and Country", Mrs. Skitch dealt with the happy spirit of unity and true sisterhood which characterizes institute activities: "If a stranger should visit one of our meeting she would at once be made welcome, regardless of her financial or social standing. We should judge only by moral standards and by personal worth."

A recreation hour in connection with the regular meetings, and an interchange of visitations between branches, the visiting branch to put on the program, were among the suggestions advanced by the president for increasing the interest and usefulness of the monthly gatherings.

The fact of criticism was kindly dealt with, mention being made of one man's statement, "There goes a bunch to another G.G.O.G. meetin.": his interpretation being "the giggle, gabble, gobble, git meeting." With understanding the name would be changed to "the genial, gentle, genuine, and generous society", Mrs. Skitch declared she was firmly convinced.

A very touching word-picture was drawn by the speaker as she recalled from memory's page the grand-

48 MILL RATE FOR MILLBROOK

Council Sets Tax Levy at Four Mills Higher Than Last Year.

CLERK RESIGNS.

MILLBROOK, Aug. 10.—Millbrook Council met in regular session on Wednesday evening. Reeve W. T. Wood in the chair, and members all present except Councillor Sayles, absent in Toronto.

The clerk read a communication received from the Department of Public Highways, Toronto, approving agreement submitted regarding paving contract, and promising to pay cost of the entire twenty-foot strip of the connecting links in the country road system.

The rate was struck as follows:

Sidewalk debentures, 3 mills; street lighting and fire hall, 4 mills; local improvements, 11 mills; school rate, 23 mills. Total, 48 mills.

This is an increase of 4 mills over the rate struck last year.

Lang—Eakins: That the following accounts be ordered paid:

Hydro-Electric, street lighting, $71.17; town hall current, $1.84, a total of $73.01. S. Donnelly, $75.90; H. Skitch, $4.15; S. Bonner, $3.75; B. Rafter, $16.20; G. Freelove, $1.00; H. Nattress, $27.3'0; S. E. Eakins, $2.15; F. A. Kidd, $6.38; Bell Telephone Company, $14.55; Dunlop Tire Company, $221.48.

L. C. Russell, town clerk, asked council to relieve him of the duties of his position as soon as convenient, owing to his having accepted a business position in the town of Port Hope.

Reeve Wood and the members of the council expressed sincere regret at Mr. Russell's leaving town, and mentioned in the most favorable manner the way in which his duties as a public official had been discharged. The pleasant association, in connection with the council meetings and other occasions concerned with the municipal welfare, were also spoken of with genuine appreciation.

A special meeting of the council will be called for Saturday evening when consideration of the best manner of filling the positions of town clerk and of tax collector will be the chief business of the session.

Mr. Welcher, engineer in charge of the paving and work in connection therewith, was present and addressed the council, giving satisfactory report of the progress which the work is making considering the adverse weather conditions in recent weeks.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 10.—Miss Evelyn Irwin has returned to her home here after spending a month in Toronto.

The Rev. N. Clark Wallace and G. A. Ironside are delegates to the Canadian Legion, B.E.S.L. convention in Kingston.

The Rev. Ernest Harston, Oshawa, was a visitor to town yesterday afternoon.

Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Irwin and daughter, Toronto, are visiting Dr. Irwin's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Irwin, Front street.

Mr. and Mrs. MacLaren, and son Harry, are in Shannonville where Mr MacLaren's mother is ill.

There was no tennis tournament on Wednesday afternoon but Belleville Argyle Club will play here this Saturday. Arrangements have not yet been completed, but is is expected that Cobourg will visit Campbellford on Wednesday, 15th.

the use of war simply and without qualification as an instrument of national policy. What finally emerges is a pact which not only textually admits the right to go to war in self-defense but the preliminary discussion on which gave the right of self-defense a scope and an emphasis which makes it doubtful whether the loopholes for war are not on th whole wider than before the discussions began.

Kellog's Explanation Quoted

"Mr. Kellogg himself says the pact in no way restricts or impairs the right of every nation to decide on its own responsibility whether any given circumstances require it to make war in self-defense. That interpretation is explicitly confirmed by M. Briand and Sir. Austen Chamberlain in notes which have for the countries they represent as much binding authority as the treaty itself.

"Add to this Mr. Kellogg's further assurance that defensive war may be waged 'regardless of treaty provisions' and the case for Germany's right to invade Belgium in 1914 is complete.

"The Covenant of the League of Nations deliberately and definitely restricted the right to declare war even in circustances which would give color to the pretext of self-defense. There would in all cases be a period of delay before war could lawfully be declared. It made no reservations about self-defense. The ultimate right of self-defense is inalienable just because no treaty can take it away. For that reason it needs no specific safeguard.

"The Kellogg pact has occasioned a strange and ominous return to old ways of thinking. American participation in world affairs is worth paying for but if the price is to be resurrection of unlimited control of the right to wage war on an uncorroborated assertion of national defense, then the price is too high."

mother in the home, her loving service for others, her busy days, and resting periods in the big rocking-chair, though even then her hands would be busy with knitting or mending; and the beautiful manner in which she portrayed the Christ life, and earnestly endeavored to have her children and grandchildren walk in the paths of righteousness.

"Now, how do the grandmothers of to-day compare with our own dear grandmothers? Do we give up any selfish desires, or deny ourselves anything for the good of our families? Do we stay home to make, and mend, and in short do all in our power to have our homes pleasant for our loved ones? Don't you think, too often, when our children are longing for a nourishing dinner or mother's or grandmother's own cooking, we just open up a can or two and give them a 'tin can meal'?"

Rather sternly the present day practice of letting the children 'come up' as best they may, while mother and grandmother are busy with social and possibly political functions, was scored, the moral obligation being strongly presented.

"May we each live our life as nearly perfect as we can with the help of our Heavenly Father; make this world a better place in which to live; and at the last we shall have no regrets, but will hear Him say, "Well done", and with all our loved ones, children and grandchildren, spend eternity with Him."

A good sports' program was run off, following the business session, the items including children's races in which Maretta Elgar and Ida Lunn were winners; a "free for all" race, with Vaneta Ingram and Mrs. R. Guthrie carrying off the prizes; also a young women's race when Ruth Thorndyke came first and Stella Olan second; a grandmothers' darning contest (five minutes being the time limit for mending a rather large hole in a woollen sock) Mrs. John McBride being awarded the prize, a dainty piece of lustre china, for the neatness of her work, the judges deciding it held first place; a unique contest, suggestive of 'Maggie and Jiggs', was that in which the grandmothers essayed trial as to which could throw a rolling-pin the greatest distance, Mrs. T. H. Aiken holding the record in this competition; finally, a hemming contest, in which there were a large number of entrants, rounded out the list, three minutes being allowed for the work, and neatness being the basis of award; Mrs. Howard Lunn received a handsome vase for standing at the head of the contestants. Mrs. Aiken's prize was a tea-pot, of convenient size, and on the 'Brown Betty' order, only in this case the color was deep blue, with floral decoration in dainty coloring and design.

Tables for tea were arranged at the side of the house, vases of mid-summer flowers adding fragrance and beauty to the bountifully-spread board. The grandmothers were all seated first, being the guests of honor for the day, and each wearing a button-hole bouquet which had been pinned on upon arrival at the picnic grounds. At either end of the long table which accomodated most of the guests for the first serving, were Rev. P. C. Howard and Rev. W. W. Jones. Mrs Howard and Mrs. Jones and Rev. R. J. and Mrs. Stillwell, who are visiting here from Douglas, South Georgia, being also given places of honor when the guests were being placed

Music and social converse filled out the time happily, after appetites had been satisfied, and the gathering, which was one of the most successful of the many which the Institute has sponsored in the community, was brought to a close with many expressions of thanks to the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Bvam, for their hospitality, and to Mrs. Skitch for her inspiring address.

OBITUARY

CHARLES F. ARNOTT

The funeral of the late Charles F. Arnott took place in Woodland Cemetery, Hamilton, on Monday, Aug. 6th. Death came very suddenly while at his work on the bowling green. He had been employed by the government for the past twenty seven years as gardener at Queen street asylum, Toronto, then transferred to Whitby until eighteen months ago where he was called to Hamilton where he made many friends. In religion he was a life long Anglican, also an Orangeman. The many floral tributes showed the high esteem in which he was held. He leaves to mourn their loss a sorrowing wife two daughters and two sons, Hazel and Marjorie at home; Charlie of Hamilton, and Melville of Detroit, Mich.; three sisters and four brothers, Mrs. Frank Lawless, Peterborough, Mrs. Harry Jeffery St. Catharines, Mrs. Ward Hersey, Mich., Bert, Will, and Thomas, of Peterborough, and Jim of Port Haney B.C.

A touch of Variety makes Food more enticing

A poor appetite sometimes needs only a touch of enticing variety to quicken it . . . something different . . . preferably something light.

Quaker Puffed Wheat is utterly unlike any other cereal. The toasted, nutmeat flavour tempts the most finicky appetite. Crunchiness urges mastication, and helps to keep teeth and gums in healthy condition. Starch cells broken down, which makes digestion easy.

Quaker Puffed Wheat is the whole wheat grain, puffed to eight times normal size, and exploded . . . thoroughly cooked and oven-crisped. All the bran is there, but deftly concealed. Serve direct from the package, or warm if you wish.

Quaker Puffed Rice, too

Rice grains, also puffed and exploded. Dainty and light. Easily digested. Always pleasing and inviting to the appetite.

RAILWAY UNION AGREES TO CUT

Men's Representatives Vote 77-3 To Accept Reduction in Wages.

TO END SHORTAGE.

LONDON, August 9 (Canadian Press). — A railway wage reduction of two and one-half per cent. was endorsed to-day by the conference of the National Union of Railwaymen. The delegates favored the settlement by a vote of seventy-seven to three. The reduction was agreed to by representatives of the railway managers and employees on July 27. It was understood that it would apply to all ranks of railway work, starting with the directors of the roads. Its object is to end the financial shortages under which English railways have been struggling.

ICE FIELD BLOCKS SUPPLY EXPEDITION

Supplies For Police Post in Far North Have To Be Taken Overland.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 9. (Canadian Press).—Four days of battering the great ice field in Flager and Buchanan bays failed to provide an opening for the approach of the S.S. Beothic and the Canadian Arctic expedition to the post of Bache Peninsula on Ellesmere Island. An ice pack heavier and greater in extent than any encountered on any previous voyage cut off all approaches by water to this farthest north post and as a result the expedition was forced to abandon their attempt to reach the detachment and landed the supplies at Pram Haven, from where they will be transported to the post.

REFUSES REDUCTION.

TORONTO, August 9. — Canadian Press. — Judge Denton this morning refused to reduce the bail of $100,000 set in the cases of Findley McLeod, Jack Sullivan, Everett McKibbon and Ray Boven, when the four, charged with participating in a mail car robbery here June 20, appeared before him in county court.

PRICE REFUSES TO SEE DANCERS

Will Refer Crandall and His Party to Athletic Commission.

PROMOTER IN TORONTO.

TORONTO, Ont., August 9.—(Special to The Examiner).—The Provincial Government is strongly opposed to further marathon dancing in Ontario.

If Milt Crandall brings his dancers from Crystal Beach to Toronto for the purpose of showing them to Attorney General W. H. Price he will be disappointed. Col. Price will not see the party, but will refer them to the Ontario Athletic Commission. Nor will he receive Crandall personally, he declares.

"The Government is opposed to marathon dancing," Col. Price states. "They do not show a person can dance or do anything. They make a disgusting exhibition of the whole thing.

"Marathon dancing is now a sport. If any person wishes to hold such an event they will have to appear before the Athletic Commission. If they can show any good reason why it should be allowed to live, it will be considered.

"If I were dealing with it, I would refuse," said the Attorney General.

Milt D. Crandall, marathon dance mogul, is in Toronto.

He came to the King Edward Hotel last night, following the closing of his dance stunt at Crystal Beach, engaged the suite of rooms that is known as the Prince of Wales' suite and is generally enjoying himself like a prince. "I slept in the Prince's bed," he smiled conifdently, "and I had a most refreshing sleep."

And then he proceeded to have his breakfast privately in the sitting room of the suite.

Crandall is here for two purposes. He is intent on playing the role of dance marathon missionary to convince Attorney General W. H. Price, Mayor Sam McBride and all the rest of Toronto that his dance is not a dance of death and demoralization. That is No. 1. His No. 2 reason is that he is keen to get an engagement at Sunnyside in Exhibition time and he has visions of raking in a plentiful coin harvest there if here is allowed to stage a marathon dance.

This apostle of long distance dancing is no wild eyed promoter. He said rather proudly that he had been a City Editor and an Editor on Pittsburgh papers and also President of the Pittsburgh Press Association. It was "Cash and Carry" Pyle's "Bunion Derby"—the cross American marathon—that put the notion into Crandall's head to stage dance marathons.

"I looked over the bunion derby and all these other marathons and I saw that the one thing they lacked was the hug and kiss finish to give a thrill to it" confided Mr. Crandall. "That could be done with a dance—so I staged a dance. Of course, I know they talk of me as 'the racket man' and all that sort of thing, but there's nothing to it. I am honestly trying to give the public an entertainment novelty. I want a chance to show Toronto and Ontario that it is a good entertainment. That is all I ask."

GUIDES CAMPING AT CONSECON LAKE

Campbellford Girls Leave For Two Weeks Under Canvas.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 10.—There were twenty Girl Guides from Campbellford in camp this afternoon at Fonton Point on Consecon Lake. The girls made the journey by motor yesterday morning and reports of first impressions which were brought back by the drivers of the cars, presage a most enjoyable two weeks outing for the girls. There will be twenty more girls from town arrive in Camp over the week-end.

The camp site is on the property of Major and Mrs. Fonton of Belleville. Miss Dorothy Rogers, Toronto, is camp commandant and is thoroughly qualified for the position. There are excellent bathing facilities and a regular swimming patrol has been formed. The camp itself has but one permanent building, the girls living in tents. During their two weeks there, every effort will be made to advance the work of the guides and increase the efficiency of the campers along these lines.

A CLOSED SEASON.

Marathon dancing is to be viewed by the Ontario Government as a professional sport, and thus will come under the jurisdiction of the Ontario Athletic Commission, which will make it easy to prevent any more of these crazy contests from being inflicted upon the people of this Province.

Like in other professional sport, promoters of marathon dance competitions will have to secure a permit from the commission, and there is not the slightest chance of that organization granting permission for the holding of such contests in Ontario.

Attorney-General Price has been quick to sense the trend of public opinion in this issue, and equally quick in providing a means of effectually disposing of long-distance dancing so far as this Province is concerned.

Mr. Crandall et al will have to look elsewhere for a sucker crop; Ontario has declared a closed season.

PETERBOROUGH CITIZENS HONORED.

Congratulations are in order to two well-known Peterborough citizens who have been honored by election as president of Ontario bodies.

Lieut.-Col. Chas. Ackerman at Kingston on Wednesday was unanimously chosen as head of the Ontario command of the Canadian Legion, British Empire Service League, while at home John Comstock was being chosen without opposition as president of the Ontario Funeral Directors' Association.

These promotions are a tribute to the worth of the men thus honored, and are appreciated by their fellow-citizens.

The Canadian Legion of the Ontario command, of which Colonel Ackerman will be the leader during the next year, speaks for the war veterans of the whole Province, and it is a fitting recognition of his services on behalf of ex-service men, which began with the formation of the first organization of returned soldiers in Peterborough, that he should be given the responsibility of provincial leadership.

Mr. Comstock heads an organization of which the principal aim is to raise the standard of the profession of its members and to provide better funeral service for Ontario.

His election is evidence that the new president enjoys the esteem and respect of his fellow funeral directors.

HOW CANADA PROSPERS.

Canada continues to prosper amazingly, as statistics from various fields of industry and business prove beyond a doubt.

That prolific centre of information, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, has just issued some interesting figures along this line.

The physical volume of business for Canada, the bureau reports, was for the first six months of the present year at a higher volume than in any similar period.

The index shows an increase of 14 per cent. over the first six months of 1927.

The value of construction contracts was 34 per cent. greater; of mining output, 7 per cent. greater, and of manufactured products, 5 per cent. greater.

Car loadings increased by 5½ per cent., loadings in the Western railway division being 610,000 cars, as compared with 506,000 in the same period of 1927.

The index of industrial employment stood at 116.3 in July, while in the same month last year it was 108.4 per cent.

Other evidences of substantial business expansion are increases in current loans of $185,000,000 in 12 months and in call loans of 52 per cent.

In this connection the bureau says: "The marked increase in current loans has reversed the situation of a few years ago when the banks found themselves compelled to hold a large proportion of their assets in the form of permanent securities."

CONGRATULATIONS.

The press of Ontario has been extending its felicitations to M. A. James, veteran editor of the Canadian Statesman, Bowmanville, upon the celebration of his golden jubilee as editor of that well-known weekly.

The Examiner is very glad to associate itself with those other papers that have paid tribute to Mr. James upon the unique event of an editor celebrating a half-century of service with one paper.

For fifty years he and the Statesman have been together, and, in addition to the long service mark he has established, Mr. James has achieved another record in that he has absorbed through purchase no fewer than seven competitors whose papers were merged with his own, while during the same period three other rival papers expired on their own account.

A most interesting feature of the golden jubilee editor of the Statesman is the eighty-year-old editor's talk to his readers, in which he compares present-day conditions in newspaper work in general with those prevailing in 1878 when he entered the journalistic profession.

"At that time," points out the Border Cities Star, in expressing congratulations to Mr. James, "the linotype was not in use, the gasoline engine was undreamed of, the motor car was entirely unknown, the telephone was only in its experimental stages, electric light and other Edison products were still in the background, horses were drawing street cars, the gramophone had not been conceived, the airplane was still 30 years in the future, there were no radios, electric refrigeration had not been thought of, there were few bathrooms and few pavements.

"The world has moved a lot in 50 years, but there are indications that the next half-century will produce strides just as great, perhaps greater."

THE STOCK MARKET AGAIN.

Once more a lot of people have been taught that there is not always gold at the end of the Stock Market rainbow. Trading in stocks if carried on sensibly, and with regard for economic realities, is a legitimate business, and helpful to a country's commercial and financial development, but when it is indulged in as a gamble or a game of luck, and not backed by adequate resources it is often a disastrous proceeding.

That is what it has turned out to be for a lot of people during the past few months. Spurred on by last winter's extraordinary and not too healthful prices, when quotations were always going up, and not even a novice could lose, a lot of people became obsessed with the idea that all they had to do was to go into a stock broker's office, buy a stock, and get up the next morning to discover that they were considerably richer. It looked so easy that many began to wonder why they had ever been so foolish as to work for somebody else for just ordinary wages. Even people who ought to have known better became crazy about the market. If they had applied ordinary sense to the thing, had figured out with pencil and paper just what stocks really should be worth, having regard to the capitalization, earnings, and reasonable prospects of the enterprises they represented, they could have seen how absurd was their expectations of perpetual higher prices.

That, however, appears to have been the last thing they thought about. And now they are paying for their error. Well, perhaps it is to the good. If those who have got hurt are good sports and philosophers, and capable of learning, they will take their medicine in the best possible way, and profit by their lesson. Knowledge, and especially financial knowledge, always must be paid for; and if what has happened puts an end to a lot of the ill-advised trading that has been going on recently, it will be a good thing for those who traded, a good thing for the stock market, and a good thing for Canada. Real economic progress does not come by such methods.—Ottawa Journal.

COSTLY CAMPAIGNS.

It is calculated that about ten million dollars will be spent by the national committees of the two great political parties in the presidential campaign in the United States this year. This is by no means the total cost of the election; sums which, in the aggregate, would amount to many more millions of dollars, will be raised and spent locally for campaign purposes. What is done with all this money? Much of it will be just wasted, inevitably; but, taking its legitimate use, and ignoring the "leakages," by which a considerable amount of the funds will find its way into the pockets of party workers, it is interesting to consider how expensive a business it is in these days to contend for the honor of the presidency. Like everything else, election standards have been raised out of sight, and there are many new-fangled activities to be taken care of. The workers will have to be paid, as they always have been, and there is the rent of the various assembly halls, etc., to be met. But a comparatively new feature is the appropriation for radio propaganda. This, no doubt, will amount to quite a big item. Literature, eulogising the particular faction which issues it and belittling the record of the opposing side; praising the party candidate and reviling his rival; detailing the brilliant results which will be sure to follow the election of the former and the defeat of the latter; extolling the platform of the one party and ridiculing that of the other—all this costs a lot of money. There will be much exaggeration and insincerity on both sides.

The New York World comments: "It is not necessarily a chance for 'graft' that constitutes the prize for those who contribute to this horde of dollars. Hundreds of thousands of dollars will be contributed to this campaign by devout drys who will expect nothing in return except a policy of hands off the Volstead law. Hundreds of thousands of dollars will be contributed by sincere wets who hope that the election of Governor Smith will pave the way for a change in the Volstead law. Hundreds of thousands of dollars will be contributed by devout Republicans who sincerely believe that the country would go to the dogs under a Democratic administration, by devout Democrats who are Democrats because their grandfathers were Democrats, by devout Klansmen who are disturbed by a Catholic menace, and by devout ladies of the D. A. R. who cannot stomach the idea of a brown derby in the White House."

The Chicago Journal of Commerce discusses the effect of all this effort. "Will the heaviest expenditure win?" it asks. It points out that the result will be decided by the relative strength of the party organizations in the doubtful States—"and organization strength is not entirely a matter of money." The out-and-out party voters will not be greatly influenced by these frantic appeals for support. The wets will probably remain wet, in spite of argument, and the drys will be unaffected by anti-prohibition propaganda. History shows, however, that presidential candidates with the heaviest expenditures have fared better than their opponents in the past. This does not necessarily mean, though, that the expenditure of money determines the popular choice. The winning candidate is likely to have the support of business, and "it is the confidence of business, not the number of dollars actually spent in addressing the electorate, which generally is the determining factor in a presidential campaign," remarks the Journal of Commerce.—Hamilton Spectator.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Running that complaint bureau of the Minister of Highways isn't going to be a sinecure by any means.

They're already nominating candidates in Quebec for the next Federal House. Does that mean an election is in the offing?

The Attorney-General has refused to give an interview with the marathon dance promoters. Mr. Price has evidently decided to say all he wants to say with the Provincial Police.

THE TOURIST QUESTION

That a blight has fallen upon tourist business in this district is pretty well known. There is no lack of tourists. Anybody can see that. It is the camping grounds that have changed the aspect of the business. Tourists from America prefer to do their own cooking as well as their own camping. They get camping-berths for very little and meanwhile "the resort" nearby goes empty or nearly so. Are the old times coming back? If so they will have to come of their own accord for it is doubtful if tourists' resorts will ever again provide camping ground to their own undoing. Yet it is the fashion. All America not Canada alone is expecting it. If it has come to stay why then "up" will go the price of camping grounds. The landlord is not defenceless. Another sport spot with our merchants is the quantity of foreign foods brought in by the tourists. At first it was thought that the Ferguson Highway to Northern Ontario was the cause of the slump but anybody who will read the indignation meetings "up there" over the highway and its detours will not fail to look at home for the cause.

UP NORTH.

The Question Box

G.B. Q.—Is there any difference between "avocation" and "vocation?"

A.—Yes. An "avocation" is that which takes one from his regular calling. It is a minor or irregular occupation. The term is used loosely, sometimes by good writers, for "vocation" which signifies the main calling or business of life. An "avocation" is a diversion.

C.R. Q.—About 1895 some truck loads of dynamite exploded with terrible consequences in Johannesburg. Can you give a short description of the disaster?

A.—On February 19, 1896, there was an explosion of shunted trucks of dynamite at Vrendorp, a suburb of Johannesburg. The whole district was destroyed and thousands left homeless. This disaster caused about eighty deaths.

W.H.W. Q.—Will you please give a brief sketch of the life of Samuel Pepys and also state the proper pronunciation of his name.

A.—Samuel Pepys (1633-1703), was the author of Pepys' Diary, an account (written in shorthand or "tachygraphy" of the events of the years 1660 to 1669, including the Great Plague, of which he gives a good description, since he remained at his post while others ran away. He obtained his education at a school in Huntingdon, in St. Paul's School, and at Cambridge; and, having his relative, the Earl of Sandwich, for a patron, became a clerk in the Admiralty, an office he held in the reign of Charles II. and James II. The fashionable life in London interested him most, and he recounted his daily experiences in the famous diary, which remained in manuscript until it was deciphered between the years 1819 and 1822, and a part of it published by Lord Braybrooke in 1825. Other and more complete editions have appeared since then. The Encyclopaedia Britannica says that the name was pronounced in the 17th century, and has always been pronounced by the family, "Peeps." Three pronunciations are given in the following amusing bit of verse:

"There are people, I'm told—some say there are heaps—
Who speak of the talkative Samuel as Peeps;
And some, so precise and pedantic their step is,
Who call the delightful old diarist Pepys.
But those I think right, and I follow their steps,
Ever mention the garrulous gossip as Peps."

GOD'S MINUTE.

I have laid help upon One that is mighty.—Ps. 89:19.

O God, our Father, we believe in Thee; we believe that Thou art, and that Thou art a rewarder of all them that diligently seek Thee. Therefore we venture confidently to come before Thee in prayer, through Jesus Christ our Redeemer. We but dimly comprehend and but partly understand Thy greatness. Thy perfection of being and character, and are keenly conscious of our limitations, imperfections and sins. But we feel the need of Thee; Thou art a necessity to us. Without Thee we cannot live, and without Thee we dare not die. Therefore we turn to Thee as the flowers in springtime turn toward the sun, as the rivers carve their courses through the hills to find their home in the sea, for "Thou hast made us for Thyself, O God, and our spirits cannot rest until they rest in Thee." We pray Thee, pour the treasures of Thy love and life into our poor souls. We search for Thee in a dry and thirsty land where no water is. We are glad with unending joy if we may but be near Thee. Steady Thou our staggering faith, clarify our vision, intensify our desire to be free from all that is sin in Thy sight. Bring us into harmony with Thyself, Thy purpose, Thy life. Create in us a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within us. Save us from narrowness and selfishness. Bless us and make us a blessing. May we not be reservoirs, but channels, through which Thy grace may flow into other lives that pant for Thee. All this we humbly ask in the name of Jesus. Amen.

BISHOP SAMUEL P. SPRENG.

A Thought

"I AIN'T FOUND IT YET"

If you have no main motive, no worthy aim in life, why bother to shoot? If you have no cartridges in your belt, why carry a gun? If you really want to hunt, why not decide on the animal, then get the ammunition and, with that rifle, you have reason to expect food for dinner.

Once upon a time a young boy was out with a gun and a man who chanced to meet him asked the lad what he was hunting for and the boy replied: "I dunnon for I ain't found it yet."

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, August 10.—Reports of a good clean-up this week were unfounded and yesterday's cattle market showed nearly 1,000 cattle unsold. Instead of the clean-up and strong market which was expected by some dealers a slow market finished the week with prices from ¼ to ½ off on common grades of cattle. Good cattle were still in demand but there were relatively few of these on the market. Dealers were asking for the better grades and when these were not forthcoming refused to trade much in the lower grades even in the face of the lower prices.

Anything choice in the butcher line brought good prices but on the whole these were scarce.

Calves were steady at Wednesday's prices, selling from 14c to 15½c a pound with correspondingly higher prices for the choice grades.

Lambs were lower, being off $1 from Wednesday's prices. Hogs remained the same at 14c off cars.

Receipts yesterday were as follows: 109 cattle, 16 calves, 200 hogs, 150 sheep.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Aug. 10—(Canadian Press)—The export trade in Canadian grain here yesterday was fair and a moderate amount of business was done with continental and United Kingdom buyers in Manitoba wheat.

The feature of the domestic trade was the stronger feeling that developed in the market for Canadian Western oats and prices for no. 2 were marked up two cents per bushel.

The demand for spring and winter wheat grades of flour continued inactive but values were steady and unchanged.

The trade in all lines of millfeed showed a slight improvement and prices were firm. The demand for standard grades of rolled oats was quiet but the undertone to the market was steady.

An active business was done in all grades of eggs and prices were firmly maintained. The receipts were 1,538 cases.

An easier feeling developed in the cheese market and values were reduced a fraction of a cent per pound. The receipts were 7,448 boxes.

Extreme dullness marked the trade in butter but the undertone to the market remained steady. The receipts were 750 packages.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Aug. 10 (Canadian Press).—Sudden advances jolted all the grain markets, turning values sharply upward, and putting an end temporarily at least, to long-continued declines. Export buying of the various cereals yesterday totaled as much as 2,500,000 bushels, and there was a brisk unlooked for jump in wheat quotations at Liverpool, associated with incorrect surmises that the United States government crop report issued after the close yesterday would not confirm recent bearish crop estimates.

Wheat closed firm 1¾ to 2¼c net higher; corn ¾ to 2c up; oats at ¼c to ¾c advance, an dprovisions unchanged to 17c down.

It was held in many quarters that the government crop report as to wheat had already been discounted even if bearish. Under such circumstances and with Liverpool quotations higher than due, a general stampede to the buying side of the wheat market here took place right from the start. Apparently, speculative sellers had greatly over-reached themselves on the big price breaks of late. Offers yesterday were scarce except from hedgers, and although the day's top prices failed to hold, the market retained the great part of the gains. Export business in wheat yesterday amounted to 1,000,000 bushels including domestic hard winters, and Galveston yesterday cleared 300,000 bushels.

Trade comment after the close was to the effect that the government report about wheat should be construed as bearish, inasmuch as the government figures on probable total domestic yield were 29,000,000 bushels, above the average of recent private returns, and 18,000,000 bushels above the final returns of last year. Meanthe final returns of last year. Meanfailed to reflect fully the upturn in American markets, and crop advices from the Canadian Prairie Provinces continued decidedly to point a huge harvest now close at hand.

Government figures yesterday afternoon on corn for 1928 were taken as slightly bearish, being 10,000,000 bushels above the average of latest private estimates and 285,000,000 bushels more than last year's final returns. Although the majority of traders were inclined to look for a bearish government report, there was considerable evening-up of accounts, and the market rose with wheat. Oats advanced in response to upturns in other grains. The government report on oats was slightly above private estimates.

Provisions were dull, and had a general downward slant.

UPSET PARIS BERLIN PLANS

Chamberlain's Absence From Meeting of Ministers Blow To Streseman.

MAY DELAY VITAL ISSUES.

BERLIN, Aug. 10.—Announcement that Sir Austen Chamberlain will not attend the signing of the Kellogg compact in Paris has caused a sensation in political circles here and there is much conjecture as to what will become of the Reich's fondest hopes of laying her main political issues before the assembly of Foreign Ministers.

The significance of the anti-war treaty apparently is lost here, Germans placing more weight on what their representative to the signing ceremonies might obtain by direct contact with other leaders of foreign policy than the assurance against conflict which the Kellogg instrument offers.

Dr. Stresemann has two distinct aims in his coming visit to Paris besides affixing his signature to the Kellogg treaty and presumably, according to the gloomy predictions of the majority of the press, Sir Austen Chamberlain's absence will frustrate both. The Foreign Minister, now at Carlsbad recuperating from his recent attack of influenza, has three secretaries working at top speed framing his course of action as soon as he is able to return to "active" work ,as Dr. Stresemann himself puts it.

Questions He Hoped to Settle

The question of evacuation of the Rhineland and the fixing of the total reparations Germany will be obliged to pay he hoped to discuss and reach a decision on during the time all the interested Foreign Ministers were together in Paris.

With practically the entire Government on vacation and returning only in time to celebrate Constitution Day on August 11, the governmental view it is impossible to obtain.

While a number of papers believe that Sir Austen Chamberlain's sickness is purely political in character, the liberal press takes the other view, saying the English Foreign Secretary is not afraid either of Dr. Stresemann and his proposals or of Secretary Kellogg, who may want to know more about the recently concluded Franco-British naval armament treaty.

Several Nationalist papers characterize Lord Cushendun, appointed head of foreign affairs during Sir Austen Chamberlain's absence, as beating bitter enmity against Germany and intimate that the only answer to this move by Downing Street is for Dr. Stresemann to remain away. The possibility that M. Briand's health may not permit his attendance, either, at the Paris signing of the Kellogg compact or the next League session, is advanced as an additional move to prevent Germany pressing her claims.

AMUNDSEN SOUGHT OVER WIDER AREA

Norway and France Will Keep Five Ships in Arctic Until August 31.

OSLO, Norway, Aug. 10.—Plans for the continued search for Roald Amundsen, Lieutenant Leif Deitrichsen, Rene Guilbaud and three other French navy aviation men, were announced by the Norwegian Admiralty yesterday. Five vessels will be kept at the search until probably the end of August. The French ship Quentin Roosevelt is being withdrawn.

The waters to the east of Spitzbergen are to receive the attention of the French and Norwegian searchers. The whaler Heimland will explore the region between South Cape and King Charles Island, especially Grand Fjord and the coast of Edge Island.

The expedition of Miss Louise Boyd, who chartered the whaler Hobby for a hunting trip to Greenland but diverted the vessel to the hunt for Amundsen, will make a special search of Franz Josef land.

After a conference between the French Admiral on the cruiser Strassbourg and Captain Wisting on the Norwegian sealer Veslekari it was agreed that those two vessels should traverse the region between the areas allotted to the Heimland and the Hobby. The Norwegian Government steamer Michael Sars will search the open sea east from South Cape.

Some of this territory has already been covered but the French and Norwegian searchers are unwilling to omit it from their program.

MOSCOW, Aug. 10.—The Russian icebreaker Seddy, which recently was ordered by the Soviet Government to explore the region of Franz Joseph Land in an effort to discover the missing Amudsen party and the remaining members of the crew of the dirigible Italia reported today that she had reached Alexandra Island, thus far without success.

Captain Voronin, commanding the Seddy, sent a wireless report to the Soviet Rescue Commission stating that he is now searching Alexandra Island, which is on the western extremity of Franz Joseph Land. He said that he would use his airplaine as soon as his men could reach a convenient glacier. The plane cannot operate from the water, not having floats.

The captain stated that the ship had been in the Polar ice for the last twelve days and had reached a position 80 degrees 40 minutes North and 41 East without discovering any trace of Amundsen or the six missing men of the Italia.

New Use Found For Rumble Seat

Rumble seats are used for show a great deal. Many cars equipped with them drive up and down the main street with them opened for no apparent reason, unless it is to show everyone that the car has a rumble. A certain party going on this supposition the other night received a surprise when what apparently looked like an empty seat was really in use. There in a basket which was just the width of the seat was sleeping peacefully a little baby who seemed to enjoy being "Rocked in the Cradle of the Dust."

though he owned a town house and a country estate."

Happiness lasted some time for the "bride." Then she noticed a change in her "husband's" attitude toward her, found a love letter from another woman in his pocket and heard that he was often seen with her chum to whom she had introduced him. He assured her that business, not a love affair, preoccupied him and persuaded her to come to New York.

"Not Married," He Said

"He didn't come to me when he promised, he didn't write, he sent me no money," she went on. "Then a friend told me that Jose was in New York, that he had come from Cuba accompanied by the other woman and that they were together at a hotel. I called him by telephone, asked him why he was there with another woman, and why he was treating his wife so shamefully.

"He said: 'You fool, you have no rights. That religious ceremony was a fake. I paid an employe on my hacienda to take the part of the clergyman who married us. We are not married and never will be. I don't want a thing to do with you. I'm through. You can sue for all I care, but you'll never get anything more from me.'

"Then he hung up and I fainted."

Casanova, the senorita says, once was water-carrier for Negro workers on the Cuban sugar plantation he now owns, but worked himself up to his present high estate. The pedestal upon which her girlish fancy placed him during their first days together crumbled somewhat, she added, when she discovered that he gambled, drank and lost heavily upon horse racing while telling her he was engaged in business affairs.

"Even so I loved him and we would have continued to be happy but for the other girl," she added. "It was at a social gathering that I saw her for the first time since we had been chums. I greeted her joyfully and we were eagerly talking together when by husband came up and asked to be introduced. I complied proudly —and laid the foundation for the triangle of one man and two women which ever leads to grief."

JOURNEYS INTO FAR COUNTRIES

ty lakes and many camping places en route." (He described the equipment of these camps with an average of nine cars a night).

"We passed on to Cobalt, the centre of silver mining, though many of the mines in the immediate district have begun to wane. Nevertheless everybody seemed to boost for his own town."

(The Cobalt Club song, which "went over big," was sung by Joe Wearing and George Liddle.)

"At Cobalt, after lunch, we were taken to the Nipissing mines, where we saw them pouring silver with ladles into moulds which contained about 50 lbs. of silver each.

"There is a trolley car to Haileybury on Lake Temiskaming. It is a town on a beautiful site. It is the social centre of the mining district and that is the reason for its existence.

"'New Liskeard, five miles away, is a farming town with a first class Kiwanis club and everything that a progressive farming town should have.

"From there on is 50 or 60 miles of farming country, almost prairie-like.

"Kirkland Lake is the boom town of Northern Ontario at the present time. Here we attended the charter night of the Kirkland Lake club. The next day we saw the Kirkland Lake mines and returned by Lake Temiskaming—40 miles long, with its 3,000 miles of shore line, and finally down to Orillia and homeward.

"We were on good roads within 200 miles of James Bay—we saw silver and gold mining and farming country, all within two days' easy motoring from Peterborough."

J. J. Turner

"In planning a trip such as we have just enjoyed, one must plan far ahead. One reason why I like to go to the Old Land is because of the ocean voyage. You see, I am not subject to sea-sickness.

"Another reason is that antiquity and age adds to the interest of things. For instance, we visited Rossland Castle, and it may surprise you to know that even at that early date in which it was built—the 13th century —they had advanced conceptions of sanitary conveniences.

"We also visited many sacred edifices with their awesome interiors where people from the four corners of the earth have visited.

"Going into Glasgow for Mr. Howden's first visit, we were naturally charmed by the landscape—looking for all the world like a beautiful piece of patchwork.

"We were interested in the farms and cattle and one of our unique experiences was to step into the Smithfield market, where the entire meat supply of London is purchased.

"In closing, let me say that I recommend an interview with Jim Doran, to ascertain the small cost of a trip to the Old Land. It is within reach of you all and is the trip of a lifetime.

"I am very glad to be back. Once we turned our faces homeward I was keen to reach home, and had I made proper train connections, might have reached Peterborough exactly a week after leaving Liverpool."

John I Allen moved the vote of thanks to the speakers and to President Morris of the Rotary Club for his attendance.

KILLS WRONG MAN IN FEUD SHOOTING

Detroit Resident Under Arrest at Bridgeburg Facing Murder Charge.

BRIDGEBURG, Ont, Aug. 10. — (Special to The Examiner)— John Fordham of Detroit is under arrest here charged with murder following a shooting affray at 10:30 Thursday night in which Thomas Baker of Bridgeburg was killed and Walter Mullett, also of Bridgeburg, was seriously wounded. Fordham appeared in police court to-day and was remanded.

It is believed that Baker was killed by mistake, the bullet having been meant for Mullett.

A feud of long standing is blamed. Fordham, who is a former resident of Bridgeburg, is understood to have nursed a grudge against Mullett for some time past.

About 10:30 Thursday night Fordham knocked at the side door of Mullett's house and was admitted by Mrs. Mullett. He saw Walter Mullett sitting in an easy chair listening to the radio and Thomas Baker, who is an employee in a local factory, sitting on a chesterfield with his shoes off, reading a paper.

Fordham is alleged to have pulled out his revolver and fired. One shot just missed Baker; another hit him in the head. A third shot struck Mullett in the leg and another went into his right lung.

Then Fordham aimed his revolver at his own head and fired. The bullet passed through his nose and into the archway between the front room and the room where Mullett and Baker were sitting.

ARDENT BALL FAN IS DEAD

John Brown Attended Leaf's Opening Games in Toronto for 40 Years.

LIVED AT WOODSTOCK

WOODSTOCK, Ont., August 10. — John Henry Brown, one of the city's most prominent citizens, died at his home here in his 81st year. Mr. Brown was prominent in many lines of activity, being a charter member of the I.O.O.F. in Woodstock, a prominent track athlete and baseball star in his earlier years, one of the city's oldest bandsmen, and a veteran of the Fenian Raid.

Mr. Brown had the record of attending the opening baseball games of the season of the Toronto Maple Leafs for forty years, and had a record of thirty years' consecutive attendance as a guest of the club. This year he missed the opening game owing to illness, although he received his usual invitation to be present. He knew many of the baseball stars by their first name, and was a particularly close friend of Dan Howley, manager of the St. Louis Browns.

Mr. Brown was born in Woodstock and lived all his life here, his father being the late Homer P. Brown, for 36 years County Treasurer of Oxford. Since 1884 he had been engaged in the real estate and insurance business in this city. He was a charter member of Olive Branch Lodge, No. 88, I.O.O.F., having joined it on its inauguration on March 14, 1872. He was the last surviving charter member of the lodge.

Fifty years ago he was prominent as a musician, and member of the old Oxford Rifles Band, while in his youth he played on the champion baseball team of Canada, and was a champion sprinter on the foot racing track.

RULER OF NEJD STILL FRIENDLY

Will Continue to Act in Friendly Manner Though Negotiations Fail.

STATEMENT ISSUED.

CAIRO, Egypt, Aug. 10 (Canadian Press).—The Jejas Agency to-day issued a statement saying, that despite the breakdown of the conference between Sir Gilbert Clayton, British representative, and Ibn Soud, King of Nejd, the Nejdian Government will continue to act in a friendly manner toward its neighbors.

ONE OF TWO KILLED IN CRASH

Haines unlimbered his shot gun with deadly effect.

When the shooting was over he found that instead of injuring a hijacker he had killed Policeman Beck, who with others had elected to raid Haines' premises that night.

Gave Himself Up

Haines promptly gave himself up to the police, explaining the whole matter. He was instantly set upon by comrades of the slain officer and beaten beyond description. A weekly newspaper opened up the subject of police brutality, printing pictures of Haines, "before and after" the treatment. A grand jury investigation followed, as a result of which Miami's police system was shaken up. Chief Leslie H. Quigg was dismissed from his post, and many police officers indicted for crimes ranging from flogging to murder.

So great was public sympathy for Haines in the light of the beating which almost cost him an eye, that at his trial for murder, in which he took the stand and testified as to the shooting, the jury unanimously found him "not guilty" on the first ballot. To-day his little house is boarded up, for with his family he folded his tents and silently stole away—going to Canada to start anew, to shut behind him the scenes of his joyous adventures and to forget the tragic event which marred his life and stifled his laughter.

Tragedy is not thus easily shut behind. It has a knack of dogging one's footsteps. It bobbed up behind Charlie Haines to-day, to rob him of life just as he was re-established with his wife and little family in happier if more peaceful conditions.

Company Has Responsibility

HAMILTON, Ont., Aug. 10 (Canadian Press).—The crash of theLoening amphibian plane at Beaumaris, Ont., yesterday could not be accounted for by Major-General James H. MacBrien, managing director of International Airway Limited, which is to absorb the Elliott Air Service, of Hamilton, owners of the plane.

Denying reports that the plane was overloaded, Major General MacBrien said it was designed and built to carry six passengers and had carried the same load on numerous occasions here without mishap. Charles Haines had been with the company for three weeks, coming from the United States, where he had a flying record of 3,000 hours, Major General MacBrien said.

"I believe any transportation company has some responsibility to its passengers," the General said, when asked if the company would be responsible for injuries suffered by the passengers.

INVESTIGATIONS ORDERED.

GRAVENHURST, Ont., August 10 (Canadian Press). — Two investigations of the wreck of the large amphibian airplane yesterday, when two Americans last their lives and five were injured, are planned by local and Federal authorities.

The inquest will be held on August 16, when the injured are expected to be able to give evidence, while an officer of the Civil Aviation Branch of th Canadian Government will make an investigation of the circumstances surrounding the tragedy and report to the Federal authorities.

POLICE SEIZE LIQUOR DOCKS

Ontario Government Lays Charges of Illegal Possession Against Exporters.

SUBPOENAS SERVED.

WINDSOR, Ont., Aug. 10.—(Canadian Press).—Seizing every liquor export dock from Belle River to Kingsville and placing their wet stocks, aggregating several millions of dollars in value under police guard, the Ontario government today charged every exporter on the border with unlawfull possession of liquor and ordered them all to appear in court next week to answer to the charges. Firing a broadside of subpoenas along the entire liquor front, Provincial Police squads, under the command of Inspector F. E. Elliott of Toronto, served legal notice to 36 exporters of an attack on them by the Ontario Liquor Control Board, the body through which the Attorney General's department is moving.

800 MINERS SAIL FOR HARVEST WORK

Men Set Forth With Holiday Spirit From Liverpool To-day.

LIVERPOOL, England, Aug. 10 (Canadian Press).—A contingent of 800 miners, each carrying a paper parcel or a suit case, sailed for Canada to-day, the first of 10,000 volunteers from among the unemployed in the mining districts for harvest work in the Dominion.

The men who started to-day hailed chiefly from the North of England and the South of Wales, and they set forth on their journey in a holiday spirit.

FATALITY MARS OLD HOME WEEK

LINDSAY, Aug. 10.— Cannington Old Home Week celebration was marred by a serious accident which had a fatal termination in the death yesterday morning of Edward Dobson, aged 46 years, son of Reeve Dobson, of the village. The unfortunate man, who is employed by the Hydro, had mounted a pole in order to arrange an electrical display, when he fell as a result of a belt slipping injuring his skull and sustaining body injuries. He is survived by a wife and was quite popular in the village.

RANGERS TO TAKE TRIP DOWN RIVER

Regimental Excursion Will Be Held Next Friday—Meeting On Monday.

A regimental picnic, the first in many years, is to be held by the Peterborough Rangers, a week from today and a full turn out of officers and men is consequently required at a meeting on Monday evening at eight o'clock when final details will be arranged. The picnic will be held by the Steamer Stoney Lake proceeding down the river to a point not yet settled on. The boat will leave the George street wharf at eight a.m., and will call at the street railway wharf. Every officer, non-commissioned officer and man, is invited to attend with his relatives and friends.

To All Owners of

DODGE BROTHERS MOTOR CARS

-PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE

by

WALTER P. CHRYSLER

You, more than anyone else, are entitled to know the purpose behind our recent acquisition of the assets and facilities of Dodge Brothers, Inc.

For upon that purpose depends the security of your investment in Dodge Brothers products.

In acquiring Dodge Brothers, Inc. for the Chrysler Corporation, we have secured one of the largest and most modern automobile factories in the world and with it an organization of exceptional ability.

We intend that these facilities shall be utilized to increase the value and quality in Dodge Brothers cars and Graham Brothers Trucks and Motor Coaches.

We have secured, in addition, a dealer organization that has always been recognized as one of the finest in the industry.

It is our intention to deserve the continued loyalty of this group of substantial, progressive merchants by making it possible for them to enjoy increasing prosperity through the sale of Dodge Brothers products.

We have secured, moreover, that which transcends in importance either Dodge Brothers superb plant equipment or Dodge Brothers splendid dealer organization. For we have become the lawful heritors of Dodge Brothers Good Name, with all the solemn obligation which that inheritance implies.

We have become the trustees of Dodge Brothers good faith to their customers, and it is our purpose to execute that trust with fidelity.

The priceless identity of all Dodge Brothers products will be preserved — as well as the sound policies that have made the words Dodge Brothers synonymous with Honest Value and Dependability.

Dodge Brothers Works will continue to produce Dodge Brothers Motor Cars and Graham Brothers commercial vehicles. Dodge Brothers dealers will continue to sell and service them.

The men to whose capable support the success of the Chrysler Corporation is due, unite with me in pledging perpetuation of Dodge Brothers ideals, to the end that a Good Name may be made still better.

STAMMERING AND STUTTERING

Many correspondents have written to me asking the cause and cure of stammering and stuttering. Many write and say that the harder they try and the more they study about it, the worse it seems to make them. This should not be true if they study under a competent instructor and follow a few simple rules.

In the first place it must be understood that stammering is due to a lack of control of the organs of speech, causing hesitancy and difficulty of utterance. There is a variety of opinion about the cause. Stammerers themselves often attribute the varying degrees of their impediment to states of the wind, changes of the moon, nervousness, depression of spirits, indigestion and other physical debilities.

A nervous manner of speaking is usually associated with stammering. This is the result rather than the cause of the impediment. If nervousness were productive of stammering, the number of sufferers would be vastly greater, and it would include a larger proportion of girls than of boys, but this difference is not noticeable. Of course, any physical defect will render a person nervous when the peculiarity is made a subject of observation, and it is in this way only that nervousness is associated with speech in cases of stammering.

All stammerers must remember that breath is the very foundation of speech. Some stammer because they shut the breath off, and others because they waste it. One closes the glottis, or little trap door in the throat and holds it tightly closed while trying to speak; the other lets the air out first and then tries to speak without sufficient breath.

Stammerers try to speak in a jerky, chopped way, and must learn to speak smoothly and distinctly, allowing one word to almost run into the other.

In most all cases of stammering the head oscillates too loosely upon the neck. The head should be neither thrown upwards, downwards, or sideways, and the chin should not be dropped.

Most stammerers can sing, because in singing the breath is steadily expelled, and the sound of one word is vibrated into the next. The stammerer should read or repeat sentences in a low tone of voice, and with almost a humming sound as one word leads to the other.

I have seen many bad cases of years' standing cured within two or three weeks of proper training. It is most helpful to have a competent instructor handle each individual case, although Professor Ennis, who is a national authority on this subject, assures me that a high percentage of results can be received in class work.

Anyone of sufficient will power can cure himself of stammering under proper instructions. My advice to all stammerers is to find a good instructor and remove the needless stuttering handicap.

Questions and Answers.

Question: W. H. J. asks: "What causes the head to shake violently from side to side when one gets nervous? What is the cure for this condition?"

Answer: The head shaking is due to a form of palsy and comes from a degeneracy of the nerves. The cure is to improve your health by hygienic measures, and to remove every mental or physica cause which may produce nervousness.

Question: M. G. writes: "My mother has diabetes, and I want to know your opinion of saccharin as a substitute for sugar in this disease; also in regard to fruits."

Answer: Saccharin is often recommended to be used as a substitute for sugar, although it has no food value. It is one of the cold tar products and its continued use is unquestionably injurious. Practically all fruits may be used by the diabetic, as the fruit sugar alone is not sufficient to produce trouble as long as other sugar is not used.

Question: Mrs. O. J. asks: "Will you please tell me what causes waterbrash? It bothers me through the night. Is it some kind of indigestion, and what do you think would stop it?"

Answer: Waterbrash usually comes from overeating or using liquids with your meals. Try cutting down on the amount of food you are using at dinner, and do not use any liquids at all after three p.m.

Question: Reader writes: "I am a young woman but my skin is so dry I am ageing terribly. I use a great deal of cold cream, but I know it must be some inward trouble. When I wash my skin it hurts, and burns and smarts all the time. I know you have helped others, so please tell me what course to take."

Answer: Use plenty of olive oil with your meals, and increase the amount of butter and cream you are using. A temporary treatment which will help is to rub the entire body each day with cocoa-butter, using only a small amount, but rubbing it well into the pores.

BRITISH AGREE WITH CHINESE

Sign Pact Calling For Settlement of Nanking Property Damage.

WILL REVISE TREATY.

NANKING, Aug. 10.—(Canadian Press).— A British-Chinese agreement for settlement of the so called Nanking incident was signed last night by C. T. Wang, Nationalist Foreign Minister, Sir Sydney Barton, British Consul General at Shanghai, and Consul General Hewlett of Nanking.

Simultaneously, another agreement was signed whereby Great Britain pledged herself to enter into negotiations with China upon the subject of treaty revisions.

The terms of the settlement were not announced, but it was understood that they follow along the lines of the settlement with the United States last year.

The negotiations arose out of Communist outrages in Nanking during the Nationalists occupation in March 1927, when foreign property was damaged. In the acts of the Communists but accepted responsibility as far as the settlement was concerned. Provision was made for appointment of a commission to fix the amount to be paid.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

SATURDAY, AUGUST 11, 1928

Benefic stars rule today, according to astrology, which reads in the horoscope fair promise of pleasures and happiness.

This should be an auspicious wedding day, making for steady success and lasting love.

The planetary rule favors women and their aspirations. They should push all business and political affairs in their charge.

The rule favors truth and honesty. Persons of every class should be inclined to fair dealing and direct action.

Whatever is constructive and progressive is well directed while this rule prevails, but the seers foresee many ill-advised efforts on the part of well-meaning women.

Theatres now come under a sway that should bring them increase of patronage. Plays of serious content may prosper this season.

As autumn approaches the mind should be put in a kindly and receptive attitude toward changed conditions the world, which is moving forward with tremendous velocity where cosmic development is concerned.

Science is to make even more astonishing discoveries than have been announced in the past, it is foretold, and mind-reading will be a means of widespread reforms.

Young women and young men are subject to planetary influences that promise for them tremendous achievements and again the seers foretell much foreign service.

At a time when prejudices and social consciousness appears to be prevalent, astrologers foretell a fusing of interests among the individuals of nations and the nations of the whole globe.

Parents are counseled to be patient with the vagaries of their children who belong to the new order of things.

Creatures born when the air is a medium for transportation and communication belong to a new race that will evolve rapidly, but will not be understood by preceding generations, the seers declare.

Persons whose birthdate it is probably will have many unexpected experiences in the coming year. These subjects of Leo are prone to take their own ways and to incline toward selfish advancement, but they overcome all obstacles and are most important units.

Children born on this day probably will be exceedingly kind-hearted as well as gifted. They probably will have fine, sensitive natures that must be carefully guarded.

PLANS TO REMOVE TRACK TO TORONTO

Prominent Sportsmen Behind Plan To Transfer Racing Charter.

MONTREAL, Que., August 10.—(Special to The Examiner).—It is said that the Niagara Falls race track and charter of Stamford Park, Niagara Falls, Ontario, will be moved to Toronto, it was learned to-day. It is understood that prominent Toronto and American sportsmen and financiers are backing this movement and that $1,000,000 will be invested in the scheme to assure Toronto of one of the best race tracks on the continent, rivalling those of Saratoga and Tia Juana. Architects have already drawn up the plans for the new track, it is understood, and the specifications call for a one mile track modern in ever respect.

It is stated that the hostile attitude of certain political powers of the Niagara Falls district has been such as to discourage any attempt to open a track this season at Stamford Park. No meets were held this year because of the hostility. The Niagara Falls track, which is operated by the Niagara Falls Development Company, Limited, with headquarters in Montreal, was erected in 1923 by popular demand for a racing track near Buffalo and surrounding American and Canadian cities. Up to this year the track has been exceptionally well supported by the public in general not only in the local city, but also from bordering Canadian and American towns.

The decision to move the track and charter to Toronto has only been made recently. It is understood, and it has been well established tha an influential group of Toronto sportsmen and financiers are determined to bring the track to the Queen City.

Secretary Fraser of the Ontario Jockey Club says the plan is news to him. "Would a million dollar track be a particularly lavish affair?" he was asked.

"A million dollars wouldn't go so very far," Mr. Fraser replied. "It would only put down a reasonably good track. By the time you have bought property, equipped a track, built stables and stands, your million dollars would not go very much farther.

"A race track enterprise is not a venture that I should recommend to my friends. It really is an extremely doubtful one. An investment of $1,000,000 requires a considerable return and under present conditions and with the present government taxes, the return does not seem any too sure.

SPOILT MUSIC

A Splendid New Serial by Ruby M. Ayres

THE STORY THUS FAR: JENNIFER FRY and NICHOLAS GAUNT fall in love. He is called abroad by his mother's illness, and promises her to marry his cousin, LADY EDITH. Jennifer stands in the crowd outside the church and sees the bride. Five years later Nicholas and Jennifer meet again. He decides to divorce his wife. But just then Lady Edith becomes ill. She asks Gaunt to promise not to see Jennifer again, and, thinking she has only a short time to live, he promises. Jennifer decides to be as gay as she can on a small legacy. She gives up her job and moves into better quarters. The flat over hers is occupied by DOLORES, and a young girl, BUDDY. Through them she meets CHESNEY, with whom Buddy is in love, but who wants to marry Jennifer. Jennifer tells him she does not love him, but promises to marry him. Then she meets Gaunt again, and his wife. Gaunt tells her she shall never marry Chesney, and begs her to go away with him. But she refuses.

CHAPTER XXXVII

Chesney's Guest.

A year ago it would have been so easy; alas, had been so easy! But since she had seen so much clandestine unhappiness around her, the thing was shorn of all romance, leaving only its ugly nakedness.

She thought of her own father and mother, dull, commonplace people, perhaps, but quite happy in their unimpeachable respectability, and her racked soul cried out to be given that sort of happiness or none. She longed for Gaunt to leave her, and yet when she saw that he was going, she felt that she could have fallen at his feet and implored him to stay.

She hid her eyes with her hands lest he should read in them how great was her weakness, and for a long moment he looked at her, his face white and his lips set in a hard line.

Then he said harshly: "You have only to say one word and I will never leave you again, Jennifer."

She could not answer, dared not look up, but she felt as if life were at an end.

Then she heard his retreating steps, the opening of the door, his steps in the little hallway, the opening of the outer door, and suddenly she seemed to come to life. She dragged after him, sobbing, both hands outstretched.

"Nicholas . . ."

He was at the head of the stone staircase which led down to the street, but he stopped and looked back at her.

"Am I to stay?" he asked.

She tried to say "Yes." With all her strength she tried to force the word, but it would not come. It was as if an iron hand barred her lips.

But Gaunt came back. He put his arms round her and, bending, kissed her once, passionately.

"Am I to stay, Jennifer?"

"No, no!"

Afterwards she told herself in wild despair that it was not she who spoke, not she, but that invincible something within her which would not allow her to take the muddy road to happiness which others seemed to tread so lightly.

Gaunt pleaded no more. He took his arms away from her, and it was as if with them he took everything that had made life beautiful and gave the future any hope.

She was conscious of a shivering sense of loneliness and utter desolation. Then she heard his steps going down the stone stairs and the hollow bang of the outer door.

* * *

"Miss Buddy Vasher to see you, if you please, sir."

Malcolm Chesney glanced up from his paper with blank eyes.

"Miss Vasher! Rubbish! She's away in Cornwall," he said bluntly.

Chesney's man kept his eyes respectfully lowered.

"Miss Vasher is at the door, begging your pardon, sir, and very insistent that she must see you."

Chesney frowned and flung down his paper.

"Why didn't you say I was out? Say so now. Say thatit's impossible for me to see her."

"I said all that, sir, and she did not believe me."

Chesney rose to his feet. He had put Buddy so completely out of his mind that the sound of her name affected him unpleasantly. What the dickens did she mean by calling at his rooms, anyway, and at such an early hour?

She had been there before, of course, many times. Symon knew her perfectly well, but since he met Jennifer . . .

"Oh, show her in," he said, irritably

"Very good, sir."

"Wait a minute. Take the breakfast tray away first."

"Yes, sir."

Symon hurriedly cleared the table, set a vase of flowers in the center of it with irritating precision, straightened a chair and went away.

Chesney stood, back to the empty fireplace, a frown between his eyes, biting his lip in annoyance.

What the dickens was the matter, anyway? If there was going to be a scene . . .

"I knew you were in," said Buddy's tense voice from the doorway. "Symon was always a liar."

"Symon obeys orders," Chesney said curtly. He stepped past her and shut the door. "I don't know what on earth you mean by coming here!" he broke out angrily. "What do you imagine will be said if you are seen?"

Buddy laughed.

"Of course, I've never been here before," she said with painful sarcasm.

"Things have altered," Chesney answered. He dragged forward a chair. "Sit down, won't you?"

She disregarded him; she stood twisting her hands together in a childish sort of way, her breath coming fast from between her reddened lips.

"I thought you were in Cornwall," Chesney said.

"I was till yesterday. I came back last night."

"Is Dolores back, too?"

"No."

He looked at her sharply. "What's the matter?" he asked.

She came a step nearer to him.

"You won't believe me, I know, but Jennifer . . ."

He cut in sharply, his face changing: "That will do. If you've come here to talk about Jennifer, you're wasting your time."

He took a determined step towards the door, but Buddy stopped him. She was very pale beneath all her careful make-up, and there was a scared look in her blue eyes.

"You've got to listen," she said.

He stared at her for a moment, then he shrugged his shoulders. "Very well, but be careful what you say."

Buddy dropped into the chair.

"I found out quite by chance," she began, in a queer breathless way "You won't believe that either, I suppose, but it's true. I found it all out quite by chance, Malcolm, I swear."

"My dear girl, what are you driving at? For heaven's sake, if you've got anything to say, say it and finish. I want to go out."

Her little face changed into sharp lines. "With Jennifer, I suppose," she whispered.

Chesney made an impatient gesture. "If that's the way you intend to talk . . ."

She caught his arm. "It isn't, it isn't . . . I swear it isn't."

"Very well, go on then."

She was silent for a moment, watching him with furtive eyes, then she began to speak again more rapidly. "We went to Cornwall, Dolores and I. You know that. It was hateful. I loathe the country and the sea, it would drive me mad to stay there. I'm so restless, I must be moving on—on all the time."

"My dear girl . . ."

She rushed on heedlessly. "There was a little place called Porth. I liked it at first and the cottage we took, but I soon got tired of it as I do of everything."

The hardness of her voice was infinitely pathetic, but Chesney had no sympathetic feeling for her, and she went on: "We arranged to leave, and the day before we were going we went out and it began to rain. We had no coats or umbrellas, and so we went into a cottage. There was a nice woman there, and she took us in and gave us tea . . .". Buddy caught her breath with a harsh sound of remembrance. "There was a photograph of Jennifer Fry on the mantelpiece" she said tensely.

"Well?" Chesney was unmoved, and he even smiled. "Have you come racing home to tell me this? If so . . ."

"No!" Buddy rose to her feet. She was scarlet with excitement and trembling from head to foot. "I told the woman I knew her—the woman's name was Mrs. Jilly—and she talked as those sort of women always do. Dolores was there too, and she heard. Mrs. Jilly said that Jennifer was married and that she stayed at Porth last summer with her husband."

She waited dramatically, but Chesney only laughed.

"Rubbish!"

"It's not rubbish," Buddy's voice rose hysterically. "Dolores heard, and she will tell you too. It's not rubbish."

"Well, go on. Who was the man?"

Buddy hesitated. She seemed to be holding her secret for yet another moment in order to enjoy it to the full, then she hurled the name at him:

"It was Gaunt—Nicholas Gaunt."

"Gaunt!"

The crimson blood rushed in a wave to Chesney's brow and he clenched his hands.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE LOOK FOR A CURE-ALL.

(By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.)

In the good old days when chemistry was alchemy, astronomy was astrology, theology was mythology, and religion was mostly myth and magic, people looked for a cureall and believed it could be found. In this day of science we put very little confidence in the ancient pseudo-sciences and yet not a few still believe in a cure all.

The wishes and desires that induced a man to look for a cureall exist to-day in added strength and variety. It is the great human urge to master the forces of nature by a simple formula, a hokus-pokus method of getting what you want, a short-cut to health, happiness, and success.

Life is too complicated. Health rules are too many and terribly complex. And what is even worse they often go contrary to our desires. They require exercise, strain, and struggle.

The cureall would eliminate the necessity of careful living and rigorous dieting and other restraining methods. Mankind prefers to indulge all its wants and not pay the price, to get what it wants without sacrifice and toil.

What a boon it would be to know that we might dissipate all we pleased and then by taking a few pills could be restored to perfect health and vigor.

All patent medicines thrive on this human weakness for a cureall.

We look for a cureall because we are not willing to pay the price for our folly of reckless living and think we can find some way of defeating the inexorable law of cause and effect although we know from sad experience that it cannot be done.

We can believe in a cureall in a scientific age because this belief has very little to do with science or reasoning. It is essentially an emotional affair and the emotions know no reason. They are governed by imagination and desire alone.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

Five-days Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY AND SUSIE'S SALAD.

(Copyright, 1928, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Here is a note that just came for you, Uncle Wiggily," said Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy one afternoon just as the bunny rabbit gentleman was about to hop away from his hollow stump bungalow to go adventuring.

"A note for me?" exclaimed Mr. Longears. "I hope it isn't a trick by any of the bad chaps who hope to get me to go off alone in the woods so they can nibble my ears."

"You need have no fear of this note!" squeaked the muskrat lady housekeeper. "It was left by Sammie Littletail, who said his sister wrote it to you."

"Oh if the note is from Susie it must be all right," said Mr. Longears as he read the little letter, which was written on a piece of white birch bark with a black stick for a pen.

Uncle Wiggily sat down and began to eat.

"Dear Uncle Wiggily," Susie had written, "I wish you would come over to my house to tea this evening. I have learned how to make a salad, and I want you to eat some of it. Please come!"

"Indeed I shall!" exclaimed the rabbit gentleman. "I would hop a long way to eat some of Susie's salad."

"Susie must have been going to cooking school," said Nurse Jane. "I wonder whether she will make for you a lettuce salad or watercress or celery or which?"

"I don't like the which salad!" chuckled Mr. Longears. "I like lettuce salad best."

"Oh, hop along with you!" said Nurse Jane, laughing and tickling him with the end of the broomstick that she had taken out to dust the piano.

Well, having nothing special to do just then, Uncle Wiggily hopped toward Susie's house to try her new salad.

The little rabbit girl saw Mr. Longears coming when he was quite a distance away, on top of the hill, and Susie exclaimed:

"Oh, Uncle Wiggily will soon be here! I didn't expect him until evening. But it will be all right. I'll make my salad now."

"You had better go out in the garden and pick some fresh lettuce, my dear," said Mrs. Littletail. "Now do you best!"

"I'll make a lovely salad for Uncle Wiggily!" promised Susie. But she was so excited that when she gathered the lettuce from the garden she pulled up with it some pepper grass, which is very, very hot once it gets in your mouth. So, knowing nothing about the pepper grass in the lettuce she had picked, Susie made it all up into a salad, putting it in a deep dish on the table.

Pretty soon along hopped Uncle Wiggily, smiling and twinkling his pink nose, and he said:

"Well, Susie, I have come for my salad."

"It is all ready for you, please sit down," invited the rabbit child. So Uncle Wiggily sat down and began to eat the lettuce salad. But the first bite he took he got a mouth full of pepper grass and his tongue began to burn until tears came into his eyes.

Now Uncle Wiggily was brave and he was also kind. So when he found red hot pepper grass in his salad he was sure Susie had made a mistake and knew nothing about the burning stuff.

"If I make a fuss now and let her see tears in my eyes and call for water to cool my burning tongue," thought Mr. Longears, "it will make Susie feel badly, for she will think her salad is spoiled. So I must not cough or choke or drink water or shed any tears and I must pretend it is the most wonderful salad in the world!"

And that's what Uncle Wiggily bravely did. He swallowed the salad and the pepper grass and blinked back his tears, and when Susie asked him how he liked her salad, he said, slangily like, as did the boys:

"Hot stuff, Susie! Hot dog! Fine salad!"

"Oh, I'm so glad!" exclaimed Susie, clapping her paws. And she never knew that when Uncle Wiggily said "hot stuff!" he really meant it. For the bunny ate up every bit of Susie's salad, so there was none left for any one else to find out what a mistake she had made.

LYRICS OF LIFE

ALL SUDDENLY.

All suddenly I find myself
Looking across the windowsill,
Forgetting the rumble of the mill,
And all the books upon the shelf,
All suddenly I seem to be Looking at skies I never see,
The city shouting in my ear
A hundred things I never hear.

Yes, suddenly the world around
Drops from my shoulders like a cloak,
For suddenly it seemed you spoke,
A whisper louder than all sound.
All suddenly I stop and gaze
Not miles of earth but miles of days,
And leap the days and miles to you,
And wonder if you're thinking, too.

SAFETY COMMITTEE HEARS GOOD REPORT

No Time Lost In Deloro Plant in July Because of Accidents.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, Aug. 10.—Deloro Safety Committee met at the Hub on the evening of the 7th with R. A. Elliott presiding. Twenty suggestions were reported by W. Williams as having been received during the month. No lost time during July was the pleasing report given by R. Hunter.

The flag was awarded to the Silver Plant on the Man-Day basis and the Star is again retained by the General. R. Murray, in presenting the second part of the competitive Committee's report mentioned the award of prizes for eleven worthy suggestions. R Harris read the report of the Inspection Committee which showed that suggestions for minor improvements around the plants had been carried out. Mr. E. Hewitt was appointed floating member for August.

Mr. R. Southern told of practices given with the prone method of resuscitation in the Oxide Department and Mr. A. Mackenzie was appointed as the member to carry out same in the current month.

Mr. C. H. Buskard gave the monthly statement of the Benevolent Relief Board. W. R. Reynolds, chairman of the Publicity Committee spoke of the effort of his committee to dig up novel publicity and mentioned that a slogan contest would shortly be introduced.

Personals.

Mr. Wilson Grant, of Detroit, is spending two weeks' holiday at his home here.

Miss Hilda Thomson has received the appointment of teacher at Cordova Public school.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Loveless and family motored to Coe Hill on Monday to visit relatives there.

The members of Juvenile Orange Lodge No. 34 were the guests of Misses Nellie and Lily Davidson at a party which these young ladies gave at their home on Tuesday evening. Games, songs, and choice refreshments filled up a good program.

PARASITES CAUSE LOSS TO FARMERS

Raise Cost of Preparing For Market and Cause Many Deaths.

Parasites of all kinds have long been a serious detriment to the economical raising of live stock, fodder crops, fruits and vegetables, and in some cases have proved a serious menace to the health and life of man.

Unfortunately, the damage done by animal parasites is not restricted to the blood or food which they steal from their host. In a great many cases they are the agents by which diseases gain entry into the system. This, of course, is truer of those insects which actually pierce the skin, or as is the case of the intestinal parasites, some part of the internal organs. In addition to the above, which often proves fatal to the animal, it has been definitely proved that many parasites throw off poisons which are very harmful to the animal host.

Certain domestic animals, largely by reason of the conditions under which they are raised on the farm, their feeding habits, etc., are subject to parasites. Recent work by Dr. L. Stevenson, provincial zoologist, indicates that parasitic infestation of sheep and swins in this Province is widespread and general. He estimates that hogs are costing one cent a pound extra because of parasite infestation; and that practically all thin lambs marketed are in this condition because of parasites. In addition to these losses, many young pigs never reach market age and many mature ewes have years cut off their lives because of parasites.

Very few stockmen will tolerate having their animals infested with external parasites such as ticks and lice, yet these probably do a great deal less damage than the internal ones such as stomach worm, tape worm and lung worm. One reason, of course, is the fact that external parasites are easily seen and easily controlled, whereas internal parasites are hard to see at any time and seldom without an examination after the death of the animal. Internal parasites, however, do leave certain indication of their presence. These symptoms are not final because similar ones may be caused by other diseases. In general they form a fair guide, and as parasites are very common the symptoms should be treated as due to parasites first and other causes second. Unthriftiness is the first and most important symptom, and if it is combined with diarrhoea, a staring coat, coughing and a general appearance of listlessness and lack of vigor one is safe in saying that worms are present. A few thin lambs in a flock or one or two runty hogs in a litter are almost sure indications of the presence of worms. Runts are made, not born. A survey made in the State of Illinois showed an average of eighteen runts per hundred pigs. By introduction of control measures for parasites this was reduced to one per hundred. Of several thousand feeder lambs bought by packers last fall and fed over winter, 90 per cent. were infested with parasites and very few had improved in fleshing despite heavy feeding over winter.

Plan to attend the demonstration to be held at Scott's Corners on August 31, at 1 p.m. For further particulars see J. B. Nelson, agricultural representative.

District Churches

TRINITY UNITED CHURCH, MADOC

The congregation of Trinity United Church met in the main auditorium of the church for the first service since the re-decoration. An excellent attendance was noted despite the heavy and continued rain.

The Rev. Mr. River took charge of the morning service assisted by a former pastor, the Rev. Dr. Wilson, who occupied the pulpit of the church thirty-two years ago. Dr. Wilson took as his text, Matt. 11:29 and John 3-2. He spoke to an interested congregation on the mysteries of after life and said that with implicit trust in God all doubts and fears would vanish and a belief in the eminent satisfaction of whatever should be our lot, would take its place.

Two very beautiful solos were a feature of the service. Miss Lenore Vandervoort sang, "Abide With Me." At the close of the sermon, Miss Ida Bronson, former alto soliost of the choir, sang a very beautiful and appropriate message, "Just When I need Him Most, Jesus is Near."

At the evening service, the Rev. Mr. Rivers were assisted by the Rev. Mr. Wight, president of the Belleville Presbytery. Special music was prepared by the choir for both services. In the absence of Mrs. Ashley, the organist, George Maybee very ably took charge of the organ.

WHIRLPOOL CLAIMED WEBB 45 YEARS AGO

Noted Swimmer Was Drowned July 24, 1883, in Niagara River.

Men still occasionally brave the menace of the Niagara torrent and live to tell of their daring. But they use artificial aids. Either by barrel or rubber ball they preserve themselves from the foll force of the mighty river's fury.

Forty-five years ago there was attempted the feat which still stands unrivalled in the Niagara's annals of daring. Captain Matthew Webb, intrepid navigator and adventurer, backed himself to swim the Whirlpool Rapids without artificial aid. He lost his wager. During his lifetime in various parts of the world, he had cheated the waters of upwards of a dozen victims, whom he had rescued from drowning. He himself, furthermore, had bid bold defiance to a watery grave in his daring swim across the English Channel. Now, however, the waters had their long revenge. With all their force concentrated in the mighty whirpool, they prevailed over him and drew him to his death.

Project Widely Advertised.

On July 24, 1883, the name of Captain Webb was scarcely less known than that of Niagara Falls. At that time there was not the same sentiment as now exists against individuals risking their lives to accomplish feats of theatrical daring, and Webb's project was not only widely advertised, but also heavily capitalized. Transportation companies of the day even ran excursions to the place where the swim was to take place.

An old Niagara River ferryman rowed Webb out to the centre of the river and there gave him the last wise counsel which he received in life. He urged him to abandon the attempt. Webb, however, was obdurate. He plunged into the river and within eight minutes was apaprently through the worst of the waters. Then, however, the whirlpool caught him. With his face turned to the Canadian shore he was seen to raise his arms, and immediately was pulled beneath the surface.

A Colorful Figure.

Captain Webb was a colorful figure. The son of an English country doctor, he conceived his love for the water from reading Kingston's "Old Jack". As a sailor he served in the Chinese and Indian trades, and in 1875 turned his swimming prowess to account by becoming the first person to swim the English Channel unassisted.

Were he performing to-day he might find himself under peculiar handicaps with which he did not have to reckon in those days. It was before the time of restrictive liquor laws, and it is recorded that on long swims his principal articles of nourishment, given to him by his rowboat convoy, were cod liver oil, brandy and strong ale.

The Niagara River has been conquered some four times by as many adventurers since Captain Webb's day, but never in the decisive manner which he attempted. Mrs. Edson Taylor was the first woman to successfuly negotiate the Falls. She used a barrel of comparative frailty, the survival of which has been considered a miracle ever since. Bobby Leach in a barrel of glouter build was also successful several years later. In another manner, namely by slack wire, Dixon, a Toronto photographer, risked the dangers of beng plunged into the canyon. Balancing himself by means of a light pole, he had the good fortune combined with the necessary skill to survive. Only recently, finally, on the fourth of the present month, Jean Laussier, a French-Canadian, negotiated the Falls in a rubber ball.

FERTILIZER TESTS MADE ON POTATOES

Experimental Farm Finds Best Mixture for Growing Good Crop.

During the past five years an experiment has been running at the Dominion Experimental Farm, Nappan, N.S., testing various formulae applied in varying amounts to the potato crop. Applications of 1,000 to 1,500 and 2,000 pounds per acre of each of the following formulae were made, viz. 6-6-6, 5-6-6, 4-6-6, 3-6-6, 5-8-6, 4-8-6, 3-8-6, 3-8-6, 4-8-10, 4-8-8 and 4-8-4.

The soil on which this experiment is being carried on is a medium clay loam, with a very heavy clay subsoil and is of only fair natural fertility. The rotation is a three year one of potatoes, oats and hay, with the potato crop following a clover sod in each case.

All fertilisers were home mixed, half of the nitrogen being supplied in nitrate of soda and half in ammonium sulphate, the phosphoric acid in superphosphate and the potash in muriate of potash.

On this type of soil when the potato crop alone is considered, results indicate that the most profitable crops are obtained by using from 1,000 to 1,500 pounds per acre of a mixture not too high in nitrogen and medium to high in phosphoric acid and potash, such as a 3-6-6, 3-8-6, 4-8-8 or a 4-8 formulae.

When the oat and hay crops are taken into consideration, the heavier application, viz. 2,000 pounds per acre gave a considerable increase in yield over the lighter applications. As far as the potato crop is concerned, there seemed to be a little advantage in favor of the high percentage of potash in the 4-8-10 over the 3-8-6 or 4-8-6, due probably to the nature of the soil, but on light sandy loams for the potato crop it would probably be desirable to employ a fertilizer mixture containing 8 to 10 per cent of potash.

THE EVER POPULAR SQUARE PLAN

Molesworth, West & Secord, Architects.

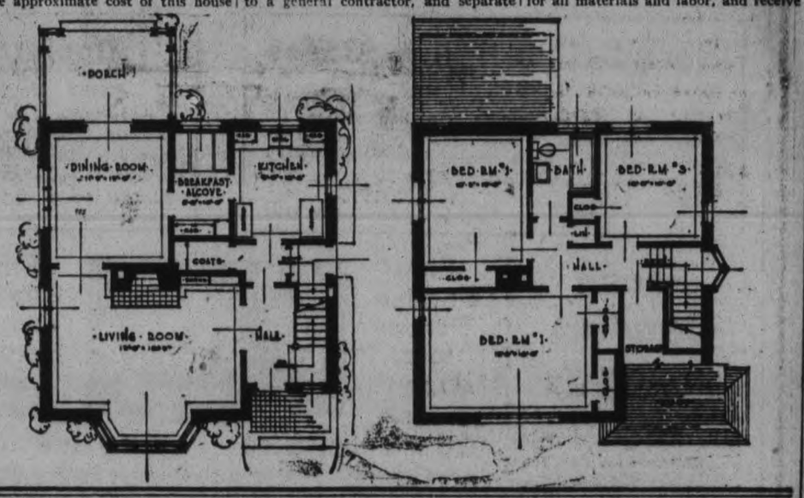
Here you see a very practical and economical design that is also most attractive and comfortable.

It is a square plan home, 28 by 28 feet, and the economical advantages of this type have already been sufficiently extolled in this series of home designs. But while four plain walls, each having the same length, are the utmost in one phase of economy as applied to a house, appearance is apt to suffer. In this case there are four things that combine together in an interesting transition process to create a charming effect. The front gable and the consequent pleasing roof lines of the entire house; the bay window with its roof extending to the window-sill on the floor above; the recessed front porch and the chic little two sided bay at the stair landing.

A point not always paid sufficient attention to is the direction a house shall face. When an architect designs a house for a known lot the whole design is contingent upon the compass position of the lot and also its contour. This home was built on a level lot and should face south.

The approximate cost of this house is $9,000 based on cubic contents of 22,250 cubic feet.

Readers desiring further information regarding a house of this design should communicate with Home Building Information Service, 345 Adelaide St. West, Toronto, Ont., who will see that it is supplied. When writing please mention Design No. 136. Copyright 1928.



CONTRACTS AND BEST WAY TO MAKE THEM

To whom and how to let a contract is such an important feature of building that prospective home builders may find helpful the following advice.

The contract for the finished house may be placed with a single contractor who will be responsible for the entire job. This is usually the most satisfactory way, for the contractor may be able to secure better terms and supervise the work more effectively than the home builder. Where a contract is let to a single contractor on a lump sum basis the owner knows at the start what the cost of the house will be, provided his plans are complete and he does not have to allow for extras.

Sometimes most of the work is let to a general contractor, and separate contracts are made by the owner for the lighting, heating, and plumbing equipments.

Occasionally the owner lets separate contracts for each part of the work and supervises it himself, but this procedure is usually unsatisfactory.

In selecting the contractor builders of a home frequently make the mistake of selecting some "very nice man," and assuming that he will build the house at the lowest possible figure. As a rule, it is best to obtain the names of several dependable contractors whose financial standing is good and take bids from these, in order to check against excessive costs. It is not necessary to accept the lowest bid, and it may be well worth while to pay a little more to a contractor who is dependable and has a reputation for good construction work to live up to. But it is not fair to ask bids from a contractor unless it is intended to give his bid reasonable consideration.

There are three main types of building contracts that are used in building work:

First: The contractor may be paid a lump sun for the work he undertakes.

Second: The contractor may be paid for all materials and labor, and receive in addition an agreed percentage of their cost.

Third: The contractor may be paid for materials and labor, and a fee for supervision fixed in advance.

The contract forms should be drawn up with strict attention to legal requirements and should be fair to both parties.—Copyright, 1925, The Architects' Small House Service Bureau.

SCHEDULE PLANES CUT JOURNEY'S TIME

San Francisco To New York is Thirty Hour Journey Now.

At nine in the morning, not long ago, a San Francisco business man hurried down the gangplank of a liner just docked in New York. He was racing home from abroad to the bedside of a close relative, critically ill. Twelve-fifteen, and he was on a mail plane leaving New Brunswick, N.J. And at four-thirty the next afternoon he was in San Francisco, having made in scarcely more than a day, a trip that takes four days by the fastest trains.

That was no specially arranged race between time— but the regular schedule, seven days a week, of two of the twenty or more air passenger lines operating today in the United States. Other time-tabled journeys by air are as speedy; and last year more than 8,000 persons saved time and money by traveling the air way.

Here are typical examples. From Seattle to San Francisco is an afternoon, overnight, and all-day trip on the "Cascade," crack train of the Southern Pacific Railroad. The rail trip costs $33, exclusive of extra fare required on this twenty-eight-hour train. For $55 you can board a West Coast Air Transport cabin airplane at Seattle, and arrive in San Francisco in less than eight hours after a trip of unparalleled scenic grandeur. Another line, the Pacific Air Transport, duplicates the trip and serves a buffet meal en route.

Los Angeles to Tucson, Arizona, is an $18.50 overnight or all-day trip by train across miles of burning country. Six-passenger Fokker monoplanes of the Aero Corporation of California make the journey in six hours at a fare of $40.

In the East in summer, the Colonial Air Transport adds to its regular New York-Boston mail route Fairchild cabin monoplanes for passengers. It charges $25 for the three-and-a-half hour voyage which would cost you eight dollars, plus extra fare, by a five-hour train.

From a thorough analysis of examples such as these, from every part of the country, several outstanding facts about air travel are apparent, writes George Lee Dowd, Jr., in the September issue of Popular Science Monthly. In general, it is nearly three times as fast as rail travel, and costs about two and a half times as much.

Short air trips are as practical as long ones; and every important stopping point along a through airline has "feeders" or local connecting lines that serve it.

FUNERAL EXHIBITS BEING DISMANTLED

Booths Have Been Taken Down, Leaving Armories Floor Bare.

Signs of the recent successful Funeral Directors' convention are fast disappearing from the city. Representatives of the various firms and the exhibitors were busy yesterday afternoon and this morning packing up their exhibits were busy getting them ready for shipment. Carpenters have taken down c... and there is nothing left inside the building but packing cases while many express wagons at the door are fast taking these away. The armouries now uresents a barren appearance.

FARMERS FACE RUIN IN VICTORIA COUNTY

Are Burning Alsike Ruined By Rain—Fear For Root Crop.

LINDSAY, Aug. 10.—The farmers of Victoria County are facing a serious situation as a result of the recent heavy rainfalls, and in some sections the crops are practically ruined.

In Ops and Mariposa townships many of the farmers are burning the alsike crops which were ruined by the heavy moisture. The wheat crop wa hard hit also, as the grain in the stooks began to grow afresh.

There is great fear that in some sections the root crop will fare badly because of the unusual heavy rainfall.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

WHAT is the hardest thing about housework? If this question were asked of you, a housewife, what would be your answer?

• • • • • • •

Perhaps you would say it is the monotony of the work, probably you might say it is the long hours, but I think, after considering the work of business men and women, the thing that makes housework hard is its endless variety.

• • • • • • •

The tasks a housewife is obliged to do may not be hard, but still there is that variety—going from one to another, with never a chance to get really absorbed in any one thing.

• • • • • • •

With other businesses and professions, the worker has time to concentrate on one thing perhaps, and the work becomes interesting. From concentration one is able to become expert at his business or profession, but this is not so with housework.

• • • • • • •

A farmer, just starting up, may have to start by raising many kinds of grain, besides raising horses, cows, chickens, fruit and so forth.

• • • • • • •

But the farmer who wants to make a success, looks ahead and plans for the time when he will be able to concentrate on one or two things—perhaps dairying, with fruit-growing as a side-line. But although the farmer becomes up-to-date and successful, still his wife has the endless variety of tasks.

• • • • • • •

Shehas to do the housework—wash, cook and mend for the family. Fruit must be canned in season to supply them during the long winter months, and often the farmer's wife is obliged to care for chickens and churn butter, besides other numerous tasks she is called upon to do.

• • • • • • •

Your work would be lightened somewhat, if instead of trying to do "two or three dozen" things in one day, you divided them.

• • • • • • •

Washing is generally done on Monday and the ironing on Tuesday, but if there is not a very big washing, the two could be done in one day. Then, if mending, canning and so on were done on separate days, the work would not be so tiring and not so monotonous.

• • • • • • •

At the same time, do not make the mistake of making your husband help with the housework. What I mean is—do not expect him to get up in the morning, dress the children, make the porridge and get the breakfast ready.

• • • • • • •

If this occurs only once in a while, he would do these things and enjoy them, but when it occurs every day and he simply has to do them, he doesn't like it at all. It becomes a responsibility.

• • • • • • •

Remember that a man often fails to be successful in business because he has had too many home responsibilities, while other business and professional men have succeeded in the world because they have been spared such responsibilities.

• • • • • • •

We have had so much rain lately, the showers sometimes coming without a moment's warning, that I am sure many felt hats have become spotted with the rain. If this is the case with yours, rub it over with fine wire wool until the nap is again raised. The spots will then have disappeared.

• • • • • • •

This is the preserving season, and many jars of fruit will be put away for winter use. Don't make the mistake of placing them in the light. Place them in a dark, cool place, as the light causes them to lose their color, and too much heat makes them go bad.

• • • • • • •

To remove ink stains from cotton goods, try using a raw potato as soon as the spot is discovered. Rub the potato well into the stain, then sponge the material with water.

• • • • • • •

If you neglected to make a new strawberry bed last May, it would be a good idea to do the work some time in August. These plants will give a better crop of fruit than plants set out the following spring.

• • • • • • •

On a very hot day last week, I was visiting at a home where jelly was served for desert, and although the housewife did not have a refrigerator, the jelly was well set. This is her secret: The bowl of jelly is placed in a pan of water to which has been added a handful of common salt and soda. The blue bag was squeezed into the water until it was a dark blue. This, she said, made an effective and rapid cooler.

• • • • • • •

When refilling a feather pillow, crush a small block of camphor and mix it with the feathers. This will help to preserve the feathers.

• • • • • • •

The other day blueberry muffins were mentioned in this column as being delicious, and since many requests have been made for the recipe, I am giving it to-day. Take 2 cupfuls of flour, ½ teaspoonful salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, 2 teaspoons baking powder, ¾ cupful milk, 1 tablespoonful butter, 2 eggs, 1 cupful blueberries. Sift dry ingredients, add milk slowly, then beaten eggs, butter and berries. Beat briskly, place in muffin tins, well greased, and bake in a moderate oven.

• • • • • • •

If you have a new hat that needs some kind of trimming, send for this week's help, which gives directions for two new trimming designs.

For shiny tailored suits, wet a thin piece of muslin in witch hazel and spread over shiny part; hold a hot iron over it till it steams; press on wrong side.

A paper bag fastened over the opening of the chopper with a rubber band, when grinding dry bread, etc., will prevent scattering of crumbs.

If It Sticks.

Sometimes a table pad is not satisfactory and leave lint sticking to the surface of the table. If this should occur, cover one side of the pad with thin muslin and keep that side towards the wood.

Just a Joke

HARD GOING

Wife: Oh, George, do you realize that it's almost a year since our honeymoon, and that glorious day we spent on the sands? I wonder how we will spend this one?

Husband: On the rocks.

A Tip or Two

For shiny serge suit, lay it on a folded blanket and place on shiny parts a clean cloth wrung from clean water (must be quite wet): iron across it lightly, with very hot iron, twice.

A peach in the hance-hall may be a lemon in the kitchen.

TRAVEL-LOG.

THE OLD FASHIONED GENTRY OF HOLLAND

The average tourist is apt to be obsessed with the peasant classes of Europe and permits cottage homes and peasant costumes too large a place in his interest in a new people. This is partly due to the fact that formal introductions are not needed to meet these humbler classes. I wish I could, however, have had a few friends with me recently when I was entertained by an old fashioned Jonkheer of Holland. His family was wealthy and highly educated, with a good knowledge of English, French and Italian literature, and an intimate appreciation of art and music. The day was spent in calls and driving after breakfast and in the afternoon. The ladies busied themselves among the rose arbors in the gardens and with embroidery work, where swans glided past amid the water lilies. As in England, we had a five o'clock tea and at dinner there were many fine Dutch dishes, including bouillon flavored with chervil, roast veal, partridge and French bon-bons, with cognac. I noticed that the lady of the house washed her own tea-cups and would not trust the task to the servants, and when I noted that they were of a porecilain which cost about fifteen dollars a piece, I knew the reason. With all there was the simplicity of true rank and nobility.

To remove shine from black cloth rub it well with a piece of flannel dipped in spirits of turpentine; dry in the open air.

Knights Lose 13-5 Decision To Electrics

C.G.E. STAGE RALLY IN 5TH TO WIN GAME

Knights Unable to Retain Early Lead of Three Runs.

TIGHT CONTEST

C.G.E. softball team last night defeated the Knights of Columbus by the uneven score of 13 to 5.

The game was hotly contested and until the fifth inning was anybody's victory.

The Knights fought hard, scoring two runs in the third and one in the fourth, but the batting rally which the winners staged in the fifth innings, and which netted them a total of eleven runs, seemed to take the fight out of the Knights and from then on till the end of the game the 'Electrics' were never very dangerously opposed.

Both Darling and Powell pitched nice ball, but the bunting, which seems to be the predominating mode of attack in most softball games, proved very disconcerting and led to many close decisions at first base. Richmond started for the C.G.E., but was rather erratic, being replaced by Powell in the fifth, who held the Knights to one lonely hit for the rest of the game.

First Innings.

C.G.E.—J. Jones struck out. F. Jones beat out a bunt and stole second. Playford walked. Frost popped to Ranger and Crary grounded to Clancy.

K. of C.—Logan flied out to F. Jones. R. Bennett was walked. Lew Lebarr's foul tip was grabbed by Dyer and Ted Lebarr was thrown out by Frost.

Second Innings.

Wilson was safe when he bunted, but was out at second when Mike Clancy took Dyer's grounder. Calladine flied to Murphy and Dyer was caught off first on the return throw.

K. of C.—Ahearn struck out. Clancy fouled to the catcher and Ranger whiffed to retire the side.

Third Innings.

Richmond was thrown out by Clancy. Lew Lebarr gathered in J. Jones fly, but Fred Jones was safe after another bunt. Playford popped to Lebarr.

K. of C.—Darling slapped out a hot grounder which was good for one base and Logan gained first on a bunt. R. Bennett struck out. L. Lebarr's single over third base put three on. Ted Lebarr sent a long fly into left field which F. Jones fumbled, scoring Darling and Logan. Ahearn fanned. Lew Lebarr ended the frame in an attempt to steal home.

Fourth Innings.

Frost tapped a fly to Ranger. Crary flied to Lebarr. Wilson reached first on a bunt and Dyer was thrown out by Ranger.

K. of C.—Murphy sent a long hit over third base which was good for two bases, Clancy to Crary. Ranger was safe when Crary tangled with Wilson, sending Murphy to third. Darling flied to F. Jones, scoring Murphy. Logan was passed. R. Bennet fouled to Frost.

Fifth Innings.

Calladine grounded past Ranger and Powell's single put two on. J. Jones bunted, moving up the runners to load the bases. F. Jones lined out a grounder to first and was out, but Calladine scored, Playford to Clancy. With two out the C.G.E. starting a walloping match that sent over eleven counters and at the end of the innings, which terminated by Frost hitting to L. Lebarr, the score stood twelve to three.

K. of C.—L. Lebarr fouled to Dyer. The next two batters, E. Lebarr and Ahearn tapped out safe bunts which were wasted when Playford gathered in Clancy's high fly.

Sixth Innings.

Crary to Ranger. Wilson sent a fly to L. Lebarr who missed it, being good for two bases. Dyer sacrificed and Wilson stole home. Calladine to Lebarr.

K. of C.—Ranger hit over second base. Darling popped to Frost. Logan bunted safely. Crary took the two high flies from Bennett and Lebarr.

Seventh Innings.

Powell was out on a fly. J. Jones' foul tip to catcher made two out. F. Jones bunted and Crary flied to Murphy.

K. of C. — Lebarr to Playford. Ahearn bunted safely, going to third on an overthrow. Murphy was passed. Clancy's drive over third base was nipped by F. Jones. Ahearn scoring and Murphy was out on an attempt to steal.

Eighth Innings.

Frost to Bennett. Crary was thrown out by Ranger and Wilson by Clancy.

K. of C.—Ranger flied to Wilson. Darling bunted. Logan popped to Wilson also and Bennett fouled to Dyer.

Ninth Innings.

Dyer was out when he bunted. Calladine to Ranger, while a foul tip put Powell away.

K. of C.—L. Lebarr lined one out to Calladine, who made a great catch. T. Lebarr to Playford, and Ahearn was thrown out by Crary.

Score by innings:

Grumblings of officials in charge of the Canadian Olympic team, heard over refusal to allow Canadians the same practice privileges as the United States, the Hester incident, and the bumping of Little by Otto Peltzer in an 800 metre heat increased to a veritable roar when Elizabeth Robinson of the United States was placed in front of Fanny Rosenfeld, shown above. Canadian officials saw Miss Rosenfeld get to the front in the final few strides and four placing judges canvassed by Canadians, saw it the same way. The Canadian manager at once lodged a protest, which was disallowed.

ARGENTINA IS CHAMP SWIMMER

Succeeds Johnny Weissmuller, Who Defaulted His Title Without Competition.

AT AMSTERDAM

AMSTERDAM, Aug 10 (Canadian Press).—Albert Zorrilla of Argentina emerged triumphant yesterday in the 400 metres swim, considered the blue-ribbon event of the Olympic water sports because it demands of the victor both speed and endurance.

The graceful South American speedster succeeded as champion to Johnny Weissmuller of the United States, who defaulted his title without competing.

The women's 200 metre breast stroke was won by Fraulein Schrader of Germany, with Marie Baron of Holland in second place.

George Kojac of New York captured the 100 metre back-stroke final, and mermaids from the United States won the women's 400 metre relay championship.

Helen Meaney, George Coleman and Dorothy Poynton of the United States won the first three places in the women's springboard diving.

Canada and Great Britain both qualified for the finals in the 800 metre relay yesterday, the Canucks winning their heat with Britain second. The United States also qualified.

Olympic records again went by the board yesterday with monotonous regularity. Kojas created both a world's and Olympic mark of 1.08 1-5 for the 100 metres backstroke; the girls shattered the Olympic records for the 400 metre relay with 4.47 3-5; and Zorilla, the Argentine, placed the Olympic 400 metre free-style mark at 5.01 3-5.

Zorilla had to beat out Arne Borg, the "Swedish Hurricane" and favorite, and Andrew Charlton, the Australian strong boy, to win his brilliant victory.

The South American appeared to be the most surprised person in the swimming stadium after he had won.

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.— (Canadian Press).—Richard Mullin of Chicago and Tom Cooley of Kanakee, Ills., yester won their way into the finals of the Western junior golf championship at Glenview and will meet over 36 holes for the title tomorrow.

Mullin defeated Bob Stewart, Chicago six and five. Cooley eliminated Paul Jackson, Kansas City, 3 and 2.

PIRATES WIN FROM CARDS

Pittsburgh's Victory Over St. Louis Lessens Birds' League Lead.

BY 5 TO 4 COUNT

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—(Canadian Press).—The Pirates returned home from the east to defeat the Cardinals 5 to 4 for the eighth straight Pittsburgh triumph, which shaved the lead of the Red Birds over the Giants to four games.

Frank Frisch hit a home run with one on in the seventh, bringing the score to its final status, but the Cardinals fought to the end. Taylor Douthit doubled with two out in the ninth, but Burleigh Grimes rushed to the aid of Carmen Hill and caused Holm to roll to Adams, who made a fine stop.

The Pirates greeted Jesse Haines with a shower of three runs in the first and forced him to retire in favor of Arthur Reinhart with none out in the fourth after two more markers had been added or placed on base. The victory gave the Pirates a record of twenty four games won in their last thirty one.

LEADERS WIN LEAGUE GAMES

Yankees and Athletics Putting Up Hard Battle in Pennant Race.

NEW YORKERS IN LEAD

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—(Canadian Press).— The Athletics maintained their rapid pace in the pennant race yesterday when they defeated the Senators by 8 to 3 in the first Philadelphia home game since the victorious sweep of the Mackmen through the west. The Athletics failed to gain as the Yankees defeated the Red Sox at Boston, 7 to 1.

Al Simmon's twelfth home run, hit off Garland Braxton the star Washington southpaw, with the bases filled in the sixth, decided the issue in favor of Howard Ehmke. This drive put the Athletics into a lead which Washington never closed. Braxton was pounded for one more run in the seventh, and three were added in the eighth off Burke.

Ehmke allowed the visitors just three hits, and seldom was in any real danger, although the Senators had a lead of one when Simmons broke up the game.

Fred Heimach, St. Paul recruit, held the Red Six to four hits in his debut as a Yankee yesterday afternoon while the champions pounded Ed. Morris and Burney Griffin for a 7 to 1 victory. The success enabled the Yankees to cling to their lead of four and one half games.

The lone Boston run came in the first inning on two passes, Ken. Williams' single and Regan's sacrifice fly. Every New York run was made in the sixth when Morris was knocked out of the box with none out.

Heimach was with the Athletics and the Red Sox before going to St. Paul two ears ago. He fanned eight men yesterday and walked only two. Two of the four hits off his delivery were scratchy.

BUFFALO WINS TWO CONTESTS

Shuts Out Jersey City Twice To Win Series, Four to Two.

ORIOLES HIT HEAVILY.

JERSEY CITY, N.J., Aug. 10.—Buffalo and Jersey City played their third double-header in as many days here yesterday afternoon, and the Bisons won both games, taking the series, four games to two. Both were shut-outs, the first coming to the Herd by 3 to 0, and the second, 4 to 0.

Art. Mills, former Brave, held the Skeeters to seven hits, three of them fashioned by Jimmy Walsh in the opener, and Proffitt, a southpaw, did even better in yielding only two singles i nthe second game. Bill Kelley's hitting won the first game. He tripled to left field with Moore and Elliott on base in the fourth. With only five pitchers to work with, Manager Gilhooley had to start Shustler, a semi-pro. in the second game, and the Herd dropped on him in the second inning for three runs to win.

Orioles Wallop Royals

BALTIMORE, Aug. 10.—The Baltimore Orioles got back into their hitting stride yesterday to gather 17 safeties off the offerings of Thormahlen and Hopkins to swamp the Montreal Royals, 13 to 3, taking the edge in the series, two games to one.

The locals had one big inning, the fourth, in which they scored six runs.

Coumbe and Cantrell kept the Royals' eight hits well scattered, with the exception of the fifth inning, when all of the visitors' scoring was accomplished.

The Orioles were aided by six misplays on the part of the Royals, while Coumbe and Cantrell were given perfect support in the field.

Reading Beaten

READING, Pa., Aug. 10.—Reading lost the final game of the series to Rochester yesterday, 5 to 3. Socks Seibold was on the hill for Reading, and lost his fourth of the season against 16 victories. Seibold was wild, walking ten batters. He forced in the winning run in the eighth inning, when with the bases filled he walked Gelbert.

OUTLAWS WIN EXCITING GAME

Beat St. Andrew's in Match Marked By Mix-ups and Mishaps.

FINAL SCORE 17-14.

(Examiner Staff Correspondent.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 10.— Every player was anxious to do his level best to make his team win when the second game of the semi-finals was played last night between the St. Andrews and Outlaws teams. The game was fifteen minutes late in starting and had to be called on account of darkness when St. Andrews were one run up with the Outlaws batting, one man down and two men on bases. Everything worked smoothly till the last half of the ninth when Leo Bush, Outlaw catcher, received injuries to his left leg which necessitated his immediate removal to where medical aid was forthcoming. There were no doctors on the sidelines. Lambert from left field subbed for Bush till the end of the innings and game. DeCarrol for St. Andrews, took his first batting but refused to take his place when his team went into the field. They were forced to continue the game one man short. Even the manager took a hand and played right field.

The Outlaws began the game with only sight men. Bailey for St. Andrews took the field in order to fill up his line-up, but when DeCarroll would not take his place at first base, the Churchmen, too, were one man short of their regulation nine.

In the second frame, Maybee fumbled a grounder and thus allowed the batter to get to first, bases full. McArthur struck out but a run came in when the catcher fumbled. The Outlaws batted out of their proper order and the game had to be interrupted to straighten out the tangle. In the third, Bailey was the only Churchman to get to first base and the Outlaws pulled down five runs after two men were out. In the fourth, Maybee struck out the first two batters, but Sarginson got to first when the catcher muffed the third strike He was caught between third and the plate.

St. Andrews got three runs in the first part of the fifth and were leading by one run, when the Outlaws came up and got a four run lead. In the sixth, St. Andrews got three hits and no runs, while the Outlaws got only one hit and the runner did not pass first. The seventh innings saw things getting a little livelier. Blue, St. Andrews, the second batter up, hit a home run to centre field. Ingram arrived in time to take his position in that field for the Outlaws. St. Andrews thought they could do without a third baseman, but when Massie and Lambert had a foot race from second to third and Lambert won, they changed their minds and took a man from the field.

In the eighth, McArthur's run tied the score and the Outlaws took the bit in their teeth. Flint, their first batter, clouted a homer to centre field and when the frame was complete, the Outlaws were still leading by three runs. McArthur was doomed to tie the score again when his hit brought Massie in with the necessary run. Blue hit and made a homer on errors. In his zest he almost overran McArthur, who was only a few feet ahead of him and losing ground at every jump. Leo Bush, catcher, was knocked down in the rush and was injured so as to be taken from the field to a doctor in a motor car. Lambert subbed for him till the umpires called the game on account of darkness. The score was counted till the end of the eighth innings.

This victory for the Outlaws wins for them the privilege of meeting the Clerks on Monday night for the championship of the league. For two consecutive years, the counter hoppers have been champions and the game on Monday will be the nearest approach to real softball that has been seen this season. The game will start sharp at 6.15 p.m. and will be a full nine innings.

Teams:

St. Andrews — J. Storie, p.; W. Blue, c.; A. Little, 1b.; C. Massie, 2b.; C. McArthur, 3b.; P. Bland, s.f.; G. Bailey, r.f.; C. Irwin, l.f.

VIEWS ON SPORTS

Cogs and Crescents clash in E. P. L. sudden death game at Exhibition Park to-night. Game will be called at 8.30 sharp.

Harrison and Teco meet to-night in what promises to be one of the hottest fixtures played here this season in the City Softball League. In the early part of the season these two teams battled for twenty innings to break a tie, and given half a chance they can be relied upon to put up a stiff battle to-night.

* * * * * *

The Knights went down to another defeat last night when they lost a 13-5 count to the C.G.E. Both teams played tight ball up to the fifth inning, when the Electric boys staged a rally that netted them eleven runs, against which the onslaught of the Clubmen proved futile.

Two more Canadians were added to the elimination list of the Olympic boxing tournament at Amsterdam yesterday, which leaves Ray Smillie, Toronto welterweight, as Canada's sole representative in the tourney. The defeat of Don. Carrick proved quite a surprise, as he was counted on as one of the heavy favorites on the Canadian team. Vincent Glionna, bantam, also joined the list of the vanquished.

* * * * * *

Many new champions were declared and Olympic records broken in the sports meets. Albert Zorrilla is holder of the 400 metres swim honors as successor to Johnny Weissmuller, of the United States, who defaulted his title without competing. Zorrilla had to beat out Arne Borg, the "Swedish Hurricane" and favorite, and Andrew Charitob, the Australian strong boy, to win his title.

The Cardinals had their lead over the New York entry in the National League brought down to four games yesterday by the Pirates' victory over the Red Birds. Pittsburgh now has a record of twenty-four games won in their last thirty-one.

RAY SMILLIE WINS AGAIN

Toronto Welterweight, Canada's Only Representative in Olympic Boxing Tourney.

CARRICK WAS FAVORITE

AMSTERDAM, August 10 (By W. H. Ingram, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent). — Ray Smillie, Toronto welterweight, who has won three straight battles, remains Canada's only representative in the Olympic boxing tourney.

To the four previously defeated Canadian boxers yesterday were added two more—Don. Carrick of Toronto, light-heavyweight and Canadian amateur golf champion, and Vincent Glionna, Toronto bantam.

While Smillie was winning over Usuda of Japan yesterday, Don Carrick lost the decision to the heavy-hitting Avendano, of the Argentine, and Glionna was outpointed by Isaacs of South Africa.

The defeat of Carrick was one of the upsets of the tourney, the big Canadian being a favorite for the light-heavy title. He fought gamely and boxed scientifically, but the aggressive slugging of the Argentine piled up a winning margin of points.

Isaacs, of South Africa, landed many solid blows on the Toronto bantam to take the decision from Glionna, though Glionna put up a good fight and much of the time forced the pace.

Smillie disposed of a clever opponent when he put away Usuda of Japan. The Canadian was on the offensive throughout though the Japanese man appeared practically as good as the Canadian and fought aggressively. Both were tired at the end of the three rounds.

CITY BASEBALL LEAGUE CONCLUDE SUCCESSFUL YEAR

Officials of League Thank Different Organizations for Their Support.

THREE CHAMPIONSHIPS

The City Baseball League have just concluded a most successful year with three championships awarded to Riley and Hickey in the bantam group (sponsored by Riley and Hickey, Men's Clothiers); Kiwanis in the juvenile group (sponsored by the Kiwanis club of Peterborough), and the Royals in the junior group (sponsored by the All Saints' Athletic club.

The officials of the league wish to publicly thank the following firms, organizations and men for their generous support given by them during the season.
